LAUNCH MOVE TO BLOT OUT FREIBERG HALL

Woman's City Club Leaders Start Circulation of Petitions.

DEMAND MAYOR ACT

Churches Today Will Urge Vice Citadel's License Be Revoked.

Two big cleanup movements—one directed at the levee police and the other at the gateway of the vice district—were put under headway yesterday.

1. The Woman's City club opened war upon Freiberg's notorious dance hall, the citadel of organized vice in the Twenty-second street district. Petitions addressed to Mayor Harrison, demanding that he revoke the license of Freiberg's, were prepared by the women and will be put in circulation in Chicago churches this morning.

2. The civil service commission launched its investigation of the relation between the police and protected vice. It had prepared charges against Capt. Michael Ryan, until a few days ago in command of the levee police, but the captain resigned before the charges could be put on record. Charges, however, were registered against Lieuts. Michael T. Morrissey, John J. McMahon, and James P. Allman. They were at once suspended by Chief Gleason.

Shelter for Ousted Girls.

Miss Harriet E. Vittum, civic director of the Woman's City club, announced the club would provide shelter and care for any women left without means of livelihood by the closing of Freiberg's and other levee resorts.

"This is a movement in behalf of society and for humanity's sake," she said. "We want to prevent it causing hardship to any of the unfortunate women of the district."

Miss Vittum also said the club would welcome volunteers to aid in the circulation of the petitions. She defined the terms and the spirit of the movement.

Sees Public Problem.

"The problem of Freiberg's, the Twenty-second street problem, the vice problem, is a public problem," said Miss Vittum. "The patrolmen, the lieutenants, the captains, or any of the officials who may be put on trial are not responsible except in a minor degree.

"Freiberg's has been in existence for nearly twenty years and everybody has known about it. Public complaisance or indifference has permitted it to exist along with other abuses.

"Society has been and is to blame. The community really is responsible.

"The mayor to whom this petition is addressed may be believed to be very generally executing the will of the people.

"Now we want the people to express their will about Freiberg's.

"Then the mayor will know what to do."

First Ward Dukedom.

Miss Vittum's attention was turned to the question of public service involved in relation to the First ward dukedom.

"Yes," she said, "it is unfortunate that political success means that the servants of the public must spend so much time and so much effort holding office rather than efficiently filling it.

"All of that, too, is more largely a matter for the concern of public conscience.

"The papers have carried headlines saying, 'Freiberg's Defies Police.' Now just how and why can Freiberg's defy the police or any one else?

"The question answers itself.

"The people of Chicago can close Freiberg's.

"It has been the boast about the district that 'nobody can close Freiberg's'—but I believe that while perhaps nobody can, 'everybody' can."

Ask Revoking of License.

We, the undersigned citizens of Chicago, believing that a sufficient number of investigations have been made, and sufficient evidence gathered, to prove that Freiberg's dance hall is the most notorious and defiance offender against the law which you, as mayor, have sworn to defend, and, believing that if you were to close Freiberg's dance hall at this time you would, by so doing, deal a stinging blow to commercialized vice in the Twenty-second street district, do hereby respectfully petition that you revoke at once the license of Freiberg's dance hall and saloon, and we pledge you in return the thanks of the citizens who would see their city clean.

DEATH KNELL FOR FLY SOUNDED BY UNCLE SAM.

Borax, Sprinkled on Refuse, Robs Swatter of Job, Department of Agriculture Finds.

Washington, D. C., July 25.—Discovery of an effectual method for preventing the breeding of the common household and typhoid fly, and thereby assuring the complete extermination of this species of insect, was announced today by the department of agriculture. The simplicity of the method, consisting only of the sprinkling of a small amount of ordinary borax daily upon household and stable refuse, is said to guarantee its success and greatly reduce the number of diseases originating from the germ carrying fly.

His son-in-law, Djelal Ferid Bey, who represents the khedive at Constantinople and was with him at the time, was slightly wounded in one leg.

The khedive's assailant, Mahmud Muzaffer, an Egyptian, was shot down by a member of the khedive's suite.

DROP JEWELS IN MELTING POT

MRS. M'CORMICK FIRST.

Chicago Woman Strips Off Bracelets to Boost Campaign for $50,000 Fund.

The souvenir spoons with the pictures of Niagara Falls engraved on them are to be utilized at last. So are the gold and silver thimbles that were given by grandmother to instill thrift in the growing young girl.

The baby rings, the golden snake bracelets, the napkin rings, in fact, all of the gold and silver trinkets that women will part with are to be thrust into the campaign to raise $50,000 for suffrage by Aug. 15.

The "call to the melting pot" was issued yesterday throughout the entire country. An appeal was made for women who have saved silver cups in memory of children who have died to throw them into the pot to be melted and used for the cause of woman suffrage and better laws for children. The thought is that this may help thousands of girls in industry from the greed of exploiters of girls, from the sweatshops, and from the slums.

Convert Into Bullion.

Every state in the union is to have a melting pot, and the suffragists of the state will take or send their trinkets to it. Then, after Aug. 15, the campaign committee plans to have the gold and silver converted into bullion and expended in the seven states voting on suffrage this fall.

This appeal is said to be the first of the kind ever issued in the history of suffrage. It was signed by Dr. Anna Howard Shaw, president of the National American Woman's Suffrage association; Mrs. Medill McCormick, chairman of the campaign committee, and their associates.

The first contribution in Illinois was made by Mrs. Medill McCormick. She dropped into the melting pot all of the bracelets she has. She is going to add every bit of gold jewelry which she possesses with the exception of her wedding ring. She will also add a large gold nugget, presented to her in 1896 by the national Republican committee, following the McKinley presidential campaign.

Large melting pots, about two feet high, will be distributed this week throughout the states.

Here Is the Call.

The call for the melting pot reads:

"Women of America, generations ago a country stood in need. Her treasure chests were empty. It was a time of stress and peril. In her hour of extremity the women of the land were called upon to give their ornaments of gold.

"And as the women have always responded to an appeal for help, so they responded then, and the tokens that were given in exchange by a grateful government are today patents of honor and patriotism to the women of the race.

"We call upon you today in an hour of need.

"We call upon you to give from your treasure store of precious metal, from your keepsakes of gold and silver, that in the suffrage campaign states where women are making a stand for political equality they shall not fail because the treasury is empty.

"Among your personal possessions there is something you can give, something you can consecrate, perhaps a little silver cup kept for love of some child. Every three minutes a baby dies in this land of ours from some preventable disease or from improper food. Give the little cup, that the mother wisdom of the country may express itself directly through wise, sane laws for the good of children.

Aid Sweatshop Girls.

"If the thimble of your girlhood is among your keepsakes send it with thought for the thousands of young girls exploited by greed, unprotected by law, in the hot sweatshops of the city slums.

"Don't be lulled into a false sense of security by the prevailing notion that 'suffrage is sure to come.' Suffrage is sure to come, but it cannot come this year, in the face of the forces arrayed against it, unless the women of this country show by their response that they are determined to have it.

Put It in the Pot!

"A little of what you treasure, an ornament of beauty, a tribute of friendship, something prized because of its place in household life or as evidence of your thrift—put it in the melting pot.

Send it to the suffrage campaign committee in the City Hall Square building at Chicago for in the two Dakotas, in Montana and Nevada, in Nebraska and Missouri and Ohio, women from the homes, the schools, the factories, and places of commerce are fighting for their civic rights against organized greed, organized vice, and those forces which stand in the path of progress."

Gary, Ind., July 25.—[Special.]—The new $2,000,000 steam-driven slab mill of the Illinois Steel company was placed in operation today. It can roll twenty-five ton ingots. Heat that formerly escaped from open hearth stacks furnishes 20,000 horsepower for the mill.

AUSTRIA AND SERVIA BREAK; TROOPS MOVE

MARTIAL LAW IN HUNGARY; WAR IN SIGHT?

Vienna Public and Military Officials Predict Strife.

SERB DELAY DENIED

Conflict, if It Comes, May Involve Several Powers of Europe.

BULLETIN.

ST. PETERSBURG, July 25.—The mobilization of the Russian army will proceed immediately. The emperor has approved the decision of his ministers to this effect.

[BY CABLE TO THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE.]

VIENNA, July 25.—The controversy between Austria-Hungary and Servia has reached a crisis out of which may be born one of the greatest wars Europe ever has experienced.

Late tonight diplomatic relations between the two countries were formally broken off and martial law throughout the Austro-Hungarian empire was declared.

EFFECT OF MARTIAL LAW.

An official communication issued late tonight points out that the foreign situation has assumed a development which makes regard for military necessities the supreme law. It proclaims a series of ordinances applicable to the whole empire, including Hungary.

These ordinances include the transfer of the civil administration of Bosnia, Herzegovina, and Dalmatia to the commander in chief; the suspension throughout the empire of the constitutional laws on liberty of assembly, of private correspondence, of the press; the suppression of juries, the restriction of the issue of passports, the submission of civilians accused of reprehensible acts against the army to military jurisdiction; the partial prohibition of the export and import of products; the enforcement of military jurisdiction generally, and the closing of the provincial diets and the reichsrath.

The communication trusts that all Austro-Hungarian subjects will appreciate the grave necessity which compels the government in the exercise of a heavy responsibility to take exceptional measures.

ORDER STRICT CENSORSHIP.

The public generally and many connected with the military branch of the government regard war as almost a certainty.

If a clash between Austria-Hungary and Servia comes, it will involve Russia and Germany in a conflict which is likely to affect nearly every other power on the continent.

Immediately following advices received here that the Austro-Hungarian minister had left Belgrade, the Servian minister and his staff took their departure from this city.

Reports, which army officials would not deny, were current tonight that partial mobilization of the Austrian army had been ordered.

Right on top of the breaking of diplomatic relations a Budapest dispatch via Berlin says that Gen. Radomir Putnik, chief of the general staff of the Servian army, has been arrested by the Hungarian military authorities while he was on the way from Styria, in Austria, to Belgrade.

DELAYED ITS ANSWER.

The Servian government waited until the last moment left it by the terms of the Austrian note demanding an apology, and only ten minutes before the hour of 6 o'clock, when the Austro-Hungarian ultimatum expired, did the Servian premier appear at the legation and present his government's reply to the Austrian minister, Baron Giesl von Gieslingen.

No details of the tenor of the reply have been revealed here, but the terse statement was made that it was "unsatisfactory."

Servia had asked that the time limit for its reply to Austria's demands be extended. This Austria refused.

Developments in European Crisis.

Martial law declared throughout the Austro-Hungarian Empire.

Gen. Putrick, chief of general staff of Servian army, arrested by Hungarian military authorities.

Servia seeks delay in reply to ultimatum until parliament convenes.

Kaiser leaves Bergen, Norway, for Berlin, as result of war scare; all divisions of German fleet ordered to assemble on Norwegian coast.

Austrian troops on the move and twenty-two warships assemble in Bay of Cattaro.

Russia said to be prepared to go to any extreme rather than tolerate downfall of Servia.

Germany approves Austrian note and is determined to fulfill its obligations to Austria under terms of the Triple Alliance.

It is understood Servia sought the delay in order that the Servian parliament, which has been summoned to an extraordinary session tomorrow, could be consulted by the cabinet.

Immediately upon receiving the note the Austrian minister informed the foreign office, and diplomatic relations were broken off. With his family and staff he then left on a train which had been held in readiness for him, as an unfavorable reply to the Austrian demands had been expected.

SERB ARMY MOBILIZING.

According to newspaper messages received here the mobilization of the Servian army was ordered at 3 o'clock in the afternoon.

King Peter, who had hurriedly returned to Belgrade when the Austrian ultimatum was announced, left the capital this evening on a special train with the principal members of the government, in the realization that the Austrians could capture Belgrade without difficulty.

The temporary seat of the government will be established at Kraguyevatz.

VIENNA HOTBED OF WAR.

The portentous news of Servia's decision was made known to the public by extra editions of the evening papers, and at 8 o'clock tonight half the population of the city seemed to be on the streets.

They fought eagerly for the papers, and processions were formed which marched through all the thoroughfares, singing national hymns and cheering for Emperor Francis Joseph, Emperor William and the army.

CONFER ON STEPS TO TAKE.

Count von Berchthold, the Austro-Hungarian minister of foreign affairs, visited Ischl early in the afternoon and had a long audience with the emperor.

Later he conferred with the minister of war, Gen. Krobatin, and the emperor's chief military adviser, Gen. Baron Bolfras von Ahnenburg, and the minister of finance.

Count von Berchthold had another audience at 7 o'clock with the emperor, to whom he communicated the Servian note.

A high official of the Austro-Hungarian foreign office made the following statement tonight:

"Should Servia at this stage of affairs take military measures against Austria, every penny of the cost of Austrian mobilization will have to be paid by Servia."

WANT BIG WAR OR NONE.

No surprise was caused here by the communication published in the Official Journal of the Russian government, stating that the St. Petersburg government was seriously preoccupied by the ultimatum addressed to Servia by Austria-Hungary and that Russia could not remain indifferent to the dispute.

It was inferred from this communication that the localization of a possible war would be prevented by Russia.

Press reports as to the attitude of the Servian government are contradictory.

They state that Servian officers regard the conditions laid down by Austria as dishonorable, but that the better class of Servians appears afraid and thinks Servia could not stand a third war in so short a time.

ALL STATE RECORDS MOVED TO SAFETY.

BELGRADE, July 25.—All the safes containing the state archives and funds of the various banks were removed to the interior of the country today for safety.

The cabinet was in constant session, under the presidency of the crown prince, who is acting as regent of the kingdom.

PARLIAMENT MEETS TODAY.

The election of members of the Servian parliament has been postponed and the members of the old parliament have been ordered to meet in special session tomorrow to discuss the situation between Austria and Servia.

The Servian press in its comments is divided in opinion, some of the newspapers demanding the refusal of and others compliance with the Austrian government's demands.

SERBS SEEK NO WAR.

The government newspaper Samouprava publishes the following, which is generally accepted as indicating the tenor of Servia's reply to Austria:

Servia desires sincere and correct neighborly relations with the dual monarchy. Convinced of the necessity of maintaining such relations, the Servian government will readily comply with all the demands of Austria-Hungary which will serve to suppress all criminal acts, manifestations, and disorders in neighboring countries.

Because the Servian government considers it is thereby fulfilling the obvious duty of a civilized state the government will in all sincerity do everything possible to prove its intense desire for friendly relations with the dual monarchy.

BULGARIA NEUTRAL; AWAITING RESULTS.

SOFIA, July 25.—Servia's announcement of policy is awaited impatiently. The cabinet met today to consider the situation. Bulgaria's attitude is neutral, but events will be awaited with anxiety as to how they may affect Bulgaria's interests.

RUSSIAN ARMY MAY MOBILIZE AT ONCE.

ST. PETERSBURG, July 25.—Orders for the prompt mobilization of the Russian army are looked for as a result of the calling of the council of ministers, presided over by the emperor of Russia and held at the palace of Peterhof.

GERMAN FLEET IS ASSEMBLED; BERLIN WILD

Kaiser Rushes Home from Bergen, Norway, as War Looms.

CROWDS FILL STREETS

[BY CABLE TO THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE.]

BERLIN, July 25.—The German emperor left Bergen, Norway, today for Berlin as a result of the serious situation that has cropped up between Austria and Servia.

All the divisions of the German fleet have been ordered to assemble at prearranged places on the Norwegian coast.

One of the high naval officers, who accompanied the emperor, has started for Germany on board the fastest destroyer.

WAR FEVER GRIPS BERLIN.

Cries of "Down with Russia!" resound tonight in Unter den Linden, where vast throngs of excited thousands are moving from the imperial palace down through the Branderburger gate to the famous avenue of Victory around the column of Victory, which is largely composed of French cannon captured in 1870. This is faced by huge statues of Prince Bismarck, Field Marshal von Moltke, and Field Marshal von Roon.

The immense crowds are singing "The Watch on the Rhine," "Deutschland Ueber Alles," and the German and Austrian national hymns.

"DOWN WITH RUSSIA!" CRY.

In front of the Russian embassy on Unter den Linden there are constant shouts of "Down with Russia," while across the street and almost opposite there are jeers at the French embassy.

The police are trying to keep the crowds constantly moving. The most enthusiastic demonstrations were in front of the Austrian embassy, near the reichstag building. Three German general staff officers who passed near by were nearly mobbed by the enthusiastic people, who insisted on shaking their hands.

In front of the palace of the crown prince, who is reported to have returned to the capital tonight, a tremendous throng gathered toward midnight shouting for Crown Prince Frederick William. The excitement was augmented by reports that the kaiser had abruptly ended his Norwegian cruise and had started for Berlin tonight.

SEE RUSS-GERMAN WAR.

The popular and general impression is that hostilities between Austria and Servia will be only the commencement of war between the former and Russia, which will inevitably involve Germany.

This feeling found expression in tonight's demonstrations, which were largely against Russia. France came in second, and there were hardly any at all against Servia. Few people believe Servia would hardly have taken the attitude it has if Russia had not promised to support it.

SOCIALISTS DECRY WAR.

The Socialists have issued a call for a meeting for July 28, their watchword being "Down with war," but their efforts tonight were completely eclipsed by the martial demonstrations.

The news from Vienna and Belgrade was rapidly circulated. The crowds mishandled representatives of the Vorwarts, who were selling printed calls for anti-war meetings on July 28 so that they soon disappeared from the scene.

CROWD IS ORDERLY.

At midnight tonight two immense portraits of the kaiser and Emperor Francis Joseph were carried at the head of an increasing crowd with startling military orderliness on the part of the huge multitude. The singing of battle songs was punctuated with "hochs" for the kaiser and the emperor of Austria.

There were not many workingmen about, and those who were met by the manifestants refused to take off their hats despite threats made against them by the crowd.

The line of march covered the entire downtown district and the procession gave promise of lasting with undiminished enthusiasm until daylight.

Reports from Hamburg tell the same story of patriotic demonstrations as are witnessed here.

PREPARING FOR FUTURE.

The imperial chancellor Dr. Von Bethmann-Hollweg, returned to Berlin tonight. The lighted windows of the chancellor's palace and the offices of the general staff showed that preparations were going on for all eventualities.

The impression in diplomatic circles here is that the European situation is the gravest since 1870. All eyes are turned to St. Petersburg, and even among the most optimistic there is no confidence that war will be averted.

FRENCHMEN LEAVE BERLIN.

French residents, who are in close touch with the embassy, are making preparations to return to France for possible service.

Information received late tonight from a quarter in the confidence of the German embassy at St. Petersburg, declares that the first desire to settle the controversy through diplomatic means is giving place to a decided war spirit and insistence that Servia be supported in every way.

FRANCE IS WAITING MOVE BY RUSSIA.

PARIS, July 25.—France waits on Russia in the Austro-Servian conflict. The foreign office said tonight the situation was grave, but not desperate.

The impression seemed to exist among French government officials that the complete diplomatic rupture between Austria and Servia would not necessarily mean immediate war.

President Poincare and Premier Viviani will not, according to the present plans, shorten their Scandinavian visit.

Deny Deal in Advance.

A semi-official note says:

"Advices from authorized sources show that there was no concerted arrangement in advance between Austria and Germany respecting the communication to Servia.

"Germany confines itself to approving this note, which had not the character of an ultimatum, but constituted a request for a reply within a certain limit of time.

"Austria's attitude has been incorrectly construed as implying a menace. The note must be interpreted only as an indication.

"It is desirable that any disagreement between Austria and Servia remain localized."

Talk of General War.

The possibility of a general European war is commented upon extensively by the French press.

"If Europe wants peace Servia must be conquered," declares the newspaper Autorite. It further expresses the hope that the government will take note of "the German menace and support its ally, Russia, for the national honor and even in the interests of European peace."

The Republique Française counsels the government to play its rôle firmly but with calmness and adds:

"We are called upon to intervene not as mediators but as belligerents with all our forces. Honor, interest and respect for conventions make it an imperious obligation."

EUROPE BUYS GOLD ON YANKEE MARKET.

New York, July 25.—[Special.]—The effect of the crisis in the near east was felt in New York today in a lower stock market and reflected in the engagement of $3,600,000 in gold bars for Europe and the promise that probably $5,000,000 additional will be sent to Europe on Tuesday's steamer. All this goes to France, which since the first of the year has taken the bulk of the $82,320,000 in gold exported from this port, including the $2,500,000 which left on the Philadelphia Friday.

In preparation for what now seems to be a certainty of war, Europe has been a large seller of stocks here in the last fortnight, and these certificates have begun to arrive.

Recalls Balkan Crisis.

The selling duplicates that begun two years ago this autumn when it began to appear certain that war could no longer be averted in the Balkans. At that time American securities were the most salable and reams of certificates were sent back to the United States in exchange for gold. In the time that since elapsed foreign bankers estimate that $1,000,000,000 in American securities have been returned here.

Thus far this year the exports of gold to Europe have been far above the normal, the total of $89,921,000 shipped or engaged to be shipped on Tuesday being in excess of the shipments of every year since 1909, when New York completed paying the big loans it had secured in the panic year of 1908 except one, that of 1910, when those payments were completed.

1914 to Set a Record?

In 1909 even with the payments made on account of loans in the previous year, but $88,799,000 in American gold coin or bullion was exported. In 1910 this rose to $114,000,000. The following year, however, saw a drop to $21,000,000. In 1912 the total jumped to $53,000,000, and last year to $78,000,000, or only $13,000,000 less than has been exported thus far in little more than six months of 1914.

All those large shipments have not been on account of war preparations, but that has been the impelling reason why Europe in the last two years has been buying gold here when foreign exchange ruled at a price that did not permit of profitable export of gold under the usual conditions.

ALL EUROPE IS "IN ON" CRISIS

GERMAN FATE WAVERS.

For the third time in the last five years the two great groups of European powers—the triple alliance and the triple entente—stand face to face with the obvious possibility that war may result from the clash of rival purposes. Today Russia, France, and Great Britain are in one camp, Austria and Italy in the other, and between the two lies the old question of European balance of power.

In 1909, when Austria annexed Bosnia, France, Great Britain, and Russia protested. The annexation was, in fact, an express violation of the agreement made in the congress of Berlin after the Russo-Turkish war. It not merely increased the territory of the triple alliance, but it extinguished the hope of a little Slav state racially, politically, and religiously related to Russia.

Germany Springs Coup.

At the critical moment in 1909 Germany appeared "in shining armor," declared for Austrian purposes, and threw her sword into the balance. Russia and her allies were unready for war and were compelled to accept the crushing and humiliating defeat—but the consequences of the defeat were manifold. From that hour began Russian intriguing in the Balkans to promote that unity which was presently to destroy Turkey.

In 1911, when Germany sent her warships to Agadir, the two groups came into collision again. In 1909 Germany had threatened Russia; in 1911 she menaced France, demanding as the price of recognition of a French protectorate in Morocco huge territorial grants for herself. But this time the triple entente was less compliant. British fleets assembled, Russian armies were mobilized, and finally David Lloyd-George, chancellor of the exchequer, made the memorable speech which amounted to a warning to Germany that England stood with France.

Germany Pays Dearly.

Then it was Germany's turn to yield, as it had been Russia's in 1909. Some territorial gain she did make in the swamps of the Ubanghi, but Morocco became French, German prestige was terribly shaken, and the passionate resentment of the German people has found expression ever since in the press and in the utterances of many of her public men.

The defeat of the triple alliance in Morocco was quickly followed by disasters more serious. Italy went to the Tripoli, and, in making war upon Turkey, attacked a power regarded in Germany as an ally, whose army, German trained, was confidently expected to stand with the triple alliance on the great day of European conflict.

Block Austrian Outlet.

Defeated by Italy Turkey was next compelled to face the alliance of the Balkan states, whose union was the direct product of Russian diplomacy. With the victories of Lule Burgas, Kumanovo, and Jenidje-Vardar the Turkish power in Europe collapsed and the small Balkan states, increased by great territorial gain, stood on Austria's southern frontier, barring her road to the Aegean, and in the case of Servia threatening to play the rôle on the Danube that Sardinia had played on the Po and united the southern Slavs as Sardinia united Italy.

To prevent this Austria resorted to desperate tactics. Like Germany, she had expected a Turkish victory and the turn of fortune found her unprepared. Toward Servia she adopted bullying tactics. To break up the Balkan alliance, which was in fact a Russian creation and an adjunct of the triple entente, she promoted the dissension among the aBikan allies, which resulted in the second war.

Austria Wrong Again.

But again Austria backed the wrong horse. Not only was Bulgaria defeated and Servia still further increased in territory and in prestige, but Austrian support for Bulgaria had alienated Roumania, hitherto the steadfast friend of the triple alliance, and precisely as the Servians began to dream of regaining Bosnia and Herzegovnia, Roumania cast envious eyes on the millions of Roumanians in Hungary.

Meantime as the situation of Austria had been compromised abroad, it was weakened at home. Half the population of the dual monarchy in Slav, but the ruling races are German and Magyar. Austrian bullying of Servia provoked protest, riot, disorder, at home. In Bohemia, Croatia, and Galicia, Slav populations protested in vain, but found cause for hope and enthusiasm in the triumph of the Serb.

Alliance Is Weakened.

Only one diplomatic triumph Austria brought home in her campaign. Servian aspirations for a "window on the sea" were thwarted and the Albanian kingdom was created. But no sooner had it been created than the rival ambitions of Italy and Austria began to clash, and European observers forecast a quarrel between Austria and Italy such as Schleswig-Holstein provoked between Germany and Austria.

Thus on the edge of the present crisis the triple alliance found itself in a badly weakened condition. Austria on her southern boundary was confronted with Serb and Roumanian armies, whose fighting capacity was proven, whose national aspirations would be promoted by Austrian disruption. Greece, too, excluded from north Epirus by Italy, had been driven to the entente and possessed a fleet and an army to be reckoned with.

German Temper Wedge.

It is the German temper which makes the present crisis serious. At the time of the Bosnian clash no nation in Europe desired war, and only Germany was ready. At the moment of the Moroccan dispute Germany backed down because she found France, England, and Russia ready and the possible gain incommensurate with the possible loss a great war might bring.

Today a very considerable faction of German official life believes that only by war can Germany maintain her predominance in Europe, and that a few years more of peace will leave her far behind Russia in strength, in resources, and in allies. Today she can count on Austria and probably Italy. Tomorrow Austria may have fallen apart, but Russia, England, and France are not likely to grow weaker.

The challenge Austria has issued to Russia, then, is Germany's challenge.

CROWN PRINCE OF SERVIA

COUNT LEOPOLD VON BERCHTHOLD

The Austrian foreign minister, Count von Berchtold, has gone to Ischl to consult the emperor, who remains there because of the intense heat in Vienna. The crown prince of Servia is giving his influence to the side of unyielding opposition to Austrian demands.

SERVIA BALKS; WAR LOOMS UP

PRESS WARLIKE IN TONE.

Many of the newspapers of the Russian capital today demand the immediate mobilization of the Russian army on the Austrian frontier.

The Bourse Gazette declares that Russia "cannot for a moment tolerate any attack on Servia or on Servian independence."

The newspaper adds that Russia, while not wanting war, "will not flinch from armed intervention to protect the Slav from German fury."

CALLS AUSTRIA DISTURBER.

The Novoe Vremya says:

"The Russian government clearly recognizes that the Austrian ultimatum is particularly directed against it, and Russia is replying not only by words but by the requisite action.

"Servia is being subjected to an unlawful attack and will not remain alone. The disturbers of the peace will have not to deal with Servia only but also with Russia. Unless the Austrian ultimatum is withdrawn Russia will not remain a silent spectator of violence."

COUNSELS AGAINST WAR.

The Retch, on the other hand, says:

"Our allies hitherto have been in nowise disposed to enter into conflicts arising out of complications in the near east, and our English friends already are giving the prudent advice to give way.

RUSSIA READY FOR STRIFE.

Concerning the meeting yesterday of the council of ministers the Novoe Vremya tonight in an article headed "On the Eve of Events," says that after explanations had been made to the ministers by Foreign Minister Sazonoff, the minister of war, Gen. Soukhomlinoff, made a long, detailed, vigorous speech with the object of showing the complete military readiness of Russia.

AUSTRIAN TROOPS MOVE ON BORDER.

CETTINJE, Montenegro, July 25.—Austrian troops were on the move today in the vicinity of Ragusa, Dalmatia, and twenty-two Austrian warships had assembled in the bay of Cattaro.

Official circles here interpreted these movements as meaning that if Austria went to war with Servia she would attempt to seize Mount Lovchen, overlooking Cattaro.

ITALY FOR PEACE, DEPUTY ASSERTS.

ROME, July 25.—Andrea Torre, a member of the chamber of deputies, who has close relations with high officials of the Italian government, in a statement in the Corriere Della Sera, says:

"If Italy had known of the Austrian note it certainly would neither have counseled nor approved it."

BRITAIN LEANING TOWARD AUSTRIA

Sentiment Justifies Dual Monarchy in Checking Pan-Slav Movement.

SEEKS TO HOLD ALOOF.

The darkest war cloud which has appeared on the European horizon since Germany sent warships to Agadir in 1911 has arisen within forty-eight hours.

The Servian government has refused to comply with Austria's demands, the most humiliating ever asked of an independent nation, for the expiation of the Sarayevo murders, for which Austria holds anti-Austrian conspiracies in Servia responsible, and for guarantees of future good behavior.

At 5:30 o'clock tonight, when the Austro-Hungarian ultimatum expired, the Servian premier handed Servia's reply to the Austrian minister at Belgrade. The minister immediately severed diplomatic relations and started for home.

Text of Note Secret.

The contents of the note have not been revealed, but the Servian legation in London understands that it accepted some of Austria's conditions and rejected others. Apparently Austria was resolved to have the whole bill paid or nothing.

The vital question to Europe is whether Russia will come to the rescue of her little Slav brother, involving the other powers and making of the war a dread struggle of Slav against Teuton for European supremacy.

Reports from St. Petersburg say that the Russian army is mobilizing, but it is to be remembered that Russia mobilized several corps when Austria annexed Bosnia and the German emperor, stepping to the side of his ally, put a veto on Russian intervention.

Both Armies Mobilizing.

Austria and Servia are both mobilizing, but the silence of all the dispatches on the subject of military preparations indicates clearly that an ironclad censorship has been established in both countries.

Servia's refusal to humiliate itself to the extent its big neighbor had dictated was not unexpected. The Serbs have been proud since their success in the late Balkan war and the government which yielded to such demands as Austria's could not last; even the dynasty would be imperiled.

Servia's little ally, Montenegro, seems determined to cast its lot with its cousin in war.

Austria Seizes Opportunity.

Servian partisans abroad advance the theory that Austria has made up her mind to dispose of her neighbor, which has long been a thorn in her side, and has chosen to strike a decisive blow at a moment when the nations of the triple entente are handicapped by home troubles—Russia with a great strike, France with a political upheaval, and Great Britain with a threatened civil war in Ulster.

Britain Leans to Austria.

As far as opinion can be gathered, sentiment here tends towards Austria. This is based on the belief that Servian intrigues for undermining Austria by a pan-Slav movement have been so open that no nation could tolerate them, and in the present exuberant state of Servia's national pride only the sharpest and most peremptory measures could have any effect.

One result of the sudden threat of international complications is to thrust Ireland from the center of the stage. It may even force the British factions to a compromise which even the king could not accomplish, and a general election under the present circumstances appears out of the question.

The Rt. Hon. Sir John A. Simon, attorney general, referring in a speech at Manchester tonight to the European situation, said:

"It should be resolved that any part that Great Britain plays shall from the beginning to the end be the part of mediator singly desirous of promoting better and more peaceful relations."

Will the Slavs and Teutons Clash?

The assassination of the Crown Prince of Austria and his morganatic wife on June 28 and the subsequent Austrian belief that the plot was hatched in Belgrade, Servia's capital, crystallized the feeling in Austria's government that Servia was sowing the seeds of disorder with the purpose of breaking off from the Empire a section of Slavic people.

Austria demanded that Servia officially and publicly disavow and repress this movement, giving forty-eight hours.

Servia yesterday made a reply which was unsatisfactory to Austria. Thus the matter becomes a crisis, and the armies are mobilizing.

Germany as head of the triple alliance will support Austria and resist any aggressive move of Russia.

France is an ally of Russia, but wishes no war. Hopeful the trouble will remain localized.

Great Britain's sentiment is strongly for peace. Allied to Russia and France by the triple entente, but has sympathy just now for Austria.

The marchers traversed the principal streets of the city and their demonstration, the boldest exhibition of Orange strength yet attempted in the home rule struggle, aroused great enthusiasm.

BOYS FLY KITES FOR TROPHIES

STARTLE AUSTINITES.

Residents of Austin who gazed aloft yesterday morning thought at first that Chicago was being visited by a large fleet of aeroplanes. A closer observation convinced them, however, that the "attacking force" was comprised of nothing more harmful than a large number of kites on a prairie at Augusta street and Laramie avenue to match skill in flying "heavier than air" contrivances.

The occasion was the first kite contest ever held in Chicago. The meet was held under the auspices of the Austin Community of the Y. M. C. A., and the contestants ranged from 9 to 14 years in age. Blue, red, and white ribbons were awarded the winners in each event.

The first event was a tug of war in which kites were matched against each other. The strings of two kites would be fastened together and placed on a pulley. The stronger kite would soar higher and higher and gradually drag its rival to the ground. William Hilliard won the blue ribbon in this event. Abert Arm was second, and the white ribbon went to Edward Boberg.

Flights for distance were won by Howard Peterson, whose kite soared 2,800 feet.

Hammondsport, N. Y., July 25.—Lieut. John C. Porte will not attempt to fly across the Atlantic until Oct. 1. This decision was reached today as the result of a conference between Glenn H. Curtiss, Lieut. Porte, and Will Gash, personal representative of Rodman Wanamaker.

Mr. Curtiss said that while it was possible to reassemble the machine and rush it to New York in time for the steamer sailing for Newfoundland on Aug. 1, it was advisable to take time to rebuild the machine properly after yesterday's accident, and to make changes suggested by the experiments of the last month.

He added the boat had been so weakened by the rapid temporary alterations and continued storms that it would be unfair to Lieut. Porte, as well as to the entire project, to endanger success by an ill prepared start.

Licensed to Wed in Buffalo.

Buffalo, N. Y., July 25.—[Special.]—Robert O. Friewald and Maude J. Clayton, both of Oak Park, a Chicago suburb, secured a marriage license here this afternoon.

STRIKERS SEVER LIGHT CIRCUITS; STREETS DARK

ELUDE THE POLICE

Large areas of the city were thrown into darkness last night by the breaking of light and power wires from the sanitary district plant following a strike of a number of linemen and operators.

The police received reports of the cutting of light wires from various parts of the city served by the sanitary district. The interruptions of the service were particularly persistent in Hyde Park and Woodlawn. A large number of lights on the North Side also were put out of service.

The men on strike are members of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, local No. 9. They walked out at noon. Reserve men were immediately called in by the district officials and the service was not seriously hampered.

Vague as to Reasons.

Union officials would give only vague reasons for the walkout. It was said at the offices of the sanitary district, however, that the strike was called because an open shop is being maintained in the maintenance department, while the construction department employs only union men.

According to John McGillen, chief clerk of the district, a new business agent in the union is responsible.

Some of the strikers made threats as they left the plant, it was said, and the police were notified to be on the lookout for trouble. John F. O'Neil, chief of the police force of the sanitary district, however, asserted he did not expect any serious violence.

"There are some men whom the district employs that are experts in their line," said Mr. McGillen. "They are not union men. Their places could not be filled from among the ranks of the unions, because they are specialists in their lines."

There are no union operatives at the substation, it is declared.

Conditions Not "Favorable."

Luther Fee, secretary of the local, said that the strike was called because working conditions at the plant were "unfavorable."

"Was there any dissatisfaction with wages or hours?" he was asked.

"Well, I won't say," he said. "We shall make a statement on Monday."

According to some of the officials of the district the trouble arose over the repairing of a 44,000 voltage line between Chicago and Lockport. This work always has been done by the maintenance department, it is said, and the union is declared to have demanded the work be turned over to its members exclusively. The grievance was presented to the drainage board, it is said, and the matter referred to the labor committee. Two meetings of this committee were called, but a quorum was lacking at each.

MRS. FLAVELLE IN CHICAGO, GAINING STRENGTH FAST.

Chicago Woman Unaware Bullet Still Is in Head—Thinks Illness Is Result of Railway Accident.

Mrs. Mary E. Flavelle, who was shot while en route from Florence to Assisi, in Italy, on May 21, returned to Chicago yesterday. Mrs. Flavelle is unaware of the fact that a bullet still is lodged near the base of her brain. She believes that her indisposition is due to a railway accident.

Dr. Frederick Noyes, at whose home in Park Ridge Mrs. Flavelle is staying, asserts she is gaining rapidly, and that a marked improvement has been noticeable since her return to America.

The shooting occurred in a railway carriage while it was passing through a tunnel near Arezzo. Pietro Rossi, an art student, confessed to the shooting two days after the affair, and will be tried next October. Robbery was his motive. The Italian press bitterly attacked the police authorities at the time of the assault for permitting the train to continue on its way without examining the other passengers after the attack.

DENIES APOLOGIZING TO COP

Nelson Morris Aggrieved Over Report as to Reason for Nonsuiting Case Against Him.

Nelson Morris of 4800 Drexel boulevard is aggrieved at the published report that he apologized to a policeman. Mr. Morris was arrested on a charge of resisting an officer by refusing to move his automobile. When his case came up in court Mr. Morris was absent. The charge was nonsuited. Municipal Judge Sabath laughingly asked the policeman if Mr. Morris had apologized.

Attorney N. G. Collins, counsel for Mr. Morris, said the policeman said "No." The city prosecutor said he did not hear the policeman say anything. The clerk of the court said he thought the policeman said "Yes."

Mr. Morris maintains that he could not have apologized to the policeman because he has been in Green Lake, Wis., for a week.

David Stanich, who was ordered locked up by Municipal Judge Ryan Friday after he had asserted he would rather go to jail for life than pay Peter Delitch a grocery bill of $57, had not changed his mind yesterday. His attorney said he will start habeas corpus proceedings. It was erroneously reported Delitch was the defendant, whereas he was the complainant.

Clerk Held for Postal Thefts.

Samuel Carey, a clerk employed in the distributing room of the main postoffice, was arrested yesterday on a charge of having stolen more than $400 worth of merchandise by rifling parcel post packages during the last three months.

EDITOR BOWMAN ROARS, DEFIES

"I Dare Col. Foreman and Whole Regiment to Come," He Says.

GIVES OFFICE HOURS.

Editor Albert H. Bowman of the Evanston Daily News yesterday iterated and reiterated, declared and defied, roared and reverberated in a new broadside concerning "hogs unawares" and the First cavalry, I. N. G.

Editor Bowman stands by his guns, also reloads them, on his paper's assertion that the cavalrymen left their Evanston camping ground littered with "filth, rubbish, débris, and dirt."

In editorial measure, double leaded, and bold faced, the Evanston Daily News issued a general challenge and announced the office hours of the editor.

In burning six cylinder phrases Editor Bowman added oral fire to his challenges.

"Closed Incident"—Foreman.

All of which was put up to Col. Milton J. Foreman as he sat at the Cavalry armory engaged with affairs military.

"There will be no more statements. The matter is a closed incident, sir," he declared with impatient politeness.

But the colonel cut the interviewer short before the full import of the flaming challenge from Evanston could be imparted to him. Perhaps there will be answer yet when the colonel receives the Evanston Daily News of Saturday.

Some hours later when the full flavor of the challenge was tasted at the armory Capt. F. I. Schwengel telephoned to THE TRIBUNE.

"Capt. A. E. McEvers and I will call on Mr. Bowman at his office at the time he has designated," said the captain. "Also we have letters and documentary evidence of the clean condition of the camp."

Gives His Office Hours.

In his editorial Mr. Bowman discusses calls made at his office by officers of the cavalry regiment and their failure to find him; also what he construed as an inference in THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE that Editor Bowman was conveniently "out."

"Let us say right here that Mr. Bowman may be found at his office in Evanston any day from 9 o'clock to 10 o'clock in the morning and from 4 o'clock to 5 o'clock in the afternoon," the editorial announces. "Further than that, Mr. Bowman will make a point of being at his office Monday morning from 9 o'clock until noon so that no one will have any difficulty at all in finding him.

"As to the editorial in condemnation of the dirty conditions, we wish to say now as emphatically as we can say it, there will be no retraction. There will be no contradiction. There will be no withdrawal. We were right in our strictures, and they will stand. As for a lawsuit, we will welcome one. We will be glad to go into court, and the sooner the summons is served the happier we will be."

Grounds Found Clean.

A reporter for THE TRIBUNE met Mr. Bowman on the street, whereupon he was moved to further utterance.

"I dare Col. Foreman to come out," he said. "He can come and bring a whole company of militia with him if he wants to. I know the whole history of his public service in Chicago from the time he was alderman. I am convinced he is the biggest bluffer in Chicago."

Boom! Boom!!

WIFE SPURNS CHICAGOAN; SLAIN IN A STORE WINDOW.

Martin Johnson Flees After Crime in Duluth, but Is Captured and Roughly Handled by Mob.

Duluth, Minn., July 25.—[Special.]—Enraged because she spurned an amicable adjustment of their differences, Martin Johnson of 806 Belmont avenue, Chicago, tonight shot and killed his wife, Mrs. Lettie Johnson. He was overtaken after running two blocks by a mob of 500 persons. The police rescued him.

At the time of the tragedy the woman, who was employed as a demonstrator, was sitting in the window of a drug store. Johnson had followed her to Duluth from Chicago to effect a reconciliation.

A clerk heard him ask his wife to leave the store and talk over a settlement. He ordered Johnson to leave when the woman refused. Johnson drew a pistol. The clerk ran into the street and yelled for help. When the crowd gathered the woman was dying.

After Johnson had been placed in the patrol wagon the crowd fought to get at him, and climbed on the steps of the car. His clothing was torn to shreds and his lips and face cut from the attacks.

NEGROES BOYCOTT BANQUET.

"Jim Crow" Table Angers Colored Postal Employes at Evanston Mailmen's Dinner.

The banquet of postal clerks in Evanston in honor of the new postmaster George Taylor, was preceded yesterday with a bit of dispute over the advisability of recognizing or ignoring the color line. After a protest from seven negroes in the organization had been met by a refusal of the committee of arrangements to alter its plans, the negroes refused to attend the banquet. A table set aside for them exclusively at the Avenue house was unoccupied last night. About 100 clerks of the Evanston postoffice attended the banquet.

Anna Bohn Is Champion Long Time, Nonsmiling Admirer of Own Features in Mirror at Picnic.

Until yesterday Anna Bohn of 4101 West Palmer avenue had no greater distinction than being a first class hand at making button holes. Yesterday she won the title of champion mirror gazer in a contest with twenty-one other young women.

Miss Bohn gazed squarely at herself in a mirror for sixteen minutes and four seconds without smiling, while hundreds of friends and spectators laughed, jeered, and joked with her in an effort to make the dimples come. Her nearest competitor collapsed in less than one minute.

The unique contest was staged at the annual outing of the 2,000 employés of Ed V. Price & Co. in Dellwood park, near Joliet. Winners of other prizes were Miss Jessie Neggely, Miss Irene Hayward, Clarence Thielde, Walter Kamberg, Henry Chura, John Cervenka, and A. G. Thorsen. MAN UNDER ANÆSTHETIC DIES AFTER DOCTOR FLEES.

Physician, Threatened, Said to Have Left Patient with Dislocated Jaw in Grip of Chloroform.

Michael Pulut is a butcher, accustomed to early retiring. There was company in Pulut's home at 3724 South Hermitage avenue last night and the company stayed late. About 11 o'clock he was vanquished by a tremendous yawn and found himself unable to close his mouth again.

Dr. L. J. Witkowski was summoned and declared he would have to give Pulut chloroform.

The physician administered an anæsthetic. Pulut immediately slumped out of his chair, and Dr. Witkowski tried in vain to revive him. Then relatives began to threaten Witkowski and it is said he fled. A pulmotor crew worked for an hour over Pulut. Then he died. The police are looking for Dr. Witkowski.

Waitresses Arrested Twice.

Sixteen striking waitresses were arrested, six of them twice, yesterday in front of several loop restaurants owned by George Knab and taken to the South Clark street station. They are charged with loitering and obstructing sidewalks.

WOMAN CARRYING $935 FORGETS WHERE SHE LIVES.

Policeman Finds Mrs. Paulina Glon Wandering in Street and Restores Her to Son.

Mrs. Paulina Glon, 1501 Dickson street, who was found by Barney Czapski, a west park policeman, wandering at West Madison street and Oakley avenue Thursday night, was restored to her home yesterday. When found she had $23.65 in a handbag, $207 in one of two baskets packed with clothing, and $605 in the pockets of her skirt.

She remembered her name, but not her address. She thought she lived on Noble street. Policeman Czapski succeeded in finding Thoney Glon, a son of the woman.

"MAN OVERBOARD!" CRY; BOATS SEARCH IN VAIN.

Three Lake Vessels Carrying Picnic Halted When Some One Gives Alarm, Apparently False.

Employés of the Western Electric company were returning from the company's annual picnic at Michigan City yesterday on a fleet of lake steamers. At 7:30 o'clock in the evening, when the boats, steaming abreast, were about three miles off the Chicago shore, the cry "Man overboard!" went up from passengers on the United States. The steamers lay to and boats were lowered, but no drowning man was found.

SPENCER'S WIFE, "DEAD," IS FOUND

One of Two Henry Said He Slew Denies That He Killed Her.

BUT HE GOT HER CASH.

One of the two wives whom Henry Spencer claimed to have murdered has been found. Nellie Koenig of 1102 Longwood avenue, in the Bronx, New York, has shattered another one of the many "confessions" made by the man who will pay for the murder of Mrs. Mildred Allison Rexroat with his life on the gallows in Wheaton next Friday.

Mrs. Rexroat was found slain last September. Spencer was captured on Oct. 6. That night he made a "confession," saying that he had murdered nineteen persons. He said he had been married four times and that he had slain two of his wives. One of these, he said, was a maid employed by Helen Gould. He said he killed her in the woods near Fort Montgomery, just outside of West Point, and robbed her of $300 and $800 worth of diamonds. Later he contradicted himself. He said the woman was employed at the Martha Washington hotel, where he was working at the time as a porter.

He Took Her Money.

A few days ago Judge Slusser, before whom Spencer was tried, received the following letter:

"Dear Sir: I read in the papers about a Henry Spencer. A man of his description married me Sept. 10, 1903, by the pastor, Lee M. Battie. I was then 21 years old, and my name Nellie. My father lives in the Bronx and always has lived in the Bronx.

"By his description I think he is the man I married, for at the time I was a maid in the Martha Washington hotel and he a porter. But he claimed he put me to death at West Point not long after, but instead he left me three days after and took all the money I had.

Then She Spurns Him.

"I had not heard from him until two years and nine months after. I heard by letter and he wanted to meet me, but I did not go. I heard the second time, pleading for me to come back, which I did not do. He said he had just come out of Sing Sing and he would explain matters to me when he saw me. I paid no attention to him until it came up in the papers.

"I have my marriage papers, his pictures, and his handwriting, and he married me under the name of Henry Skarupa. I forgot to mention he had a slight turn in his eye and was a man 35 years old.

"If you would write and let me know if this is the man that I think is my husband you would relieve my mind a great deal."

And Now She's Glad.

Judge Slusser turned the letter over to Sheriff A. A. Kuhn of Du Page county. The latter questioned Spencer. He admitted that his surname, before it was lost beneath a series of aliases, was Skarupa. Sheriff Kuhn wrote the woman to forward Spencer's picture. She did so, inclosing it in the following brief note:

"Dear Sir: Your letter I have received and am glad to hear that Henry Spencer is the man. Dear sir, let me know if it is necessary to go out and see him. Inclosed you will find his picture taken eleven years ago."

Sheriff Kuhn showed the picture to Spencer. He admitted he married the woman and then robbed her.

Definite word was received from Springfield yesterday that Gov. Dunne would not interfere in the case, and preparations were made for the hanging. At the governor's request three alienists examined Spencer and pronounced him sane.

Advice Wanted
From the Residents of the South Side

We desire your advice as to the most beautiful and artistic plan for laying out "CHATHAM FIELDS," the 150 acre tract at 79th Street and Cottage Grove Avenue, which we are about to develop.

We are anxious to convert this body of land into a home district as nearly ideal as we can possibly make it, bearing in mind certain local conditions.

The conditions we must consider are as follows:

First—PRICES—Lot prices must be rock bottom, compared to surrounding property with inferior improvements.

Second—GENERAL FEATURES—The completed development must be attractive from every point of view. We must have good architecture, an abundance of trees, shrubbery, flowers, grass plots, parkings, as well as all modern improvements. We believe this can be accomplished without adding to lot prices through the combination of artistic talent and experience with our dollars.

Third—CHARACTER OF HOUSES—We must permit the construction of four types of houses, namely: Business buildings on business streets, the two-family flat, the apartment house for three or more families, and the detached single-family house.

Our problem is with regards to the one-family house. Our own organization has been in earnest consultation with Mr. E. H. Bennett, Consulting Architect, and how we shall place the one-family house is the bone of contention on which our business family is divided.

The three interior streets running east and west in this quarter section comprising CHATHAM FIELDS are 80th, 81st and 82nd Streets. There will be no lots fronting directly on any of these three streets—simply side lines of corner lots. All three of these streets are to be especially parked and embellished, as they form the main thoroughfares leading to the Cottage Grove Avenue trolley and also to the Illinois Central station at 82nd Street.

One Side of the Problem

One side of our divided house proposes to restrict all the corner plots with side lines on 80th, 81st and 82nd Streets to one-family residences, to a type of house that is architecturally attractive. The effect of this would be three wide, beautifully parked avenues right through the property, bordered only by single family houses, of approved design and in proper floral settings. This would also mean that all four corners in each block throughout Chatham Fields would have one-family houses only, while the interior of the block would be devoted to the brick two-flat or apartment of the more conventional type. This, it is claimed, would form a combination of one-family houses and apartment houses that would add beauty to the whole property without detracting from the desirability of either type of building.

The Other Side

The other side of our divided house takes the stand that the man who wants a one-family house would prefer to build in a section of the property that is devoted exclusively to residences. This side contends that while the first plan presented might add beauty to the property and make it more attractive for the residents of the two-family or apartment house, the demand for the corners to be used exclusively for residences will not be forthcoming, and this will handicap the construction of one-family houses which are architecturally more attractive, if not more expensive.

Which Shall It Be?

Before willingly assuming the responsibility involved in undertaking such a plan, we seek the opinion of those people of the South Side who would be likely to be interested in the development of Chatham Fields, especially those who are thinking of owning a single-family house. Shall a solid portion of this great property be devoted exclusively to a single family section, or is the plan presented above practical and more artistic? We are frankly seeking the ideas and suggestions of all concerned in the higher class of development for the South side, and will say we will value each reply to this notice, and that each communication to us will be recorded under the name and address of the sender. Any person giving an opinion who may, before the first of January next, make any purchase at Chatham Fields, will receive a credit with an amount equivalent to the first payment on a lot, this amount usually $10.00.

Chicago, July 26, 1914.
This notice will not appear again.

WOMEN WAR ON FREIBERG'S HALL

Start Circulation of Petitions for Closing of Resort.

DEMAND MAYOR ACT.

in the distribution and circulation of the petitions are the Chicago Political Equality league, the Illinois Equal Suffrage association, and the Young People's Civic league.

Bundles of petitions were sent out last night to some fifty workers, including the leaders of the ward organizations of the Woman's City club. Each of these workers in turn has been assigned to the duty of entrusting the circulation of petitions among volunteers who are to take them to the churches.

Volunteer workers also will circulate the petitions from house to house about the city through the day.

A campaign for signatures will be opened in the loop tomorrow. Petitions will await signatures at the various suffrage offices and headquarters of women's organizations, lunchrooms, and other public places.

Letter to Ward Leaders.

A letter sent out to the ward leaders of the Woman's City club with the petitions says:

"This is a critical day in Chicago unless the people speak. Those who profit from commercialized vice may rightly feel that they have triumphed. Through this petition all the people of Chicago may express their wishes to the mayor.

"Help rouse the city to fight this battle for civic righteousness. Place these petitions without fail in circulation tomorrow. The morning services of all the churches—Protestant, Catholic, and Jewish—offer the opportunity of the hour. Get these in the hands of every pastor in your ward. Ask him to read it from the pulpit and urge his congregation to sign as they leave the church. Station your assistants at all exits and instruct them to return petitions to you at once."

Gay Time Returns at Hall.

While the club women were planning battle, Freiberg's hall got back into its old time stride last night. The crowd that has stayed away during the past unpleasant week, when the hounds of the law bayed outside the door and threatened to cause trouble, came back and filled every seat on the dance floor, the orchestra gallery, and the balconies.

It all happened after 9:30 o'clock. A half hour previous the only persons in the hall were the women, the waiters, the entertainers, and one reporter. The women sat at the tables, wondering possibly whether Freiberg's was to go out of business. The night would decide that. Here and there other women were dancing with each other. The waiters in their white uniforms, signifying innocence, stood in little groups and talked to each other.

Then the Crisis Passes.

At 9:15 the situation had not changed materially. At 9:30, however, forty or fifty men and women had come in. The crisis was passed.

The band which plays for the dancers was moved up into the balcony—out of the way—and numerous tables were set on the orchestra stage.

After 10 o'clock there were no women dancing together. The waiters seemed to be the only ones who did not hesitate or tango. They tangoed only to the bar and back, and hesitated for their tips.

Innocent Little Cards.

Now and then—when the spirit moved—the waiters placed cards on the empty tables, cards with printed words as follows:

> FREE INSTRUCTION IN MODERN DANCES TO OUR GUESTS.
>
> Hand this card to the head waiter and he will send you one of our competent instructors. Respectfully,
>
> FREIBERG'S DANCING ACADEMY.

The instructors, it may be said, all wore charming gowns.

At midnight the hall held the biggest crowd it has contained during the year. It seemed apparent that the police were only bluffing when they spoke of closing by force.

Judge Refuses Warrant.

In the morning Judge Williams, sitting in the Criminal court building, was asked to issue a warrant for the arrest of Benjamin Stansbury, cashier of Freiberg's hall and holder of the saloon license. The court did not agree with Assistant City Prosecutor James Burke that the way to prosecute Freiberg's was by issuing a warrant, as was done in the case of former Ald. "Al" Tearney.

"This is the same kind of a case as the Tearney case," said Mr. Burke. "He was not charged with selling liquor after 1 o'clock, but with keeping his dramshop open and admitting customers."

"I understand the hall has a dance hall license authorizing it to keep open until 4 o'clock," said Judge Williams. "Under your theory all the hotels and the North Side Turner hall are violating the law also."

"That's an entirely different proposition," protested the prosecutor. But his plea availed nothing. Summons for Stansbury will be taken out tomorrow.

Nootbaar Not to Act.

Capt. Nootbaar said he would not close Freiberg's and provide a harvest for the professional bondsmen, who would release the guests of the place. The prosecution of the hall, as long as liquor was not sold after the closing hour, was in the city prosecutor's hands, he said.

"I am not having trouble in effectually closing the Twenty-second street district," the captain said, "but I do expect trouble in the Cottage Grove precinct. There are numbers of disorderly flats there, and it is hard to find them. The plan we consider most feasible is to keep a regular card index of the houses in the districts and a record of the persons moving in and out of them.

"Every house that is suspected will be recorded, and we will soon be in a position to know which are being used for immoral purposes."

Ryan Forestalls Trial.

Because of the eleventh hour resignation yesterday of Capt. Ryan, the city civil service commission may be unable to punish the man or men really responsible for the conditions which have existed there.

Members of the civil service commission admitted it will be difficult to prove the charges against the lieutenants when it may develop they were acting under the captain's orders in allowing resorts and saloons to operate in defiance of the law.

If the three lieutenants can prove they acted only on the advice of their superior officer, and were unable to raise a hand to remedy conditions because of their subordinate position, the charges will fail.

The charges filed against the officers are similar to those filed against the men who formerly held sway there a few years ago, and the investigation of which resulted in the reorganization of the force. There is one further charge, however—the broad accusation of permitting vagrants to inhabit the district without interference.

Must Answer These Charges.

The three lieutenants will be placed on trial next Friday morning to answer to the following charges:

Permitting women to approach men in saloons.

Permitting saloons and cafés to remain open after 1 o'clock in the morning.

Permitting liquor to be sold in resorts where no licenses were held.

Failure to issue necessary orders and to compel the enforcement of such orders by the men under their command.

Having knowledge that the district was infested with "disorderly women, ropers, professional escorts, and vagrants," and failing to drive them out.

The three lieutenants under charges have had good records in the department. Lieut. Michael T. Morrissey is the oldest in service and is the only one who would be eligible to pension should he resign from the force.

Lieut. James O'Toole of the central detail station heads the list of civil service applicants for the vacancy made by Ryan's resignation.

Hoyne Questions Woman.

Little was done during the day by State's Attorney Hoyne. It was reported a woman and a man had been arrested and the man was supposed to be Joseph Grabiner, one of those sought as a witness in the shooting of Detective Sergeant Birns. This man proved to be Alfred J. Strauss, arrested as a gunman in a raid on Loomis' saloon, Thirty-ninth street and Calumet avenue.

The woman was Lizzie Bergman, 1922 South Michigan avenue. She formerly was an inmate of a resort at 2119 Federal street. She was wanted on suspicion that she might know considerable about the shooting and how Rocco Vanille was wounded. She admitted knowing Vanille, but said she had no knowledge of the shooting. She is being held for further questioning tomorrow.

Vanille was removed from the Wesley hospital to the bridewell hospital in the afternoon.

Maj. M. L. C. Funkhouser's squad last night raided the Metz resort in North La Salle street and arrested four women. Instructions had been left at the station by Captain John Rehm, officer in command of the Chicago avenue district, to the effect that the women should be held overnight to prevent them returning to ply their trade. However, Lieut. Jacob Reich, after a conference with the proprietor of the resort, released the women. David Smith, a North Clark street furniture dealer, signed the bonds of $400 for each defendant.

Petition to Mayor Harrison Asking That He Close Freiberg's Notorious Hall.

This is a facsimile of the form of which 50,000 copies are being distributed for signatures today. If you desire to sign, this sheet may be used, and additional paper may be pasted on to accommodate other signers. Petitions may be sent to Miss Harriet Vittum, Woman's City Club, 116 South Michigan Avenue.

We, the undersigned citizens of Chicago, believing that a sufficient number of investigations have been made, and sufficient evidence gathered, to prove that Freiberg's Dance Hall is the most notorious and defiant offender against the law which you, as mayor, have sworn to defend; and believing that if you were to close Freiberg's Dance Hall at this time you would, by so doing, deal a stinging blow to commercialized vice in the Twenty-second Street District; do hereby respectfully petition that you revoke AT ONCE the license of Freiberg's Dance Hall and Saloon, and we pledge you in return the thanks of citizens who would see their city clean.

THREE HELD AS GUNMEN.

Police Arrest Trio and Have to Fire Shots to Stop Fleeing Leader.

James Kane, Alfred Mellinger, and Alfred J. Strauss, three alleged gunmen, were arrested early yesterday in a raid on Loomis' saloon at East Thirty-ninth street and Calumet avenue. An anonymous telephone message was received by the police to the effect that several gunmen were in the saloon. Strauss fled out of the front door and several shots were fired at him by the police before he was captured. According to detectives, he offered them $50 if they would let him go. Later, while the police were searching for his record, Attorney Charles E. Erbstein appeared and obtained his release on a writ of habeas corpus before the police had time to book him.

"BIG JIM" SKIPS VACATION.

"If I Roast to Death They Can't Say I Fled Town," Colosimo Asserts.

"Big Jim" Colosimo stood in front of his Wabash avenue restaurant last night mopping his forehead.

"I was going away," said Colosimo. "But now—how can I? A couple of weeks ago I sent my wife and family to the country. I was going to join them when all this trouble started. If I go away the newspapers will have big headlines about Jim Colosimo skipping town.

"If I roast to death I won't give them a chance to say that. Next year I'll take my vacation."

PASTORS TO EDIT CALUMET PAPER

Ministers Will Do All Work Except Typesetting on Index Next Week.

FULL STAFF ORGANIZED

BY THE REV. W. B. NORTON.

A newspaper in which pastors are to be editors, reporters, makeup men, copy readers, advertising solicitors, and will hold every other position necessary, except typesetting, promises to arouse the citizens of Roseland, West Pullman, Kensington, and surrounding territory.

C. P. Morgan, editor of the Calumet Index, has agreed to turn over his plant next week to the ministers of the community and look on while they edit the paper.

"Staff Is Organized."

Work is to be begun on the paper tomorrow, with the following heads of departments:

Managing editor—The Rev. R. O. Thomas, pastor of the Roseland Presbyterian church.

Uplift editor—The Rev. George P. Kabele, pastor People's English Lutheran church.

Vice editor—The Rev. L. B. Lott, pastor St. Stephen's Methodist Episcopal church.

Temperance—The Rev. G. K. Stark, pastor Elim Swedish Lutheran church.

Labor—The Rev. F. F. Farmiloe, pastor West Pullman Methodist Episcopal church.

"No Small Task," Says Pastor.

"I am already beginning to feel more sympathy than I ever felt before with newspaper editors," the Rev. Mr. Thomas, the new managing editor, said yesterday. "It is no small task to get a paper together, I assure you."

The Rev. Mr. Kabele, uplift editor, said he had an article of 1,500 words already written, in which, he said, he praises the good things for which the community stands and points out a few defects.

The vice situation is to get a probing and some of the police probably will get suggestions which will take their attention for a while from Chicago's Twenty-second street levee district and turn it on localities in their own beats, if the vice editor carries out his intentions.

"There have been intimations that vice from the city is encroaching on our territory," the Rev. Mr. Lott, vice editor, said yesterday. "We are going to do a little looking around and we're not going to stop with the next week's issue of the Calumet Index. After a little secret service work we will make a few suggestions to our police and watch results."

Sporting Editor "Qualified."

The Rev. James Nivens, sporting editor, on being asked as to his qualifications for the position, admitted that he played on the football team when he was in college. One of his brother ministers volunteered the information that he possessed another qualification for sporting editor in that he owned a pass to the White Sox grounds.

"I believe in sport, but I believe in clean sport," he said. "I propose to give a few editorial paragraphs condemning Sunday sports, gambling, and other vices of the sporting fraternity."

The 100 saloons in the community are to get their just deserts at the hands of the Rev. G. K. Stark, temperance editor.

"I intend," he said, "to quote from the report printed in THE TRIBUNE of the medical congress held recently in Chicago, in which the injurious effects of alcohol are so vigorously described."

Mr. Morgan could not be reached, but one of the ministers attributed his motive in turning over the paper to them the fact that Mr. Morgan when a boy was an attendant of the church in Topeka, Kas., of which the Rev. Charles M. Sheldon was pastor.

Bathing Suits of Western Electric Employes Stir Michigan City.

10,000 HOLD OUTING.

Ten thousand employés of the Western Electric company's Hawthorne plant spent yesterday at Michigan City on their annual outing. Five lake ships carried the picnickers to and from the Indiana port, returning at night in fleet formation with a display of electrical illumination.

The outing included aquatic and field athletic diversions, a picnic dinner, and speechmaking by officials.

A banner and a silved cup were among the awards for honors in the athletic competitions. At Michigan City the women employés, 1,500 strong, marched in parade.

Girls Shock Citizenry.

Some of the girls alarmed the inhabitants with one piece bathing suits remarkable for their conservation of cloth. girls were reproved and the suits suppressed.

Balloon ascensions, street parades, baseball games, outdoor minstrel shows, and concerts were some of the features of the "Steger day" celebration held in Steger, Ill., yesterday by 5,000 employés of the piano firm. In the evening there was a display of electric fireworks.

Bagpipe contests, the Highland fling, sailor's dances and a variety of athletic contests were engaged in at the thirtieth annual picnic of the Caledonian society of Chicago held yesterday at Riverview park. Invitations had been sent to Scots in Michigan, Iowa, and other nearby states and hundreds of them accepted.

Ex-Kansas Men Meet.

More than 300 former residents of Kansas, now living in Chicago, attended the annual picnic of the Kansas society, held at "Heatherton," the 500 acre estate of Judge John S. Goodwin, Naperville. The club's roster contains 538 names.

In accordance with a custom set several years ago, dinner was served on the lawn in front of the historic old mansion which marks the location of the old block house that was used as a refuge by the early settlers during the troubles with the Black Hawk Indians.

T. J. Norton, general counsel for the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fé railroad and president of the society, was toastmaster.

Chicago's County Mayo men will hold their annual picnic today at Harn's grove, North Western and Berteau avenue. It is said plans will be made for the enlistment of an Irish regiment.

One hundred employés of the office of the Kabo Corset company held a picnic at Ravinia park. There were races for young men and women, the prizes being products turned out by the firm.

Two Die in Auto Crash; Racing.

Hazleton, Pa., July 25.—Two well known young men of Berwick, near here, were killed in an automobile accident near Orangeville early today. It is said the autos were racing when one of them collided with a tree. Clarke Harry, 22, was killed instantly, and Elmer Doan, 22, was so badly injured that he died shortly afterward.

WIFE FAINTS AS CAILLAUX'S 'RIRI' LETTER IS READ

JUDGES HURL DUEL DEFI

PARIS, July 25.—Mme. Henriette Caillaux, whose trial for the killing of Gaston Calmette has provided many thrills for Paris, fainted while her husband's love letters, written to her before his divorce from Mme. Gueydan, were read in court today. She recovered after an hour, and although in the dock the remainder of the sitting, seemed scarcely conscious of what was going on.

The evidence, after the love letters, wandered off into discussions by surgeons as to whether M. Calmette could have been saved by an immediate operation.

Judge Hurls Duel Defi.

A remarkable feature of the proceedings is the quarrel which has arisen between the presiding judge of the court, Louis Albanel, and Judge Louis Dagoury, one of the three other judges sitting on the bench with him, as a result of which a challenge to a duel has been sent by Judge Albanel to his colleague. Spectators and lawyers seized upon this as a toothsome morsel, differing in all respects from other sensational offerings of the trial.

Preparations for the duel, however, have been suspended until the decision of the minister of justice has been rendered as to whether they may fight. The two judges sat side by side today without speaking to each other.

The "Million Kisses" Note.

As soon as the court had opened today Maitre Labori began reading some of the Gueydan letters. He remarked when he took up the second one:

"In this you will find burning love, but nothing indecent as common rumor has reported."

In the letter, M. Caillaux, writing to the present Mme. Caillaux before his divorce from Mme. Gueydan, referred to the happiness he would feel when he could "press a million kisses over your dear body."

While the reading was going on Mme. Caillaux, with her head bent low, was crying bitterly. Her sobs could be heard all over the courtroom.

Then with a sigh she fell prostrate to the floor. Two Republican guards standing near raised her and carried her out of the chamber.

The four judges at once rose from their seats and Judge Albanel announced the suspension of the hearing, but Mme. Caillaux later recovered consciousness and the hearing was resumed. Mme. Caillaux was livid and haggard and her features were drawn.

The Riri Letter.

Following is the text of the first letter from M. Caillaux to the present Mme. Caillaux, before his divorce from his first wife. "Riri" is an affectionate diminutive for Henriette.

"My dear little Riri—I have read with the attention it merited the letter which thou hast written me and which calls for an explicit response.

"For several days I have had the intention of dissipating any misunderstanding by a complete explanation. When I met thee, I felt the impulsion of my whole being. I should, nevertheless, have resisted and should no doubt have had the courage to conquer myself if I had been happy at home.

Tells of Unhappy Home.

"But I was not happy. I was humiliated and wounded by the action I had undergone and no one can make me forget my bruised feelings. No one could soothe my injuries. On the contrary, they aggravate them. Therefore, I threw myself towards thee with passionate fury, or rather with furious passion. Nevertheless, at the time of the incidents to which it is unnecessary to allude, I considered it my duty to release thee entirely by giving thee in a letter thy full liberty.

"As a matter of fact, I did not feel myself sufficiently sure of recovering my independence to give me the right to engage thee to obtain thine. With fine courage and with the beautiful boldness which love and confidence gave thee, thou hast recovered thy freedom, saying to me in substance, 'I ask of thee but one engagement—that is to give me thy love now,' and to this thou hast added, 'I shall not believe quite in the fullness of thy love if thou dost not succeed some day in thyself becoming free.'

Would Await Election.

"I answered thee, 'I do and will love thee. I certainly expect to regain my liberty some day, but in any case I shall not move before the elections.'

"Is not that it, my Riri? What was in the background of my mind was that I had embarked on a wrong venture—that there was between another person and myself such opposition of temperaments, of natures, of characters, that catastrophe was inevitable; that necessarily time would bring about a rupture apart from all questions of another love and as the sole result of the crash of two beings who did not understand each other. But I understood—and I still understand—that in no case could my love be the direct cause of that rupture, first of all because in such a circumstance I should have lost some of my self-esteem, and finally because I judged that for the future—for our future—it was in the highest degree important that no connection should exist between the break which I foresaw and an affection which is dear to me.

His Conscience Hurt.

"Matters went on very much as I had foreseen during a year. Then events followed in quick succession and my conscience—which is of a delicacy carried to a point of scruple and sometimes amounting to folly—suffers a little at the thought that my heart has influenced these events.

"To speak frankly and clearly, it is certain that things would not have developed as rapidly as they did if I had had thee and had had love in my heart. But that is secondary, and I fully realize that from this point of view my scruples are excessive.

"When a man is unhappy at home and he has outside a delicious affection that naturally reacts upon him, those who have made him unhappy have only themselves to reproach.

"However that may be, events happened in September. Thou saidst to me on that subject, 'Thou hast been weak. Thou shouldst have closed thy door to the fugitive and made use of that favorable opportunity.'

Fears Wife's Fury.

"Undoubtedly the attitude thou suggestest could have been taken quite legitimately, but thou forgettest two things—first, that it would have been well known she was injured in her affections and that we had all to fear from the fury of a woman who felt her situation gone and who had not yet had time to reconcile herself to that idea. The second thing thou forgettest is that my electoral position was, so to speak, lost. It was easy for me to convince myself of that by conversations I had yesterday in my constituency."

M. Caillaux then continues to discuss various attitudes he could adopt toward obtaining a divorce, and says:

"Thou wilt say that I am losing a precious opportunity and that I shall have a frightful winter. All that is true, but it fails to take into account my legitimate political ambitions and, what is much graver, my duty toward my party and my friends.

Owes All to Party.

"Let me explain that my party has made me what I am. I owe it as the honest man thou knowest me to be to fight for it next year in the fullest of my strength. It will be the last campaign under the old voting system."

M. Caillaux then considers whether he will be injured in his district by his difficulties with his wife, but says that no one, not even the servants, knows anything definite. He continues:

"What is irksome for us both is that for long months we shall have to employ extreme precautions.

"If we had the courage for it—if we had the confidence in ourselves and in our love which I have absolutely—we would not see each other for months. I do not propose so radical a solution because we should both suffer too much."

"But I repeat that infinite prudence is necessary. A mediocre solution thou wilt say. Perhaps so, my Riri, but life is not easy to arrange when one must take so many things into consideration and one to which I hold above all—the reputation of a woman one adores.

"Thou knowest well, my dear love, that I love thee above all and beyond all—that I feel happiness is with thee—that I await it—that I hope for it—that I live only for its realization. I love thee with all my heart.

"P. S.—I have re-read by letter and it does not express my thoughts. What I wish to make absolutely clear is the necessity that there shall be no scandal before May unless I am absolutely forced to it.

"Now do not alarm thyself any more, I implore thee, at the prudence which I preach. I shall ask thee nothing that can injure our love, but I shall ask of thee a series of little sacrifices which will enable me to measure and appreciate still more thy love. In that renunciation we shall be purified by the discipline we have imposed on ourselves."

"Riri" His One Consolation.

The second letter, which was sixteen pages in length, said:

"My beloved little Riri—At last I have a minute to write thee."

Then after a long account of the cattle show at Le Mans and of a visit to Paris of M. Caillaux it resumes:

"Thou must be very reasonable and stay at Dinard for the present. I fear only one thing—blackmail. Perhaps some one will make a scandal. Sometimes I am very discouraged. What a life! I have but one consolation—thee."

"I Am Wholly Thine."

The letter concludes:

"Poor dear Riri—I clearly foresee no end of difficulties. At times I feel awfully discouraged and I am thoroughly worn out. I have slept very little lately, having scarcely two nights rest. What a life I lead! I have only one consolation—only one comfort—to think about my little sweetheart—to see her folded in my arms as at Ouchy. My God! what delicious moments! Will happier days come? Pity me, dearest love. Tell thyself above all or rather to thyself what thou well knowest—that I adore thee and that I am wholly thine.

On the Sidelines of Onwentsia Tennis Courts.

MODJESKI PUTS BLAME ON WIFE

Says Home Was Not Happy Because Mate Disliked America.

TRIPS ABROAD ROILED.

Ralph Modjeski, son of Mme. Modjeska, the actress, and a wealthy construction engineer, yesterday filed an answer to the suit for divorce filed recently in the Superior court by his wife, Mrs. Felice Mahdah Modjeski. He asks that the suit be dismissed. He denies that he offered his wife $80,000 to obtain a divorce. He charges that his wife characterized the manners and customs of the people of the United States as "crude, uncouth, and uneducated," and for that reason insisted on residing in Europe a greater part of the time.

He declares that this is his adopted country and that he wishes to remain a citizen of the United States and repeatedly refused to accede to his wife's demands to live abroad.

Objected to Voyages.

He asserts that between 1890, when they were married, and 1912 his wife made seven trips to Europe for her own amusement, and not for the education of their two younger children as she stated. He says that all of these trips were made against his wishes, excepting two, one of which was made to attend his mother's funeral in 1909. He accompanied her on both of these trips.

In 1910, he says, he told her he would sue for a divorce because his business efficiency was being impaired by her refusal to live in America. He denies that he offered her $50,000 to obtain a "quiet" divorce or that he raised this figure to $80,000 together with "thousands of dollars' worth of life insurance." He admits, however, that he promised to provide liberally for her in case a accree was entered.

Refused a Reconciliation.

He says she returned to him in 1912 and admitted she had been wrong and wanted to live with him here, but that he refused on account of her past actions. He asserts that he is not a resident of Chicago, as stated in her bill, but a resident of Portland, Ore., where he already has entered suit for a divorce.

His profession yields him $20,000 a year, he asserts, and admits that he owns property worth $136,000, which yields an annual income of $4,000. In her bills Mrs. Modjeski placed his income at $25,000 a year and his property at $200,000.

Two Fires in House.

Firemen made two trips to the house of Dr. Louis E. Schmidt of 60 East Bellevue place early yesterday. Fire started in the kitchen and after this had been extinguished a second fire started in the bathroom on the second floor an hour later. Crossed electric wires caused both fires. The loss was estimated at $500.

PARTIES READY TO "MOB" WOODS

Candidates' Petition Form Still Mystery with Closing Day Near.

COURT ACTION LIKELY.

Illinois politicians of all parties are in a state of near terror because of the tactics of Secretary of State Harry Woods.

With the final day for filing petitions for state, congressional, and legislative offices just five days away, Secretary Woods has not indicated the form of petition which he will recognize as legal.

He has been away from Springfield ever since the first day of filing the required petitions and hasn't been close enough to Sangamon county to permit the sheriff of that county to serve writs issued by the Circuit court compelling the secretary of state to permit the scrutiny of certain petitions which have been filed.

Candidates' Wrath Rises.

Candidates have become so wildly excited over the trend of affairs at Springfield that they threaten immediate proceedings by any extraordinary method which might be pursued in the Supreme court to force Secretary of State Woods to appear at his office and give some official indication of what he proposes to do in certifying the official list of candidates for the Sept. 9 primaries who are forced to file their petitions at his office.

Orders went out from the Progressive state headquarters for all state, congressional, and legislative candidates to prepare an entirely new set of petitions. These are to conform with the view said unofficially to be held by Secretary Woods that the names of separate counties must not appear in the headings of the primary petitions, for fear that Mr. Woods will throw them all out.

Printers were held until late last night getting out the new form blanks which clerks sent to the respective districts.

How It Happened.

The trouble all dates back to the wild eyed scramble to force legislation through the general assembly during the closing hours of the last session. The primary elections committee of the house had failed to transact any real business with the flood of primary reform bills and on the floor at the last possible moment twenty-seven amendments were shot in and adopted under forced roll calls. Some came from the Progressives, others from the Democrats, and some from the Republicans. None of them had been pieced together and amalgamated. The result was a complete act, glaring with discrepancies and inconsistencies, and the election authorities in state and county have been unable to reconcile the acknowledged discrepancies.

Now, atop all these natural troubles Secretary Woods takes the position that he is unable to construe the primary law and in a statement "passed the buck" to newspapers which he claimed had criticised the method of filing petitions.

CANDIDATES FILE EXPENSES.

Kansas Aspirants to Senate Post Show What Primary Cost—Bristow Spent Most.

Washington, D. C., July 25.—Senatorial candidates in Kansas today filed their primary campaign expense and contribution accounts. Senator Bristow, Republican candidate for renomination, spent $3,536.01. One thousand dollars was contributed by former Senator Jonathan Bourne. Former Senator Charles Curtis, contesting the nomination with Bristow, spent $1,946.55. Among his contributors was listed E. Root, $250. Representative Victor Murdock, Progressive candidate for senator, contributed $200 to the state Progressive committee.

SHERMAN HITS WILSON RULE

Senator Opens North State Campaign at Naperville.

DENOUNCES TRUST ACTS.

"Concentrated Imbecilities of All Human Effort."

Senator Lawrence Y. Sherman came to bat yesterday. He started his own campaign in northern Illinois with some statements that are typical and significant, from the political viewpoint.

The senator affirmed that President Wilson was right in nominating Thomas D. Jones for a member of the federal reserve bank board and that Wilson has gained while the party has lost in forcing the president to withdraw the Jones nomination.

"The concentrated imbecilities of all human undertakings," is Senator Sherman's diagnosis of the Democratic trust bills, uttered in Shermanesque language, and he asserts that he will not return to Washington except to vote against them.

Flails Democratic Tariff.

"The free trade tendencies of the Democratic party are responsible for the industrial depression and the depleted pay rolls," said the senator. "I blame the Underwood tariff act for the present conditions. There is nothing psychological in an exhausted bank account or a broken leg. The industrial depression is a fact, and not a condition of anybody's mind.

"There has been too much 'knocking' on the 'big' business of the country. The critics have shown a senseless lack of discrimination between legitimate and illegitimate transactions.

Scores Trust Legislation.

"The big crops will give the Democrats a temporary boost, but they will not be enough to offset the results of the Democratic legislation.

"Congress will not be adjourned before Sept. 1. I can do more good by coming back to Illinois and explaining what the Democrats have done while in power than by staying in Washington and listening to them quarrel. I am not going back to Washington until November unless it will be to vote against the anti-trust bills."

Sullivan Lines Up Delegates.

The Sullivan generals yesterday played what they consider one of the big cards in the senatorship battle when they made public the indorsement of Mr. Sullivan's candidacy by forty-eight of the sixty-six Illinois delegates to the Democratic national convention at Baltimore.

Charles Boeschenstein, Illinois national committeeman and director in chief of the biscuit baron's campaign, declared that several of the eighteen delegates who had not yet signed up would be for Sullivan on primary day.

ALL PARTIES TO FOREGATHER

First Function at Logan Monument Site to Attract Leaders of State.

The greatest concourse of politicians of all factions of all parties ever held in the state is the prospect for Murphysboro on Aug. 3, when the first formal function in connection with the erection of a monument to Gen. John A. Logan will be celebrated.

The speakers will be Gov. Dunne, Senators Lewis and Sherman, Mrs. Mary Logan, widow of Gen. Logan, and former Speaker Joseph G. Cannon. The guests of honor include former Govs. Deneen and Yates, all of the members of congress from Illinois, the state officers and leading men of all political parties of the state, with officials representing the G. A. R.

A marker at the birthplace of Gen. Logan is to be dedicated, upon which site later it is planned to erect the Logan monument.

OWENS OUSTS KENNA JUDGES

NAMES "BEST CITIZENS."

The Kenna-Coughlin grip on the political machinery of the First ward was pried loose yesterday when County Judge Owens fired every clerk and judge of election in the ward, including the Republicans, and named an entire new set of officials.

Many of the city's business and professional men, also women conspicuous in the "social justice" movement, were placed in charge of the ward's election machinery.

Moose Party Recognized.

Not a single Republican election official is left, the order making a clean sweep of every one. In the new list handed down the H-H Democrats and the Progressive party recommendations are named. The county judge by this action again recognizes the Moose forces as the second party in Chicago.

The justification for the removal of all Republican judges and clerks, along with the Kenna-Coughlin battlers, is said to be the charge that the "regular" Republican organization in the ward has been working the bipartisan proposition with the Kenna organization for years, the Republicans helping Kenna in all city elections and the Kenna crowd reciprocating in legislative and state campaign years.

The removal of all Republicans also is aimed at State Senator Francis Brady, who is a candidate for renomination.

Await Harrison's Word.

The action of Judge Owens followed the plan of the Hearstites to oust Kenna and Coughlin from the Democratic county managing committee. This step was halted, however, to get orders direct from Mayor Harrison.

A meeting of the managing committee will be held next Wednesday, at which Mayor Harrison is expected to be present. It will be put squarely up to him then as to whether the two First ward aldermen are to remain cogs in the city hall machine.

M'GOVERN HITS LA FOLLETTE

Madison, Wis., July 25.—[Special.]—Gov. McGovern, candidate for the Republican nomination for United States senator, tonight issued a statement denying a charge made by Senator La Follette that responsibility for extravagant appropriations made by the last legislature rests on the governor. Mr. McGovern says La Follette is more responsible for them than he is and that the senator is actuated by a desire to punish McGovern for becoming the Roosevelt candidate for temporary chairman of the last Republican national convention.

WOMAN ON MOOSE TICKET

Miss Mary Stegall Named for State School Head.

LIVES IN JACKSON COUNTY

Progressives Complete Their Slate; Pavey for Treasurer.

The Progressive state organization has picked a woman—Miss Mary M. Stegall of Carbondale, Jackson county—as its candidate for the nomination for state superintendent of public instruction. Petitions for her nomination will be filed in Springfield before the time limit expires on Friday.

Miss Stegall is a classmate and school friend of the present Republican state superintendent, Francis G. Blair, who has no opposition for renomination in the Republican primaries.

The Democrats have a woman running in their primaries for the same office, Miss Caroline Grote of Pittsfield, who was the party nominee against Mr. Blair in 1906. Miss Grote, however, is scheduled to have some substantial male opposition.

State Ticket Completed.

Miss Stegall's choice by the Progressive state leaders as the most available candidate for organization backing was made yesterday, and the state ticket, in substance, was completed.

The organization candidate for state treasurer is Louis G. Pavey of Mount Vernon, Jefferson county. He is a son of the late Gen. Charles W. Pavey, former state auditor under one of the old Republican régimes. The two candidates for congressman at large are Dr. George N. Kreider of of Springfield and Harry Heer of Rockford. There will be an organization candidate for Supreme court clerk, probably a former Republican of Swedish-American stock.

North side politicians were handed a big surprise when the announcement came from the Progressive camp that La Verne W. Noyes, former treasurer of the Progressive national committee, had become a candidate for the Progressive nomination for congress in the Ninth district.

May Defeat Britten.

Congressman Fred A. Britten, who was the only Republican in Illinois in 1912 to defeat a then sitting Democratic congressman, has been expecting to have easy sailing in getting back to Washington, the north siders thought. The Democratic nomination has not been greatly sought because of the supposed strength of Mr. Britten, who has been conducting an unremitting campaign for reëlection ever since he was sworn in. The Progressives boldly asserted the candidacy of Mr. Noyes means the certain defeat of Britten and possibly the election of Mr. Noyes himself.

The petition of Raymond Robins for United States senator was filed at Springfield yesterday. It contained 1,750 signatures.

COOK COUNTY TO ESCAPE OPTION FIGHT THIS YEAR.

Anti-Saloon League Begins Lining Up Legislative Candidates in All Other Parts of State.

County option—with Cook county excluded—is to be the main demand of the Anti-Saloon league of Illinois, in its legislative campaign shortly to be launched actively. Recommendations of legislative candidates by the organized dry forces will be on this basis, the pledge of its candidates also including a promise to stand for a search and seizure act—the "blind tiger" bill—and for the passage of the residence district option bill which narrowly escaped passage at the 1913 session.

The understanding is that the political experts within the anti-saloon lines feel that a county option bill cannot go through the next legislative session should Cook county be embraced within its provisions.

The league's legal advisers, according to reports from the inside, believe that the law can be limited to counties of less than 200,000 inhabitants, on the same theory that previous statutes have been enacted applying only to Cook county, or vice versa.

Esperanto Convention Closes.

The seventh annual convention of the Esperantista Asocio de Norda Ameriko was closed at the Hotel Sherman yesterday morning to meet in San Francisco in 1915 for its eighth annual gathering.

G. O. P. REBELS FILL SLATE

DENEEN NOT FRIGHTENED

The insurgent Republicans yesterday completed their county slate with the selection of the two candidates for nomination for assessors. They are William R. Moss and Oscar Reun.

Mr. Moss, who will contest the nomination with William H. Weber of Blue Island, the Deneen "regular" candidate, is secretary of the Michigan society in Chicago. He lives at 238 North Kenilworth avenue, Oak Park. He is a member of the Chicago Bar association, the American Bar association, the Union League and University clubs, and Association of Commerce.

Mr. Reun is a building contractor, residing at 429 Roslyn place. He was selected to represent the building construction interests. He will be pitted against Adam Wolf, the regular Republican slate candidate.

Deneen Scorns Rebels.

Mr. Deneen and his advisers were undisturbed by the plans of the "rebels" to retire the former governor and his chief lieutenants in the old Town of Lake territory from the councils of the party.

The governor told his friends that he welcomed a fight over the committeeship in his own ward and he was quite certain his friends in other south side wards were not losing any sleep over the order to "get Deneen."

The governor's aids said they would not indulge in any red fire work for several days yet, but would devote their time to getting the organization forces lined up for the last month of the battle. The speaking campaign in behalf of the regulars will not open before Aug. 10.

Down with Bosses.

Meanwhile the cry of "down with the bosses" has at last hit the Progressive party county leaders. The first insurrectionary movement developed yesterday when Charles Hoepfner, a prominent west side druggist, opened his campaign for the Progressive nomination for sheriff. Mr. Hoepfner is out to smash the Moose county slate in this one spot.

Fred S. Oliver, a north side real estate man, is the slate candidate for this nomination.

The determination of Hoepfner to wage a battle all over the county will result in a change of the Moose plans for the primary campaign.

CLARK IS AGAINST BOTH SULLIVAN AND STRINGER.

Denies He's for Roger Because Bryan's Not—Says Both Latter Betrayed Him in 1912.

Washington, D. C., July 25.—[Special.]—If Roger Sullivan is counting on any help from Speaker Champ Clark in his race for the Democratic nomination for United States senator in Illinois, he will be disappointed.

Speaker Clark, in characteristic fashion, today set at rest the report emanating from the Sullivan headquarters in Chicago that he would support Sullivan because Secretary Bryan had announced in favor of Lawrence B. Stringer.

"It's a lie," asserted the speaker, his eyes lighting with anger. "Bryan and Sullivan both betrayed me at Baltimore. I don't intend to mix in their fight in Illinois now. I shan't have any part or parcel in it."

While not aiding Sullivan in any way whatsoever, it is also probable that Speaker Clark will refuse to aid Congressman Stringer. Stringer was one of the Wilson workers in the Illinois primary campaign, which Clark won hands down. At Baltimore, also, Stringer was in the thick of the Wilson movement, and he has claimed as much credit as Sullivan for swinging the Illinois delegation into the Wilson column.

AN INVESTMENT OF MORE THAN A QUARTER OF MILLION DOLLARS IS ALREADY ASSURED AT

BROOKFIELD-MANOR

Up to this time more than 160 lots have been reserved. On the majority of these lots improvements will be made this year and a substantial development is now assured. This of itself will guarantee to every lot purchaser an increase in value over the price paid—an increase that will date from the day of the sale. A hundred homes will soon be under construction, 46 bungalows are contracted for and will be under way as soon as it is practicable after the big sale on August 2nd. New stores and shops will be built in the business section of Brookfield Manor. Sewer, sidewalks and pavements will be built. The main business street—on which there already is a car line—in a few months will be a broad avenue well graded and lighted—a business street in one of the best suburban towns in Greater Chicago. Every dollar that goes into this kind of development will make Brookfield Manor property more valuable and will add to the value of your investment if you put your money here.

And This Is Not All

We have set aside a few acres on the island, part of which is our property, lying in the Little Desplaines River. On this island the town of Brookfield will build and maintain a park, with tennis courts, play grounds and recreation grounds for both young and old. Brookfield already has the finest kindergarten to be found in Chicago. This new park will be an added attraction and will help to make Brookfield Manor the finest home subdivision to be found in Greater Chicago. Remember that every one who buys a lot and builds a home here will have the ideal spot for a residence and he may be sure that in ten years he will have an investment double in value what he paid for it.

Sunday, August 2, 1914, Is the Day of the Big Sale

888 Lots, $177 AND UP

BRING $10 TO RESERVE YOUR LOT. PURCHASE MAY BE COMPLETED ON PRACTICALLY YOUR OWN TERMS.

PRICES WITHIN THE REACH OF EVERY ONE.

Our prices run as low as $177 for residence lots and as high as $500 for business lots—this exclusive of double corners, which are priced higher. No lots will be reserved unless a deposit of $10 is made at the time of the reservation. On our preliminary sale we disposed of fifty lots, but all other lots are withdrawn from the market and positively none will be sold until the day of the sale, which will be August 2, 1914. There is a reason for this. All reservations will be handled in the order in which they are received. By making a deposit of $10 and indicating which lot you desire to purchase you will have the first opportunity to complete the purchase of the lot selected, provided some one else has not made a reservation in advance of yours on the same lot. On receipt of your money we will send you plat, circulars, and full information to enable you to make your selection. We want to give every one an opportunity to buy a lot in this great new suburban town. We will make it easy for you to complete your purchase. The sale contracts, deeds, etc., will be given to you August 2nd, or as soon thereafter as they can be prepared. You May Reserve More Than One Lot by the Payment of $10 for Each Lot Selected and Reserved.

THE BEST INVESTMENT OF ALL.

On June 5th, 1914, in answer to the question, "Do you consider bonds, and what kind, better than a trust deed on small residence property?" "The Chicago Tribune" said: "A small residence in which you and your family would live is the best investment of all." There is food for reflection for the investor in the above quotation. The people of Chicago should begin to study Chicago real estate as an investment. Gilt edged bonds have descended to prices far below those at which they were purchased. Securities of the solid sort have shrunk until they represent a big loss to the investor. Savings banks have gone to the wall. The very highest class stocks are today selling on the exchanges at many points below the prices at which they were originally purchased by the investor. The money invested in Chicago real estate, however, has shown a steady and consistent gain. The values of Chicago realty have consistently and conservatively increased, until today the original purchasers find themselves in possession of a real investment, which represents a very high rate of increase. And money in real estate is in the safest bank in the world—Mother Earth. Within the last few years subdivisions have been sold in this market at lower prices than those obtained for like property in cities of less than 50,000. Some of these subdivisions have shown already tremendous increases in value.

BROOKFIELD MANOR PROPERTY WILL SHOW THE BIGGEST INCREASE OF ANY RESIDENTIAL SUBURB OFFERED IN CHICAGO IN MANY YEARS.

Brookfield Manor lies along the natural lines of development. The West Side is growing and expanding every day, and so is the Southwest Side. Business is forcing the residents farther west and south, and Brookfield Manor lies straight in their path. It is the most beautiful and accessible home spot in or around Chicago at any price. It is a level piece of land on the little Desplaines River, and in a few years will be more beautiful in appearance than Riverside. It is surrounded by homes that cost all the way from $2,500 to $10,000. Through the center of this property runs the La Grange car line, which meets the Metropolitan Elevated at 22d Street and 56th Avenue, and the 22d Street surface line at 22d Street and 40th Avenue. Three blocks from our property is the Brookfield Station on the Burlington, running 54 Trains Daily—27 Minutes from the Beautiful New Union Station.

Just think what this means! Fifty-four trains every day running into what will be one of the finest stations in the world and putting our residents into the city in less time than they can get downtown from Edgewater, and almost as quickly as they can get to the Loop from the Wilson Avenue Station. This Means All the Advantages of a Suburban Town and Better Transportation Than Any Subdivision in Chicago Proper.

VISIT ANY OTHER SUBDIVISION NOW BEING OFFERED IN CHICAGO—THEN SEE OURS—AND YOU WILL UNHESITATINGLY PURCHASE BROOKFIELD MANOR PROPERTY.

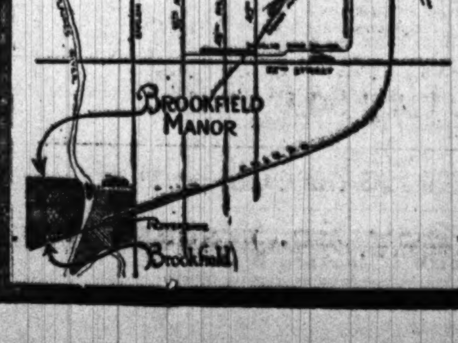
For property of this character ours is the lowest in price of any property on this market, and it is the choicest residence subdivision on the Chicago market today. One glance will convince you of these facts. It is as level as the floor, except near the river, where it slopes gently to the water's edge. It has broad streets along which shade trees will be placed at regular intervals. Its main business street is a wide avenue with a car line, on which real cars are running, occupying the center of the street. This street will be graded, curbed, and parked. No more homey spot can be found in or around Chicago. You will be delighted to live in this beautiful suburb—one that will be as fine in appearance, as attractive in its surroundings, and as valuable as Evanston, within a few years.

And Remember, You Are Only 27 Minutes from the Loop, with Its Big Department Stores, and You Are Served by Fifty-four Trains a Day on the C., B. & Q. Railroad.

HOW TO GET THERE.

Be our guests next Sunday. You can meet our man, wearing a white badge marked "Salesman, Benson Brothers," at Gate 1, Union Depot, corner of Canal and Adams Streets. He will give you free tickets to our property and return. Our private car will start from that station Sunday as follows: 8:20 A. M., 9:47 A. M., 11:40 A. M., 1:30 P. M., 2:20 P. M., and 4 P. M. If you desire to go by the surface line, meet our man at 22d Street and 40th Avenue, or at 22nd Street and 56th Avenue, on Sunday, July 26th.

IT COSTS NOTHING TO COME OUT AND LOOK THE PROPERTY OVER. The time for doing this is short, because the sale day is only one week away and if any lots remain unsold after the sale day they will be taken off the market and held for higher prices.



HOW TO MAKE YOUR RESERVATION

You can make your reservation right on the property by selecting your lot and depositing $10. You can also make your reservation by calling at our office in the Harris Trust Building and making your deposit and selection there. If you do not care to do this, or if you are too busy, you may use the attached coupon and we will send you a plat of the property and you can make your selection. If you send your $10 with the coupon your reservation will date from the time we receive the $10 deposit, even though you do not make selection of a specific lot until July 31st. In other words, if you send the $10 with your coupon we will give you until the day before the sale to make your selection and your selection will date back to the time we received your money deposit.

THE TIME IS SHORT, AS YOU ONLY HAVE UNTIL AUG. 2nd—JUST A FEW DAYS MORE. REMEMBER, MORE THAN 160 LOTS HAVE ALREADY BEEN RESERVED. USE THE COUPON NOW—RESERVE A CHOICE LOT BEFORE IT IS TOO LATE.

ALDERMEN ROW OVER PURPOSES OF TRIP ABROAD

LAUD LONDON SUBWAYS

BY JAMES O'DONNELL BENNETT.

[SPECIAL CABLE TO THE TRIBUNE.]

LONDON, July 25.—"See the tail wagging the dog," scribbled a Chicago alderman on a card he passed to another Chicago alderman at a luncheon given in honor of the Chicago delegation yesterday at the Savoy hotel by the American Luncheon club, the American ambassador presiding.

At the moment one of the delegation's engineers was booming along in a speech giving the history of the commission's organization and purposes and, wittingly or not, conveying the impression that the delegation principally is a body of engineers studying strictly railway problems for Chicago.

The fact that this is also a civic and governmental body, containing twelve city officals in a total membership of twenty, never has been brought out in banquet speeches, which in England thus far have been made by the engineers and corporation lawyers exclusively.

Plan to Suppress Engineers.

There is no buncombe in saying that the leading aldermen are sore through and through about this. Consequently, plans are quietly forming among the council leaders tonight to call a meeting of all city officials in the party in Paris on Monday morning to take measures for impressing on the engineers that they must not try to run the whole show.

The aldermen who are taking this position are not showy men and they say they are not animated by personal jealousy, but only by a sense of what is due the dignity of the city they represent.

One alderman said: "We are not merely a bunch of railway engineers, but a governing body. The engineers would do well to remember that we provide the supplies for the projects they so pompously discuss with the English engineers."

Want Civic Status Recognized.

"As a representative of Chicago I refuse to be made a flunkey or longer to be given a seat below the salt," said another alderman. "Not because I want to show off, but because I know the official significance of this delegation constantly is being minimized. John W. Beckwith, Mayor Harrison's official representative on this tour, has not yet been called on to respond to toasts, though by all means he should be brought forward. Certain of the engineers grab everything."

Nobody is willing to be quoted by name until the Paris meeting, but everybody is talking. A third alderman said:

"There is little loud talk on this matter because everybody wants to be a good fellow and not get a reputation as a kicker; but patience is ceasing to be a virtue. Chicago is losing the dignified publicity that would come if emphasis were placed on the fact that it has sent an important civic body abroad."

Trouble Starts on Voyage.

It now has been discovered that trouble began as long ago as the Atlantic voyage, when the engineers and some lawyers called a private meeting to discuss European arrangements and failed to invite the aldermen to attend the meeting. This fact leaked out through one man who is both a lawyer and a city official.

The aldermen were furious and made an unholy row when they learned that a secret meeting had discussed plans for introducing the element of rank and prestige into the European social movements of the delegation. There was such a row that the whole matter hurriedly was dropped and the aldermen attended all future meetings and the matter of ranking members never was discussed again.

Inspect London Subway Lines.

Under the guidance of John E. Wilkie, representing the Chicago surface traction lines, the delegation inspected tramways, tubes, and tunnels today.

"We saw enough," Mr. Wilkie said, "to demonstrate that general traffic tunnels can be made bright, noiseless, clean, and attractive. She same applies to tubes where electric trains make eighteen miles hourly, including stops, whereas the Chicago elevated lines make only eighteen miles hourly, excluding stops."

The commission was much impressed with the admirable ventilation of the railway passenger tube trains. At a depth of sixty-eight feet the air was dry, clean, and sweet. It was said to be the same at a depth of 192 feet. As all of the deep tubes are of single bore, the trains serve as ventilating plungers. The air also frequently is revitalized by electricity and washed. None of the headachy sensations produced by New York underground lines were felt by our party.

All the tubes and approaches are scrupulously clean. Elevators and escalators are numerous and extraordinarily smooth running.

Alderman after alderman kept saying, "This is the last word," and Ald. Geiger exclaimed, "Will the day ever come when Chicago can have this?"

Ald. Nance inspected the Kings college hospital today and said it is the finest hospital in the world and that the Cook county hospital might well have been modeled on it.

All of the party were deeply touched by the extensive system of caring for and curing invalided and crippled children during their elementary school life. Residential schools have been built for such children and the schools are visited daily by excellent doctors.

CASH REGISTER CO. GIVEN $10,000 FINE IN MICHIGAN.

Anti-Trust Law Charge by Rival Corporation Brings Conviction of Dayton, O., Firm.

Lansing, Mich., July 25.—The state Supreme court today found the National Cash Register company of Dayton, O., guilty of unlawful restraint of trade and imposed a fine of $10,000.

The company is restrained from doing business in Michigan until the fine is paid.

The decision was returned in the case of Henry J. James, representing the American Cash Register company, who charged that the National Cash register company was violating the so-called Michigan anti-trust law, in that it indulged in excessive competition against certain competitors and thereby forced them out of business.

MOSQUITO PEST IN JACKSON PARK

Correspondent Would Stir Up Commissioners on the South Side.

DON'T BE IMPATIENT.

BY W. A. EVANS, M. D.

"Why don't you turn the hose on the south park commissioners and wake them up enough to cause them to take a feeble interest in your anti-mosquito crusade?"

This is the opening paragraph of a letter written to THE TRIBUNE and signed J. H. M., in spite of the fact that the south park commissioners, some two weeks ago, voluntarily offered to coöperate with THE TRIBUNE in its efforts to rid the residents of Chicago of the insect.

However, since that offer enthuiasm in the project seemed to have subsided, for nothing has been done to quell the annoyance in the public parks, the place of all places that should be freed.

Jackson Park Alive with 'Em.

Hence the letter such as the above, the burden of which is as follows:

"Mosquitoes don't rain down. They hatch. What is more, they all hatch in water. And, further, they never go far from their native puddles.

"Jackson park is swarming with mosquitoes. One cannot go out there and sit down on hot evenings without being set upon by invisible clouds of the blood suckers. Now, these insects did not breed in Kalamazoo. They were raised right in the park. Indeed, the south park commissioners are unwittingly maintaining one of the most extensive mosquito hatcheries to be found anywhere in the middle west, and I have traveled some.

Great Place for Wrigglers.

"There are hundreds of sprinklers in Jackson park running night and day, and each of these are attached to a hydrant and operated through a hose. Every one of the hoses and hydrants leak at the place of attachment and thereby maintains a puddle and an area of seepage. These puddles make ideal breeding places for mosquitoes. Not even the fish can get at the 'wrigglers.'"

Chicago's park system ranks with the best in the world, Mr. J. H. M. The South park commissioners have always adopted modern improvements. If there is delay in the matter of exterminating the mosquitoes in your district there must be some good reason.

DIES ON TOUR OF EUROPE.

Miss Minnie Charlton of Chicago, Who Became Ill in May, Is Dead in London.

Miss Minnie Charlton of 4288 Greenview avenue, who was taken suddenly ill last May while traveling in England with her sisters, Miss May Charlton and Mrs. W. H. Lawton, died yesterday in London, according to a cablegram received here by relatives. Miss Charlton was a daughter of the late James Charlton of 453 Belmont avenue, and a sister of George Charlton, general passenger agent of the Chicago and Alton.

MOOSE PARADE IN STYLE

March in Michigan Avenue in Shirt Sleeves.

"HOWDY, PAP!" THEIR CRY

Delegates on Way to Milwaukee Convention.

Nearly 3,000 members of the Loyal Order of Moose celebrated "Moose day" yesterday with a parade down Michigan avenue and through the loop district. There were 200 highly decorated automobiles, with flags, banners, and paper plumes flying from them.

The parade was staged in anticipation of the national convention of the order, which opens in Milwaukee tomorrow. Several thousand of the delegates stopped over in Chicago in order to attend the dedication exercises for one of the new buildings at Mooseheart, north of Aurora on the Fox river, which takes place today.

Capt. Healy Leads Parade.

The parade was led by a squad of mounted police. Following the police were Capt. Healy of the mounted police, who was grand marshal of the parade, and First Deputy Chief of Police Herman F. Schuettler, with the other marshals, on horseback.

Close to the front was a large float on automobile trucks. It contained three stuffed moose standing in an imitation of wild and rocky scenery.

The "Moosers" who marched were dressed appropriately for the summer weather. They wore white trousers, white shirts without coats, and straw hats. Over their shoulders they carried banners bearing the Moose cry of "Howdy Pap." The expression, which is expected to be the slogan at the Milwaukee convention, is derived from the first letters of the three qualities for which the organization stands—purity, aid, and progress.

"Where's Teddy?" Cry.

The paraders were somewhat of a puzzle to many of the spectators. They were frequently called "Bull Moosers" and there were cries of "Where's Teddy?"

The Moose institution at Mooseheart was represented by a float thirty feet long, pulled by an automobile truck. Inside the pillars that held up the roof of the float were the thirty orphans who are being cared for and trained at the vocational school of the order.

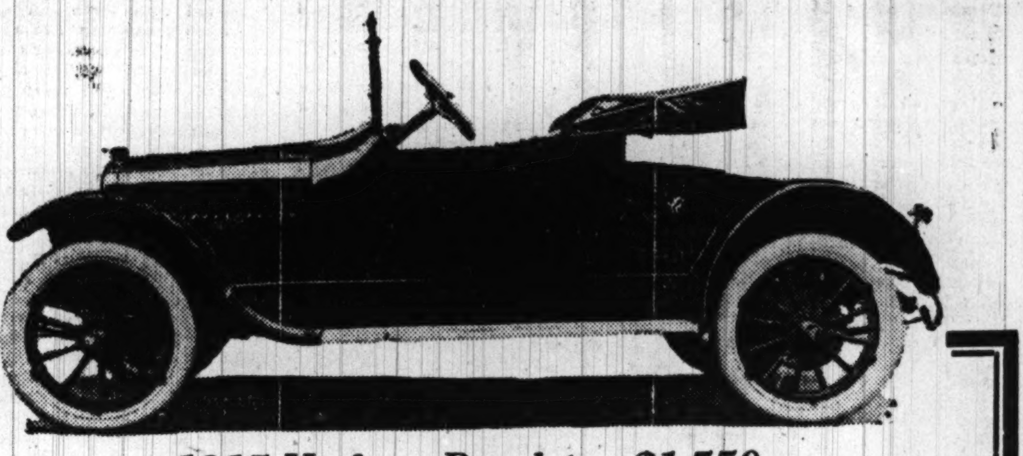
Another float had a live bear in a cage. There were signs indicating the bear was to be an interesting feature of the initiation of several hundred Moose which took place last night at the Auditorium theater.

These Cities Represented.

Among the cities that were represented with delegations in the parade were Sharon, Pa.; Granite City, Colo.; Denver, Colo.; Oakland, Cal.; Milwaukee, Wis.; Pittsburgh, Pa.; Reno, Nev.; Washington state; Waynesboro, Pa.; Los Angeles, Cal., and Clarksville, Tenn. Several hundred more Moose reached Chicago later last night for the excursion to Moosheart this morning.

Police Raid Alleged Handbook.

Six men were arrested yesterday afternoon by detectives under Sergt. William Schubert in a raid on an alleged handbook at 227 West Madison street. Frank Nola, 1725 North Clark street, was booked as the keeper.



1915 Hudson Roadster, $1,550

Justly called—The Ideal Roadster

This new roadster of the HUDSON family has won instantaneous approval—and rightly, too. For the HUDSON engineers—the whole 48 of them—have spent 3 years in perfecting it. Now your dream of the ideal roadster has come true.

The useful roadster

This roadster is a most useful model. Business men who drive their own cars find it ideal for going to and from business and for quick trips through the day. Its large, roomy seat is built for three people—a new feature filling a long-felt want. You will like this car for touring, too—ample space under deck for suit cases, and equipped with trunk rack.

Ladies like it for shopping. It is delightfully designed for calling and for matinees. Many women prefer it to the electric.

The easily operated car

The motor is started by the pressure of a foot pedal. This car, like all HUDSON sixes, is easier to handle than an electric. It is faster; its radius of travel is unlimited; it has the power for any hill or any road.

Shifting of gears is rarely necessary, so flexible is the six-cylinder motor.

Geyler service guarantees HUDSON satisfaction

Your HUDSON car will be in service every day in the year. Geyler owners of HUDSONS will tell you that. Their cars are always "on the street." This is due to the Geyler Service for HUDSONS. We sell you the HUDSON for your pleasure and satisfaction. And we keep it so by regular examinations of your car. We go over your car at intervals. We fill oil and grease cups; inspect the brakes; test the motor; examine electrical connections. We make all adjustments that are necessary. You have that delightfully contented feeling of knowing that your HUDSON Car is in fine condition—and properly looked after always.

Ask any HUDSON owner why he likes the HUDSON. He will tell you the HUDSON is the best car he ever had and the Geyler Guaranteed Service keeps it so.

1915 Roadsters now on exhibition.
Declared by thousands of motorists to be the handsomest car of the day.

THE real estate market suffered from the extreme hot weather of the week, which subdued the activities of both broker and investor and materially augmented the exodus from the city, which set in immediately after the "Fourth."

There was a surprisingly good showing in the cheaper sort of property, the movement of which was nearly up to that of the previous week, but there was a woeful dearth of transactions of any particular magnitude, and as a whole the market was of a dull and uninteresting character.

There was one event in the downtown district which excited considerable interest—the partition sale of the premises 10-12 is also 20¾x80 feet, so that its front, between State and Dearborn streets, which was acquired by John Kranz, confectioner, who owned an undivided half interest, as well as the 20x80 feet adjoining on the east. The premises 10-2 is also 20¾x80 feet, so that its acquirement gives Mr. Kranz a holding 40x80 feet.

The property was bid in by John F. Cella for $150,000, the value placed upon it by the court appraisers, and, while it first was given out that Mr. Cella had acquired the property on his own personal account, it subsequently was admitted the real purchaser was Mr. Kranz, whose daughter, Florence Kranz, had acquired an undivided half interest in the property in 1911 for $55,500.

The lot is improved with a four story and basement building. Excluding the building, which is an old one and of little value, the sale was at the rate of about $7,500 a front foot and $90 a square foot. The board of review valued the property at $108,956.

This was the only transaction in the downtown district, where conditions continue to be exceedingly dull. There are some deals on, but they are moving slowly and prospective purchasers are becoming more and more insistent on concessions from holders.

There were several fairly sizable transactions in outside property, including business, flat, and hotel property, the latter being the Hotel Newberry on Dearborn avenue, north of Chicago avenue, which is said to have been sold by Fred E. Lee and others for about $150,000.

Probably the most interesting event of the week in outside property was the several purchases of John Hamilton, the builder, in what is termed the "South Shore" district, around Seventy-first and Seventieth streets and Paxton, Merrill, and Cahokia avenues. His purchases comprised altogether 2,625 feet of frontage, for which he is said to have paid about $85,000, and it is announced he plans the improvement of much of this during the coming fall with three story apartment buildings and business blocks to cost around $200,000.

He purchased from Philo C. Difendorf 600 feet, east front, on Paxton avenue between Seventieth and Seventy-first streets, also the northeast and northwest corners of Merrill avenue, 100 feet on Merrill and 125 feet on Seventy-first street. George C. Bour & Co. represented both parties. The seller acquiried the property in May last and is said to have taken a neat profit in his sale to Mr. Hamilton.

He also purchased from Mark A. Cronin 600 feet of east frontage on Cahokia avenue between Seventieth and Seventy-first streets, W. K. Young representing both parties. The northeast corner of Cahokia avenue and Seventy-first street, 125x100 feet, was purchased through McKey & Poague, as well as the northwest corner of Chappel and Seventy-first street, which was owned by the estate of M. McKay Tuttle. It is stated that these, together with other purchases recently made by Mr. Hamilton in this vicinity, give him a total of over 3,500 feet.

These purchases, together with the big subdivision to be opened by W. E. Harmon & Co. at Cottage Grove avenue and Seventy-ninth street, will serve to attract attention to this district, which has been developing at a rapid rate during the past two years.

W. K. Young of W. K. Young & Bro., who is a firm believer in the future of this district, says:

"Chicago is growing steadily, surely, southward toward the foot of Lake Michigan, the mouth of the Calumet river, the city's natural harbor, where the eastern trunk lines sweep around the south end of the lake and connect with the western and southern lines through the Belt line system. The Calumet region adjoining and within the corporate limits of Chicago is destined to become the greatest industrial distributing center in the United States. The geographical location of the city makes this a certainty.

"The south side center of population is moving rapidly south. Twenty-five years ago the zone of population was in the vicinity of Thirty-ninth street, four miles from the downtown center. Today it has about reached Sixty-third street, seven miles from the downtown center. Over 90 per cent of the property lying north of Sixty-third street and east of Halsted street to the lake is improved.

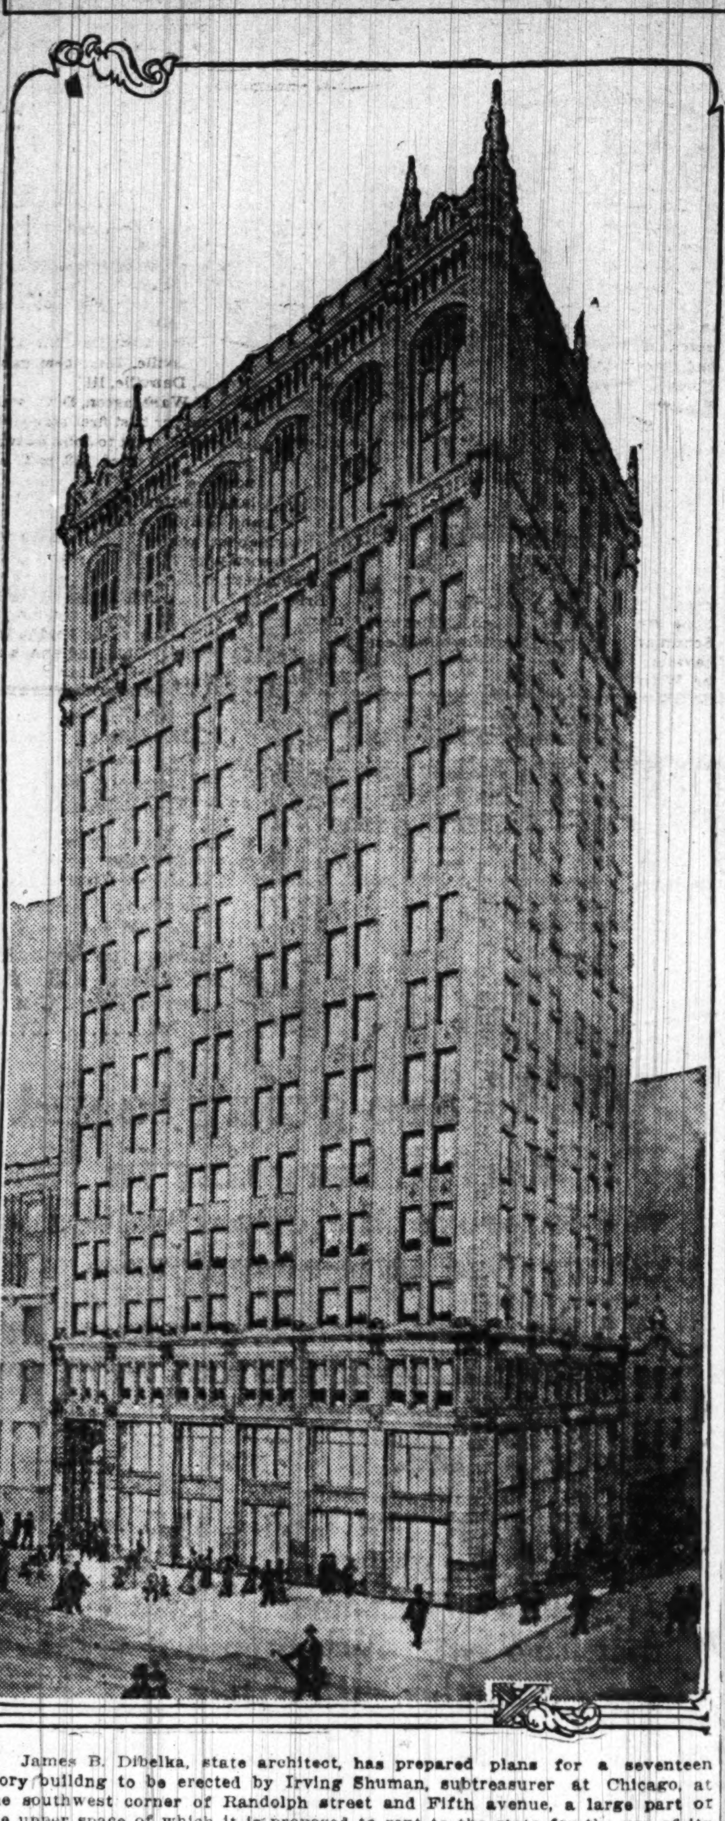
"Vacant frontage in the best residence section of the south side, Kenwood, Hyde Park, Woodlawn, and Englewood, is practically exhausted. Taking these facts into consideration it is easy to see that the principal building operations of the future will be in the territory south of Sixty-third street, and within twenty years the center of the south side population will be shifted many miles south of Sixty-third street.

"Practically all the great manufacturing industries, employing from 1,000 men upwards, that Chicago is steadily drawing from all parts of the country, especially from the east, will be located in this region. With the extensions and improvements of surface car line transportation and the 5 cent fare to the extreme southern limits of the city, coupled with the improving of the Calumet harbor, the developments in this part of the city during the next ten years, are bound to be on a huge scale."

Shuman Building as Planned to House Chicago State Offices.



James B. Dibelka, state architect, has prepared plans for a seventeen story building to be erected by Irving Shuman, subtreasurer at Chicago, at the southwest corner of Randolph street and Fifth avenue, a large part of the upper space of which it is proposed to rent to the state for the use of its various Chicago offices, now scattered throughout the city.

Mr. Shuman declared yesterday there was nothing to the story that the plans for the erection of the building had been abandoned because of the inability of the state to enter into a lease for a longer term than two years plus ninety days. He said he had looked into that matter some time ago, and that in any event he would go ahead with the construction of the building, even if the state failed to rent any of the space. He said the question of the term of the proposed lease had not yet been gone into, but he expected no trouble from that source.

The space to be occupied by the state comprises about 75 per cent of the upper fifteen floors, for which the state is to pay $1.25 a square foot. He said that anything approaching this quantity of space is now costing the state about $1.58 a square foot.

The proposed building will occupy a lot fronting sixty feet on Randolph street and 100 feet on Fifth avenue and will cost about $700,000. Stores will occupy the ground floor and a restaurant the second floor.

S. W. Straus has arranged to underwrite a 6 per cent serial bond issue for $400,000, bearing 6 per cent, secured by the building and leasehold interest in the land occupied by it.

Leases and Loans.

EDGAR M. SNOW & CO. closed during the week a loan of $100,000 for five years at 5 per cent, secured upon the premises at the northwest corner of South Water street and Fifth avenue, 80x55 feet, extending to the river, improved with a four story brick business block containing stores and offices.

* * *

S. W. Straus is trustee in a loan of $100,000, eight years at 6 per cent, to the University School for Girls, secured by the property at 1106-12 Lake Shore drive, between Elm and Cedar streets, with new school building in course of construction.

* * *

Joseph and Morris Cohen, doing business as the Boston Shoe company, have leased the store in the North Avenue Auditorium building at 341 West North avenue from Emanuel Herzog for a term of five years at a graded rent averaging $135 a month. The rate is said to be a record for that part of North avenue.

* * *

E. J. Johnson of B. A. Thorpe's office has leased for the Lehman estate a store 17½x35 feet in the Rector building at 105 South Clark street to be occupied by the Fischer's Raincoat Shop for the sale in addition to raincoats of hats, furs, and overcoats. The lease is for five years at a term rent of $25,000.

* * *

E. M. Griesheimer & Co. have leased to the Ford Motor Car company for the Renault Selling Branch of 719 Fifth avenue, New York City, the store at 2426 Michigan avenue for a term at an annual rent of $3,200.

* * *

S. Yorndorf & Co. have made a loan of $25,000 for seven years at 6 per cent in the form of a serial bond issued to Frederick and Percival De St. Aubin on the fourteen apartment building now in course of erection at the northeast corner of Nineteenth street and Sawyer avenue.

Recorder Joseph F. Connery has addressed a letter to Mitchell D. Follansbee, president of the Chicago Bar association, stating he has been allowed by the circuit judges an additional examiner for the Torrens department and asking that the association select and recommend the names of three or more members of the association deemed especially suitable for the position in question.

TRUSTEES MAY DELAY OUTHET PROPERTY SALE.

Follansbee Takes Appeal from Court Order Allowing Transfer to John G. Shedd.

It is possible there may be some delay in the transfer of the Outhet estate property at the southwest corner of Madison and Franklin streets to John G. Shedd, president of Marshall Field & Co., as George A. Follansbee, as trustee and individually, has prayed an appeal from the order of Judge Windes approving the sale to Mr. Shedd at $670,000. To perfect the appeal, however, it will be necessary to file bonds aggregating $75,000 within thirty days from the time the appeal was prayed, and it is thought this may not be done.

It is stated the work of completing the abstract for the transfer to Mr. Shedd is progressing as rapidly as possible.

It also is stated there will be another sale of the property at 20-24 North Franklin street belonging to the Outhet estate, the trustees exercising the right included in the notice of the recent partition sale at which time the property was bid in by Alonson Follansbee for $96,667 of rejecting the bid in case it seemed insufficient. Mr. Follansbee's bid was thought to be insufficient and the property will again be offered at private or public sale. The property fronts fifty feet with a depth of ninety-one feet and is improved with a four story and basement building. The board of review valued the property at $103,925.

WHERE TENANS COME FROM.

Builder Decides He Does Not Have to Worry About Filling Apartments.

Some years ago a successful builder at the outset of his career began to wonder where he would get tenants to fill his apartment houses, says Construction News.

After he had been in the business a little while he reached the conclusion that one-third of the people who rented his apartments came from out of the city; another third were newly married couples, and the other third came from different parts of Chicago; from localities in which industry had driven out the residence section of the community.

MORE ACTIVITY IN SUBDIVISIONS

Conditions Steadily Improve and Purchases Are for Development.

DEALS ON SOUTH SIDE.

Conditions are steadily improving in the subdivision market, especially where the properties are of an attractive character. Buyers are showing much more discrimination than a year ago and are buying more for improvement than last year when there was much speculative buying.

William E. Harmon & Co. have begun work on a comprehensive plan for the development of the new 150 acre subdivision at Seventy-ninth street and Cottage Grove avenue, known as "Chatham Fields." Permission has been obtained for a deviation in the width of some of the roadways, so as to establish a series of wide center parkings.

Center Parking Arranged.

An artistic gateway of brick and terra cotta, designed by E. H. Bennett, is to be placed at Cottage Grove avenue and Eighty-first street, and a center parking will be carried through Eighty-first street to South Park avenue, a distance of one-half mile.

All the streets are to be especially treated as to parkings. Setbacks are to be established on all residence lots and also a setback from side lines of corner lots. The character of buildings throughout the property is to be controlled, particularly as to residence corners. It is still undecided, however, just what will be done in placing the one-family house, or residence, and the company is seeking the advice of those who are interested in the higher class of development for the south side.

Bartlett & Co.'s Sale.

Frederick H. Bartlett & Co.'s proposed big subdivision sale is attracting much attention because of the exceedingly cheap prices at which the property is to be offered, lots at $49, one half acres at $249, and acres at $499. It is stated there will be little profit in the sale, as it is to be essentially an advertising sale, the firm expecting to profit from the new customers won. It is stated the property is worth more in wholesale tracts than at the prices to be charged in the proposed sale.

The location of the property will be given only to people interested enough to inquire directly of the firm, where plats and other information will be furnished. The firm expects it to be the most successful sale it has ever held.

SUITS FOR COMMISSIONS ENCOURAGED BY COURTS.

Attitude of Judges, Heretofore Hostile, Likely to Bring Many Actions by Brokers.

Real estate brokers will be so much encouraged by the recent decision of the court in the matter of the collection of commissions for transactions that it is likely that the future will see more suits of this kind filed, says Construction News. The courts heretofore have not been friendly to suits for real estate commissions.

An action involving collection of a commission for a transaction of any kind has always been surrounded by so much doubt and uncertainty as to what a jury or a judge might think about it, that it has only been in instances of the most flagrant type that suits have been commenced. Several of the best judges on the bench within a very few years have decided that the broker who closes the deal is entitled to the commission, declining absolutely to take any other view of the matter.

Recently, however, two decisions to the contrary have been given. The most recent was that in the case of Eugene A. Bournique against Tracy C. Drake and John B. Drake, in which the court gave a verdict of $27,500. The broker contended that a commission of $30,000 was due him for the sale of the property at the southeast corner of North Wabash avenue and East Washington street to the Marshall Field estate for $1,150,000. The sale was closed in July, 1910. The deal was closed directly by the seller and the purchaser, but Mr. Bournique claimed that it was consummated through his efforts, which the defendants denied.

The court decided early in the hearing that the plaintiff had no case against Tracy C. Drake, all dealings having been with John B. Drake, against whom the verdict was rendered.

REAL ESTATE BOARD ASKS MORE HELP FOR RECORDER.

President R. W. Wolfe Points Out That Torrens Department Work Is Retarded by Congestion.

That additional help is absolutely necessary to meet the pressing demands of the increasing volume of business in the Torrens department of the county recorder's office is set forth in a letter issued to its members by the Cook county real estate board yesterday. The letter points out that much more than one-half of the taxation raised in Cook county is from real estate and that this burden is increased by the cumbersome, expensive, and uncertain system of transferring titles. President Richard W. Wolfe, by whom the letter is signed, asks that the matter of rewriting the tract books be given immediate attention. He says in part:

"The condition of the tract books in the abstract department of the recorder's office is such as to need immediate attention. These books are much congested; the layout when the books were rewritten allowed too little space and had too many lots in the caption. The condition at this time is serious. Thousands of instruments are being recorded every week in these congested books.

"The tract books and the maintenance of them are essential to the Torrens system. In the opinion of real estate men who have to use these books daily and know the condition, unless the work of retranscribing is done without delay great loss will result to the county and the registration of property under the Torrens system will be seriously retarded."

The property was acquired by Mrs. Curtis about two years ago from George Neice of Foreman Bros.' banking company. OPEN VS. CLOSED SHOPS THRASHED OUT AT HEARING

Former Essential to Success Say Employers; Untrue Assert Union Men.

U. S. INQUIRY CLOSES

Employers and representatives of organized labor presented their divergent views on the relative advantages and disadvantages of the "closed shop" and the "open shop" at yesterday's hearing before the United States commission on industrial relations at the Hotel La Salle.

While industrial affairs in general were discussed the special subject of the hearing related to the printing industry and the metal trades. It was the commission's closing session in Chicago at this time. Several witnesses who were subpoenaed to testify, including Julius Rosenwald, could not be reached because of lack of time.

Investigate Mining Next.

Their testimony will be taken at a subsequent hearing in Chicago following a trip to western cities. The next hearing will be held in Lead, S. D., on Aug. 3 and 4, when mining conditions in that vicinity will be investigated. From there the commission goes to Butte, Mont.

The open shop, or nonunion shop, as some employers called it, was held to be absolutely essential to efficiency in production. This was so, according to the witnesses, both in the metal trades and the printing industry.

Much technical testimony relating to the operation of these industries was presented to throw light on shop conditions and give reasons for the views held.

Assert Unions Break Contracts.

The employers insisted labor union officials disregarded contracts when they found it advantageous to do so. They held that the cost of production in nonunion plants was lower and that conditions of employment were as good as in the union factories.

Here is where wide disagreement appeared. Witnesses for the unions insisted that only in union shops were the conditions and wages satisfactory. They said that the employés wanted the highest possible wages and shorter hours. They were not interested in welfare work done in their behalf.

"Our men and the women, too, care nothing for the shower baths and elaborate rest rooms provided for them in nonunion shops," said Charles W. Fry, business agent of the Machinists' union. "What they want is wages and leisure so they can enjoy rest and baths at their own home."

These Witnesses Heard.

The witnesses were:

Frank C. Caldwell of the H. W. Caldwell & Son company.

Numerous and widely divergent opinions were given as reasons for unrest in the industrial world. Mr. Caldwell suggested it was due to a species of "circular insanity."

Mr. Wright gave a number of causes of industrial unrest. In addition to dilatory tactics of the interstate commerce commission in the rate case and lack of executive ability in many industries, he said 25 per cent of the printers in Chicago are out of employment, and this, he said, is a consequence of the first named causes.

"Lack of education is another cause," said he. "Competition between union and nonunion men, prison labor, and unfair conditions are other causes of unrest.

"As a remedy for this every child should be sent to school and given an adequate education and books should be supplied the parents at a cost within the reach of the poorest.

"We should have a sufficient force of school teachers to take care of all children in school. When the young do go to work their schooling should be continued until they are capable of earning a living in competition with their fellows."

Caldwell Speaks for Open Shop.

Mr. Caldwell said his company operates an open shop. He said employers are not opposed to labor unions as such, but only to the evils that are inherent in them.

"We object to unions for the same reason that the public objects to anything that savors of a trust or monopoly," Mr. Caldwell said. "They object to violence and coercion in the unions, to limiting the number of apprentices, to limitation of output, and to the idea of a minimum wage."

President Perkins of the cigarmakers, who was the last witness, charged the unrest against the large influx of immigrants from southeastern Europe who come here and compete with native born workers, whose standard of life is higher and consequently are unable to work as cheaply as the new arrivals. This, he contended, was a crying evil in the industry represented by his union.

Favors Hygienic Bureau.

Dr. Sachs said there should be in the department of labor a bureau in charge of hygienic regulations in industry, and he favored a minimum standard established for such regulation for the entire country.

Dr. Sachs told of the advantages obtained by the commission of the tuberculosis institute. Dr. Sachs listed:

Early detection of the disease.

The protection of the worker.

The spread of proper conditions of ventilation.

The proper assignment of work to the different physical capacities of the workers.

Greater general efficiency.

The change of attitude of employers.

The early diagnosis of various diseases.

The control of sources of infection.

The gradual appraisal of harmful working conditions.

Terms It School of Health.

The conferences of the Chicago Tuberculosis institute were declared by Dr. Sachs to have been a school of health for both employés and employers.

Industrial sickness laws and validity insurance were indorsed by Dr. Sachs.

At the close of Dr. Sachs' testimony, Commissioner John B. Lennon said:

"I want to commend publicly the work of the Chicago Tuberculosis institute. It has done an excellent work for humanity."

Mr. Hibbard spoke of shop conditions, industrial strife, and class legislation from the employer's angle.

He made a plea for the small employer, who, he declared, suffered from the legislation directed against the big firms

"As to the charge that unions wean the loyalty of the workmen from the employers to the union, I feel I have a right to insist on the loyalty of my men. When agitators have disaffected them, if I know of a disloyal union man, I let him go. The restriction of output by the unions you ask about is opposed, but it exists. The closed shop is opposed for it inevitably makes for limitation of output and resulting higher cost. The public pays the bill."

Picketing was condemned by Mr. Hibbard.

"We hear of peaceful picketing. I don't know what it means. I have never seen any. Picketing means coercion and threat. If it does not mean that it is not picketing.

"The charge that employers begin violence is absurd. No employer is going to bring publicity on himself and hurt his business.

"The particular crime of violence, then, I want to say, is not a crime of the employer. It is a crime of the unions."

Mr. Fry expressed resentment against the open shop and working conditions of the Link Belt company, the president of which, Charles W. Piez, had been the first witness before the commission, and had decried the closed shop arrangement.

"That shop of Mr. Piez may look nice on the outside," he said, "but we don't care for that. It looks about as nice as the bridewell," he shouted. "These parlors and shower baths and rest rooms don't mean much to the men. We just want better wages and shorter hours in the closed shop. Mr. Piez's open shop, I want to say, means a nonunion shop. You couldn't find a union man in it with a fine tooth comb.

"If one went in, he'd be removed for cause."

"What causes industrial unrest?" he was asked.

"A feeling on the part of many of us, for one thing, that the employers have the benefit of the courts. That big business has the best of it in the strikes."

Favors the Open Shop.

Mr. Donnelley was next called as a witness. Mr. Donnelley described the labor troubles in the printing trade and insisted on the principle of the open shop.

"It is really a nonopen shop. If the unions would accept the open shop principle we would employ the union men in it. But, of course, they do not. They only want to get their organization in to embarrass me. So we do not have it.

"The union interferes with efficiency."

Announcement of the Formation of the E. G. Pauling Syndicate

Be a Subdivider

Share in the Big Profits Now Being Made Marketing Property in This Rapidly Growing City

Here Is Your Opportunity to Become a Member of a Syndicate Marketing a New Subdivision and Make Subdividers' Profits

We have For Sale a Tract of Land bounded by Belmont Avenue, Diversey Avenue, N. Kostner (44th) Avenue and Kolmar (45th Court) Avenue, subdivided into 486 lots, each 30 feet front and known as

E. G. Pauling's Belmont Avenue Addition

A syndicate of 486 shares—at $300 each—is being formed to purchase this property at acreage prices and place it on the market.

An offer of $4,000 cash has already been received for the two lots (60 feet) at the southwest corner of Belmont and Kostner Avenues. Even the least desirable lots in the Subdivision should not sell for less than $300 each—their net cost to shareholders—since similar lots are selling at a minimum of $550 half a mile to the west and at a minimum of $890 a quarter of a mile to the east.

Statistics of building operations, extensions of car lines, and your own observation will prove conclusively that the Northwest Side is growing more rapidly than any other section of Chicago.

Marked in black on this map is our tract of land now surrounded by wonderful development. Car lines have recently been completed to the east of it on 40th Avenue, to the west of it on 48th Avenue, and the Belmont Avenue line, now terminating at 40th Avenue, has been ordered extended to 48th Avenue by the City Council. Rails are being laid in Fullerton Avenue on the south from 40th to 48th Avenues.

It is in the heart of the square bounded by these four car lines and within four blocks of the great Milwaukee Avenue car line, which intersects Belmont at 40th Avenue, only half a mile east of this property.

Population is coming. Values are going up.

Read and act! Act today!

Just WHAT This Syndicate IS

We offer for public subscription 486 shares (each share representing the right to one lot in the subdivision), at $300 per share each; $50 at time of subscription, balance on very liberal terms.

Not more than ten shares may be subscribed for by any one person. Thus every member of the syndicate is placed upon exactly the same basis.

This will be of value in more than one way. The selling price of any given tract of property is largely dependent upon the number of people interested in it. This property is worth $300 per lot now as acreage, but as soon as more than 400 people become interested in it, its value will go up because of that very fact.

That means that YOU will profit by the value YOU create.

And you will also profit by the values other people are creating in developing the surrounding property.

Already more than 100 shares have been subscribed for, so there are not to exceed 350 shares actually open to public subscription.

Most of the lots will sell for much more than the subscription price for syndicate shares. For instance—all the corner lots and the Belmont and Diversey frontage. Business property on Milwaukee Avenue, only six blocks from this tract, recently rented on a valuation of $1,000 per front foot. And it is a fact that $22,000 cash was offered for the corner lot, 107 feet front, on Belmont Avenue, two blocks west of our property. This offer, however, was rejected by the owner.

No taxes of any kind are to be paid by purchasers before May, 1915. There is no mortgage of any kind on this property.

Title is vested in The Chicago Title and Trust Company, which will furnish complete abstract of title and guarantee policy on each lot.

The value of the property at the price offered and the plans of the syndicate are open to the most rigid inspection.

Look at the Map—There Is Money in It—Money for You!

Although the map is but a poor, weak substitute for a visit to this district of marvelous development—still, it indicates the trend of population, the extension of surface car lines and the railroad facilities, which make a fertile field for the operations of the subdivider.

Surely you have not failed to notice the remarkable development of subdivision property in Chicago during the past two years.

Transportation lines are striving with might and main to keep pace with the growth.

All this means profits to those who buy ahead of the crowd. Real estate has piled up tremendous fortunes in Chicago in the past, and the opportunities it offers to those who can be both wise and daring are as great now as they ever were.

This is the fourth largest city in the world. It has grown to this position from nothing within the lifetime of men now living. It is still growing at a rate of speed that spells untold fortunes for those who put their money in real estate in the path of its growth.

Transportation Facilities

Transportation is of vital importance to any community, and in this regard this section is peculiarly favored. It is paralleled on the east by the 40th Avenue line, connecting with Fullerton, Armitage and North Avenues, Division Street, Grand and Chicago Avenues, Lake Street, Madison Street, Harrison Street, 12th, 18th and 22nd Streets. Immediately to the west the new 48th Avenue through route makes the same connections.

Milwaukee Avenue cars, direct to the loop, are only four blocks from the northeast corner of the tract.

Fullerton and Belmont Avenue car lines now end at 40th Avenue, but rails are already being laid in Fullerton Avenue to 48th Avenue, and Belmont Avenue cars will run to 48th Avenue within a year. These lines run due east into Lake View, and make connections with every car line running north from the loop.

It is apparent that this district is "NEXT" in the development of Chicago.

Parks

The Northwest Park Commissioners have recognized this fact by purchasing a splendid tract ONLY ONE BLOCK SOUTH OF THIS PROPERTY. This makes CERTAIN that this will be a choice residence district.

Schools

Four blocks due north of these lots is the half million dollar Carl Schurz High School, designed to be the educational center of the Northwest Side, and one of the finest high schools ever erected by any city in the United States.

Public and parochial schools are also close at hand, for this tract is adjacent to a well settled district.

Building Restrictions

All buildings for residence purposes must be built of brick, stone or cement blocks. Shall be not less than one and one-half (1½) stories in height and shall cost not less than $2,500. All buildings must set back fifteen feet (15 feet) from front lot line.

$50.00 Cash—$50.00 in Thirty Days Entitles You to Participate in the Profits of the Syndicate.

For twenty-four years continuously we have specialized in the buying and selling of West Side Real Estate. Our judgment has made many men rich. We feel that in offering these 486 lots under the plan above mentioned we are giving you an opportunity to make some real profit, with a very small investment. Everyone connected with us is taking shares and we are advising all our customers to do likewise.

KING SWAMPED IN IRISH ISSUE

Failure of Home Rule Peace Conference Discredits English Sovereign.

LIBERALS BADLY DIVIDED

BY T. P. O'CONNOR.
[SPECIAL CABLE TO THE TRIBUNE.]
[Copyright: 1914: By The Tribune Company.]

LONDON, July 25.—Ireland is a maelstrom that drags everything in its whirling waters, and so this week it has involved the king.

The first announcement of the conference at the king's initiative spread equal alarm and disapprobation among all political parties. The Labor men roundly denounced and the Liberals gave Mr. Asquith but chill encouragement, while the Nationalists submitted.

Curiously enough most disapprobation and most apprehension were found among the Tories. These first impulses were partially mitigated by Mr. Asquith's almost passionate acceptance of all responsibility and the desire of the Liberal journalists not to hamper the peace attempts at the conference cooled their angry tone. But some, including such sober journals as the Westminster Gazette and the Manchester Guardian, continue to growl ominously, especially at the passage in the king's speech which, speaking of civil war as being "on the lips of the most responsible and sober minded of the people," seemed to give sanction to the Orange threats of rebellion.

Liberals Are Indignant.

Even Asquith's laborious attempt to explain this utterance has failed to mitigate the Liberal indignation, and altogether the position of the king is best summed up in the saying of one of his courtiers, that, "while in the old days the king could do no wrong, the king in modern days can do no right." The action of the king would have been justified if the conference had made peace.

But the Irish members of both parties knew from the first moment that a compromise was equally impossible to both and they listened with equal and contemptuous scorn to the English mediators, ignorant of Irish conditions in germinating peace where there was no peace.

The irreconcilable point was between the demand for six counties by the Orangemen and the Nationalists refusing to concede more than four. Sir Edward Carson, speaking with his usual frankness, declared that neither he nor Mr. Redmond could give up Tyrone and Fermanagh and that therefore no reconciliation was possible.

The proceedings of the conference were conducted by all sides with friendliness of language and demeanor. But this deadlock existed. But for the desire of the English representatives the conference would have ended in a couple of hours.

Attacks Carson's Position.

What is the explanation of Carson adhering to such an impossible demand as the denial of the right of the Catholic majority in Tyrone and Fermanagh to include while insisting on the right of a similar majority in Derry and Armagh to exclude? It is first his dread that his Tyrone volunteers, who are proportionately most numerous and most resolute among his volunteers, would repudiate and renounce him if he yielded them up. But the second most powerful influence in preventing a deal with the Nationalists is that the English Tory party now is generally convinced that Ulster, even if it break out into hopeless rebellion, can be exploited to destroy the present ministry and produce a general election in which the Tories might win a big electoral victory. Further, Carson obstinately adheres to the opinion that Asquith and the other ministers will never have nerve to face a rebellion in Ulster. There is a further reliance on the unwillingness of the king to sign a home rule bill without insisting on an immediate appeal to the country. Some hope is also placed on the notorious hostility of some powerful members of the cabinet to face an issue of civil war and their equally notorious sympathy with the Orange demand for an immediate general election.

Struggle Within Liberal Party.

Thus at this moment the Irish controversy is diverted largely into a tremendous struggle within the Liberal ministry and the Liberal party as to the question whether and under what conditions the next general election shall take place, and on this question there is a certain cleavage between the attitude of some cabinet ministers and the attitude of the Liberal rank and file. It is feared that some ministers may yield to the king's pressure and accept an immediate general election in return for getting the king's signature to the home rule bill, while the rank and file of the Liberals passionately and unanimously demand that Asquith should force the king to dismiss him rather than submit to such a claim. The rank and file of Liberals hold that the acceptance of the king's condition would be a negation of Liberalism and further proclaim that a general election, held after such a surrender would mean a crushing overthrow of the Liberal party, while the election on the issue of the king against the ministry would, with equal certainty, promise an overwhelming Liberal victory. This struggle is still going on and men breathlessly await the result.

Home Rule Now a Certainty.

But one thing emerges. The failure of the king's conference tends to warn him against any further interference. The whole struggle which brings satisfaction to Irishmen is that amid all the complexities, perils, and uncertainties of the present situation the home rule bill must go on the statute books.

The fate of the emending bill still hangs in the balance. Many Liberals and most of the Irish wished that it should be now dropped, as it is evidently not going to buy off the Orange opposition. While another section insisted that Asquith is bound to present his bill as vindicating his desire for a reasonable compromise and as throwing a final responsibility of breaking peace on the party and the house of lords.

The ministry in the meantime have announced their resolve to bring in the bill, and this creates a very awkward situation. The Irish party feel most reluctant ever to support the exclusion of Ulster by direct vote, and in the absence of that acceptance of home rule by Orangemen which exclusion was expected to buy. On the other hand, if they refuse to support the bill, it will probably be defeated, and defeat of the bill might mean a breakup of the cabinet.

The final rumor of the week is that Orangemen at last have made up their minds for that coup which they have been threatening so long, and there is talk of an invasion of Tyrone or Derry city. But these threats have been so frequent that the people have ceased to believe them, and unless Orange provocation should create a nationalist outburst these proceedings are more likely to end in opera bouffe than grim tragedy.

But one never knows.

GERMANY TO BUY OUT AMERICAN TOBACCO TRUST.

[SPECIAL CABLE TO THE TRIBUNE.]

BERLIN, July 25.—With the view of obtaining a new income for the government of $25,000,000 to $30,000,000, and at the same time kill off the English and American trusts which control one-fourth of the German trade, the ministry is making plans for a cigaret monopoly bill which will be submitted to the reichstag in the fall.

According to the tentative plans the government will take over all the cigaret factories in Germany. It will operate the larger ones and close the smaller establishments. In order to get control of these factories it is proposed to issue a loan of $125,000,000.

The law, if it is enacted, will forbid the establishment of any new factories. There will be a great increase in the present tariff of $1.25 per 100 pounds on imported cigarets.

ITALIANS TAKE LITTLE INTEREST IN FRISCO FAIR.

[SPECIAL CABLE TO THE TRIBUNE.]

ROME, July 25.—Much doubt is expressed here as to the success of the Italian section at the Panama-Pacific exposition at San Francisco in 1915. Of the five known exhibitors one inventor has an infallible cure for gout; another manufactures boots decorated in brilliant hues. The Italian tricolor will probably prevent the total collapse of the scheme, for which the government has voted $400,000. The ministers of the various departments have sent out circulars in all directions urging Italian manufacturers to send exhibits.

HAS 800,000 OFFICIALS.

LONDON, July 25.—The analysis of occupation compiled from the latest census return for England and Wales is instructive if not reassuring. Domestic servants head the list, exceeding the highest productive employment, agriculture, by three-quarters of a million. After agriculture comes coal mining, but next there comes the army of officials, national and local. These number more than 800,000 and exceed the total employed in either the building trades or the cotton industry.

BIG NAVAL SHIP'S DAY IS PASSED?

Admiral Sir Percy Scott Stirs England by His Prediction.

SUBMARINE ITS FOE.

The [illegible] Times

LONDON, July 18.—The opinions with regard to future naval warfare which Admiral Sir Percy Scott expressed recently have created world-wide discussion. The questions he raised were not new, but his uncompromising reply gave to them fresh point and enhanced importance. Sir Percy Scott is admittedly a vigorous thinker, a man of stimulating ideas, and a naval officer with a distinguished record of activity. When, therefore, he announced his belief that the introduction of vessels that swim under the water had entirely done away with the utility of ships that swim on top of the water, it would indeed have been surprising if such a sweeping pronouncement from such a quarter had not raised storm of controversy and dissent.

Attracts Much Criticism.

To the widespread attention which Sir Percy Scott's declaration has received everywhere our columns bear testimony. Not only in this country, but on the continent and in America the subject has been and is being debated and a wide divergence of opinion revealed. Very few appear to have reached the precise position which the admiral has taken up, though many recognize to the full the possibilities of the new weapons, but deprecate hasty conclusions. Others again, like Lord Sydenham, regard his theory as a fantastic dream; and again there are some who condemn as premature and ill advised any public discussion of the subject. By far the larger number, however, desire further enlightenment, or utilize the admiral's declaration of faith as a text for advocating larger expenditure on submarines and aircraft and a warning to watch for and take advantage of every fresh development of naval warfare.

Replies to His Critics.

Sir Percy Scott replies severally to those who have faith in his views as follows:

"The question of whether battleships hould be large or small was publicly under discussion; many people wrote to me for my views on the subject.

"I replied that, in my opinion, the time had arrived when we should cease building battleships and spend the money in increasing the number of our aircraft and submarines.

"You, sir, were kind enough to publish in your paper of June 5 my reasons for coming to this conclusion.

"Many naval officers have written that they agree with me. On the other hand, many critics have expressed opinions that I am premature, that I have assumed what may be a possibility in the future to be a fact of today, that in warfare the torpedo has been disappointing, that the submarine is blind, slow, and easily destroyed.

"None of my critics has given a satisfactory explanation of what our battleships would or could do if we should be at war with a nation well equipped with submarines."

U. S. VS. J. BULL AT GOLF.

H. Gordon Selfridge on American Team; Keeps the Final Score Secret.

[SPECIAL CABLE TO THE TRIBUNE.]

LONDON, July 25.—Sir George Riddell, the newspaper proprietor, who is a great friend and fellow golfer of Chancellor of the Exchequer Lloyd-George, organized an Anglo-American golf match on Thursday at the American Luncheon club. It was provided that the game should be played on the famous Walton Heath course, which is the favorite course of the golfers in the resentp cabinet. It was here that Sir George Riddell built for rental to Lloyd-George the house which was partly destroyed by a suffragist bomb, and which Sir George's fellow club members christened "Riddell's peerage."

The game was played today. The American team consisted of W. C. Teadle, Pomeroy Burton, Wilson Cross, A. J. Stone, R. W. Johnson, Henry W. Thornton, the general manager of the Great Eastern railway; George McKilley, H. Gordon Selfridge, C. S. Colton, Col. Hunsiker, and Walter Phillips.

The British team consisted of Sir George Riddell, Sir Frank Newnes, Robert Donald, editor of the Daily Chronicle; H. F. Sebas, W. J. Evans, editor of the Evening News; Clement Fowler, E. Hudson, R.W. Dodd, Archibald Rider, J. B. Stevenson, and Fred Bowater.

Sir George Riddell entertained the teams at dinner this evening. The American team would not give a very detailed account of the scores, but say that they did fairly well before luncheon, after which the Britishers proved their superiors.

ITALY'S DRAMATIC STAR CUFFS EARS OF MASHER.

[SPECIAL CABLE TO THE TRIBUNE.]

TURIN, Italy, July 25.—Tina di Lorenzo, Italy's greatest dramatic star now on the stage, was walking down the Corso a short time ago when a young man accosted her.

She instantly cuffed his ears, then said loudly in order that the people who saw the action might all hear: "I hope you will prosecute me so that I can tell the world of the shameful lack of respect for women who work in Italy."

The onlookers recognized her and cheered, while the young man made off with haste. She is a great champion of her sex and thinks that the position of Italian women leaves much to be desired.

BOY SCOUTS HAVE "MAYOR."

LONDON, July 25.—Among his other duties Sir Robert Baden-Powell, the chief scout, runs a farm on which boys from all parts of the country are being trained. About forty or fifty lads are learning stock, poultry, fruit, and general farming, market gardening, and handicrafts such as will fit them for careers either at home or in the overseas dominions.

They are divided into patrols of seven scouts, and each patrol works under the leadership of one lad, the patrol leader. This patrol of seven is in partnership for farm work and has a little holding of its own. The leaders are elected by the scouts and form a town council with a "mayor." This body conducts the affairs of the community and administers justice. They hold their meetings in public and their proceedings are conducted on business lines.

KAISER AGAINST BRYAN TREATY

Expected to Reject Plan to Arbitrate Year Before Starting Hostilities.

EVER READY FOR WAR.

[SPECIAL CABLE TO THE TRIBUNE.]

BERLIN, July 25.—The correspondent of THE TRIBUNE learns that Germany will probably not sign Secretary of State Bryan's new arbitration peace treaty providing for the lapse of a year before the beginning of hostilities, during which an international commission will make efforts to obtain an amicable settlement, on the ground that it would destroy Germany's greatest military asset. This is not likely to be the ground assigned for not signing the treaty, but it will be the real reason.

Germany Ready for War.

Germany's argument is that she is "always ready for war at an hour's notice." No other European country is in such shape. Millions of money has been spent to reach this condition, while the entire strategical plans of the general staff have been directed to the manner of taking the quickest offensive move and pouring more men into the field in less time than any possible foe could do so. For this reason, it is argued, it is unreasonable to ask her to surrender an advantage purchased at such cost and at the same time give any nation a whole year to prepare for war.

Would Be Serious Precedent.

German opinion is that Secretary Bryan means well, but that he does not understand European conditions, and least of all those in Germany. Serious difficulties between Germany and the United States are so improbable that Germany has no serious objection to Mr. Bryan's proposal so far as it concerns America, but to sign such a treaty with America would render the refusal of a similar request by another country almost an act of hostility.

T. R. NOT A REAL EDITOR.

LONDON, July 25.—Says the Manchester Guardian:

"It is not quite correct to say, as a New York telegram says, that Mr. Roosevelt has given up the associate editorship of the Outlook. Wide as is the American usage of the word editor, it did not properly apply to Mr. Roosevelt, who on going out of office became attached to the New York Outlook as its principal and very highly paid contributor. He was called contributing editor, a term unknown to us and new in America, and provocative of many jests among Mr. Roosevelt's journalistic friends and opponents."

SIX MILES FOR SEMICOLON.

LONDON, July 25.—Some of the lights of literature in bygone days were great sticklers for perfection in printing. Victor Hugo confessed to a passion for punctuation. He made his printers furnish him with eleven revises of the proofs of "La Legende des Siecles," the last ten of which were required only in order that the commas might be put in the right place. Thomas Campbell was equally fastidious. He once walked six miles to a printing office to have a comma changed into a semicolon.

YOLANDA FEELS HER HIGH RANK.

Italian Princess, Impressed with Own Importance, Worries Gracious Queen Mother.

[SPECIAL CABLE TO THE TRIBUNE.]

TURIN, Italy, July 25.—Princess Yolanda, 13 years old last month, the eldest of King Victor Emmanuel's four children, is profoundly impressed with her rank and importance.

She and her mother, Queen Helena, were in a boat at a small place near Pisa the other day and as usual the queen chatted with the boatman. When they were landing the man lifted the little girl onto the shore, saying:

"There you are, little lady."

"I am not a lady," the royal child indignantly retorted. "I am a princess."

She queen turned to the boatman, saying: "Thank you for lifting her out. She hopes to behave like a little lady, and deserve the title some day."

Thinks Helena Looks Like Queen.

Not long ago the queen and the princess went shopping in Genoa. In a fancy goods store they made several purchases, and the queen talked so amiably to the saleswoman that the latter said:

"Do you know, signora, you are so like our good queen that if I did not know you were no relation I should take you for her sister?"

The queen only smiled and would have walked out pleased with the incident, but Princess Yolanda, who is impulsive, exclaimed: "Mamma is your queen; on't you know that?"

The saleswoman was overcome with confusion and began to murmur excuses. The queen tried to smooth things over and gently reproved her daughter for having put the saleswoman to shame.

"Never say anything that will give people pain or make them uncomfortable," she observed as they walked out of the shop, cheered by all the people in it, who had run up to the royal pair the moment they heard the princess' remark.

Although Princess Yolanda assumes royal dignity she exhibits characteristics of her mother's rude mountain race, the Montenegrins, and is so vigorous and lively that she is sometimes called a tomboy.

While Queen Helena was in the neighborhood of Pisa fishermen were attacked in the water by fish and bitten. One was so badly injured that his comrades asked the police for a carriage to take him to the hospital. Queen Helena happened to hear of the request and immediately sent her own motor car, with the command that the man be taken in it to the best surgeon at once and be well looked after at her expense until his complete recovery.

Crown Prince Is Thoughtful.

Crown Prince Humbert, who will be 10 in September, visited the naval exhibition at Genoa after he finished his first cruise as a royal sailor aboard the man-of-war Puglia. After he had looked over the interesting display his tutor asked how he liked it.

"I think it is very nice," the prince answered. "But I am sure the children who go there would like to ride around the grounds on dromedaries or camels. I shall ask papa to let me send some from San Rossore."

CONRAD FINISHES NOVEL.

LONDON, July 25.—Joseph Conrad has just finished his new long novel. It is a story of the eastern seas and is called "Victory." Although in this work he returns to the familiar ground of his earlier novels, the treatment is altogether new. This "island story" is in its technique as different from "Chance" as "Chance" was from "Lord Jim."

LIPTON'S HOPES OF PEERAGE GONE

SIR THOMAS IS BLAMED.

BY J. O. P. BLAND.

LONDON, July 15.—[Special Correspondence.]—Years ago, in the good old rollicking days of Edward the Pacemaker, it was generally understood and believed that if Sir Thomas Lipton succeeded in bringing back the yacht cup from America his achievement would be rewarded by a seat in the house of peers. Those were the heydays of Lipton—before the firm had been prosecuted for making jam with overripe fruit and selling lead foil wrappers as tea weight, before its wholesale system of bribing and corrupting poorly paid soldiers and clerks had been publicly exposed.

Those were the days when king and kaiser did not disdain to accept Sir Thomas' sumptuous hospitality aboard the Shamrock; when every illustrated paper worthy the name kept a regular place for new portraits of this knightly upholder of England's honr.

Alas, the canteens case has changed all this today, and if Sir Thomas should succeed in defeating the American cup defender there will be no loud pæan of public rejoicings over his victory and no place for him among the hereditary legislators of Great Britain. If Shamrock wins, its builder, designer, and skipper will be applauded, but there is little chance of Sir Thomas Lipton being folded to the proud heart of Britain.

Public Is Unfriendly.

There has been, on the whole, comparatively little severe condemnation of Lipton's share in the army canteens scandal, but it would be a mistake to infer from this that public opinion is likely to whitewash him—no matter how many yacht races he may win. The reticence of the press in this unsavory business is to a great extent the silence of disgust, of dislike of the washing of dirty linen in public. Amongst the great mass of decent citizens, the feeling is steadily growing, and will assuredly find expression in due time, that when Col. Whittaker was sent to jail, when a few government servants were punished for taking Lipton's bribes, and a few of the firm's employés fined for offering them, the real offenders, Sir Thomas and his fellow directors, escaped unscathed.

Sympathy for the victims of Lipton's corrupt system is growing, and with it the feeling that the company's directorate, which deliberately encouraged that system, should have been brought to justice.

Lord Newton expressed this feeling in the house of lords last Monday, commenting strongly at the same time on the attitude of a section of the press which continues to print eulogies of Sir Thomas as a genial sportsman.

"We are invited," he exclaimed, "to admire this gentleman, Sir Thomas Lipton, as a sort of national hero, a magnificent sportsman of the true British type, a compendium of British and all other national virtues, and I have seen it suggested that his transcendent merits can only be recognized by making him a member of this house." This was greeted with laughter.

League After Bribers.

The army canteen case has served to throw the searchlight of publicity for a moment on one of the darkest places of our commercial life and to show how wide a field of useful activity lies before the secret commissions and Bribery Prevention league. It was the work of this league which brought the canteen bribery case to a head and drew the attention of the public to a condition of affairs which most people had long suspected, but of which no proof had been forthcoming.

There is no doubt at all that what Lipton's has been doing in the matter of bribing employés is customary in many branches of business all over the country.

Meanwhile, a good many people on this side are wondering what effect will the exposure of Lipton's business methods have upon his reception by the New York Yach club and the American public.

'CURE' TRUST GETS AMERICAN GOLD

BERLIN CLEARING STATION

BY FREDERIC WILLIAM WILE.
[SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE OF THE TRIBUNE.]

BERLIN, July 15.—"Americans must be an unwashed race—they all want rooms with baths," remarked a German hotel clerk on a historic and facetious occasion.

By the same token Europeans are justified in thinking that we are a sickly and ailing nation if the "cure" tourist is any criterion.

July finds the "cure" season in full blast in continental Europe. Americans, as usual, are its main props, pillars, and devotees. There are, of course, Russians and English and Germans who take waters and baths, live on diets, and go through the other gymnastics of the "cure" scheme, but without the Americans Europe's "cure" season would be dismal, dull, and dividendless. We are its sheet anchor par excellence. It has come almost to exist for our special benefit.

Europe itself would go sick if we as a nation should suddenly become so stubbornly healthy that none of us ever needed a "cure" again. Every European "cure director," or heart specialist, or stomach expert, who bids the transatlantic patient whom he has entertained over the summer good-by and "good health," has his tongue in his cheek when he says it. Lingering in his bosom, unuttered but heartfelt, is the genuine sentiment which inspires his being. It is: "Don't by any chance get so well that you won't have to come back next year." These "cure" places in Europe are not only in business for your health and mine: they are largely in business for their own. And they never felt better in their lives, thank you, than they do right now.

"Cure" Cult in Berlin.

Nowhere in the world can the American "cure" cult in its magnitude be so well observed as in Berlin in blithe July. The kaiser's capital at the moment is nothing but a half way station for Americans bound for this, that, or the other watering place in Germany, Switzerland, France, or Austria. About every second man or woman encountered in the hotel lobbies is either just from a Hamburg or Bremen steamer, headed for Nauheim, Homburg, Kissingen, Wildungen, Wiesbaden, Baden-Baden, Ems, Carlsbad, or Marienbad.

If the tourist in question isn't fresh from the steamer he has already ended his purely pleasure journey through Europe and has come north for the real and serious business of his trip, a "cure" at one, sometimes two, of the wonderfully attractive "spas" above mentioned.

The astute medical gentlemen who evolved the European "cure" for jaded Americans or "penitent gluttons," as one of our humorists called them, found that the going was so good that the average "cure guest" could easily be passed along to an "after cure." So nowadays the real thing is to live at Nauheim or Carlsbad for a month or six weeks and then proceed to Aix-le-Bains or St. Blasien for an "after cure."

Suspect a "Cure" Trust.

I have never looked into the thing, but I verily believe there is a "cure trust" in Europe. Whether there is or is not, the thing is magnificently organized. It is a "community of interests" in being, at any rate, and the only reason why the International Syndicate for Exploiting Hypochondriacal Americans, Ltd., has not actually been formed under the laws of New Jersey is probably that the traffic is already bearing all it will stand.

Practically all the popular European watering places now depend on American business, but Carlsbad, in Bohemia, is the chief example of the blessings conferred on the "cure" system by United States dollars. A native of Carlsbad who once visited New York remarked that Gotham reminded him of home because he saw so many Americans there. Carlsbad simply swarms with them in July and August. The four or five great hotels which have come into existence there are filled from top to bottom with American guests. Rooms have to be reserved weeks, sometimes a year, in advance. Woe to the tenderfoot who thinks he can get accommodations by driving up from the station and asking for them. He is more likely than not to have to content himself with a bench in the "cure park."

Marienbad, the great center for obliteration of surplus adipose tissue popularized by the late King Edward, is almost as bad. It is more English than American in its summer aspect, though the Yankee twang is omnipresent.

Chicagoans at Nauheim.

Nauheim is the place where Americans go to have their hearts tinkered with. One always encounters a disproportionately large number of Chicago patients there. Local doctors say there is no more eloquent testimony of the forced draught at which the average denizen of the Windy City lives than the number of Chicagoans who come to Nauheim from year to year. Baden-Baden and Kissingen attract the people whose internal arrangements are deranged by reckless living. Wiesbaden is for rheumatics, Homburg for "nerves," the others for this, that, or the other ill which flesh is heir to.

Kaiser's Commissary General.

Herr Conrad Uhl, the new "commissary general" of the kaiser, who is henceforth to have charge of the culinary and wine departments of the imperial castles, shooting boxes, yachts, and special trains, is a typically self-made German. Thirty years ago he was a head waiter in a restaurant in Unter den Linden. He had been just an ordinary waiter before that.

From waiter to privy counsellor—the rank Herr Uhl will enjoy as head of the imperial commissariat—is a career seldom achieved in a country of relentless class distinctions like Germany. Europeans are used to such things in America. Over here they still have the smack of romance and novelty.

CENSOR IS BUSY ON PARIS STAGE

Despite Hot Weather He Insists on Some Clothes for Music Hall Stars.

BAN ON POWDER TUNICS

BY BURNS MANTLE.
[STAFF CORRESPONDENT OF THE TRIBUNE.]

PARIS.—Those eager American investigators who arrived in Paris after the first week in July this year were denied certain of the inalienable rights for which their forefathers fought. Their pursuit of pleasure was in a measure curtailed, not to say censured, by a conservative city administration and an active police department.

First of all the manager of the Moulin Rouge, which is distinctly a visitors' rendezvous, was called down from the heights of Montmartre and told that unless he put more clothes on La Belle D'Herlys the further performance of "Cache ton Nu," the current revue, would have to be discontinued.

Secondly, the manager of Olympia, which, being on the boulevard, happens to be the music hall nearest the tourist heart of Paris, was haled to court and warned that unless he did something to cheat the drafts that nightly played about the figure of Mlle. Germaine Webb-Sozime his license would be held up forthwith and the Parisian world denied further glimpses of "L'Orgie à Babylone."

About the same time the manager of the Folies Bergere, who was also doing his best to entertain his audiences in the manner to which they were least accustomed, was politely informed that it was extremely foolhardy for him to try to outdo the exhibitions at the other music halls by offering a full chorus of la belles this and that, and the manager of the Folies Marigny was advised that perhaps it would be just as well if the sash worn by the Christian slave in "Les Barbares" were appreciably widened.

Not What It Used to Be.

Probably Paris is not what it used to be. Doubtless there is no more of that absolute freedom of thought and action, that unrestrained expression of mood and temperament, that at one time was the talk of the world. Twenty years ago—even ten—we gather from what the gentleman who this year made his twenty-fourth round trip told us—no one would have thought of interfering with the efforts of La Belle D'Herlys to suggest the glittering possibilities of the diamond as the center of a ballet of jewels. Mlle. D'Herlys, by the by, is to Paris what Annette Kellerman might be to Chicago or New York if the laws were more lenient, and in the jewel ballet she suggested the cellar,cold beauty of a pure white carbon by appearing clothed in all the brilliance of her perfect sex and an overdrape of gauze. Under the gauze, which was borne away either by the jealous wind or an active attendant during the concluding figure of the ballet (our attention being distracted for the moment), she wore a single rope of brilliants over each shoulder, a circlet of unset jems about her waist supporting a diamond cluster of unique design, and a satisfied expression.

Tunic of Rice Powder.

Even three or four years ago, and especially the season you did not cross, they say a danseuse of not half the beauty of Mlle. Webb-Sozime was not only permitted but even encouraged to wear a costume quite similar to that introduced this year as a feature of "L'Orgie à Babylone" at Olympia, and objected to by the police, for all it was a most simple affair—a groundwork of atmosphere strung with four rows of indestructible pearls and worn over a long tunic of rice powder.

The little belles at the Folies Bergere, who stand in the wings while waiting for their music cues, powdering their knees as nonchalantly as their more conscious American sisters powder their noses, and depend largely upon the calcium for covering, may also be quite different today, when the men who operate the lights are fairly expert and only occasionally let the protecting shades slip. Which, our elders tell us, is not at all as it was in the olden days. Still, we're satisfied.

Some Old Parisian Farce.

In the matter of the typical Parisian farce I am convinced there has been but little change. Most of those prepared for the summer trade and Mr. Al Woods, the American importer, belong to the good old bedroom répertoire, and, so far as we were privileged to observe, nothing new in the way either of complication or situation has been discovered by their prolific authors. The gay husband, his fevered blood pulsating through a very red make up, still has his foolish restaurant affair with a gayer and redder actress; a temporarily inconstant wife lies an excited husband blue in the face or gray at the temples, or a flashy and temperamental mistress strives to keep up to normal the temperature of a lover whos ardor has suddenly cooled.

There is a note of novelty, however, in the favorite light comedy of the spring season, "La Belle Aventure," which Mr. Frohman is to use next season for Mrs. Thomas Whiffen's farewell. It is by MM. Caillavet and Robert De Flers, who wrote "Love Watches," and whose specialty is light comedy of the type usually employed by Miss Billie Burke.

"La Belle Aventure."

In "La Belle Aventure," the heroine, having taken a dislike to the reasonably distant cousin they have provided as a bridegroom for her, elopes on her wedding day with an earlier and handsomer sweetheart who hurried to her from foreign parts as soon as he heard of her predicament. Not wishing to spoil all the wedding plans the elopers make for the cottage of the girl's grandmother, which has been prepared for the honeymoon. The grandmother, whose consuming ambition it is to see this, her favorite, grandchild married, because frankly she hopes to be made a great-grandmother before she dies, immediately accepts the eloping sweetheart as the official bridegroom. And so long as they expect to hunt up a minister next day the young people decide it would be unwise, not to say cruel, to disabuse her mind of that natural conclusion.

The prattle of the fairly plainspoken but very sweet old lady on the old-fashioned blessings of maternity and her good natured railing at the idiotic false modesty of the present day, with husbands and wives demanding separate rooms, proves rather embarrassing to the young people, but much more embarrassing to the grandmother when in the next act she learns the true situation and knows that her arguments have been responsible for the young people's abandoning their orginal plan of separating until after their wedding.

The arrival of the original wedding party, including the protesting and comic bridegroom, and the immediate coöperation of the girl's uncle in arranging an emergency wedding, provides the little play with a somewhat tame but fairly pleasant conclusion. Mrs. Whiffen, of course, will play the grandmother, and if the comedy be skillfully adapted it should prove a wonderful opportunity for her.

New Play for Shuberts.

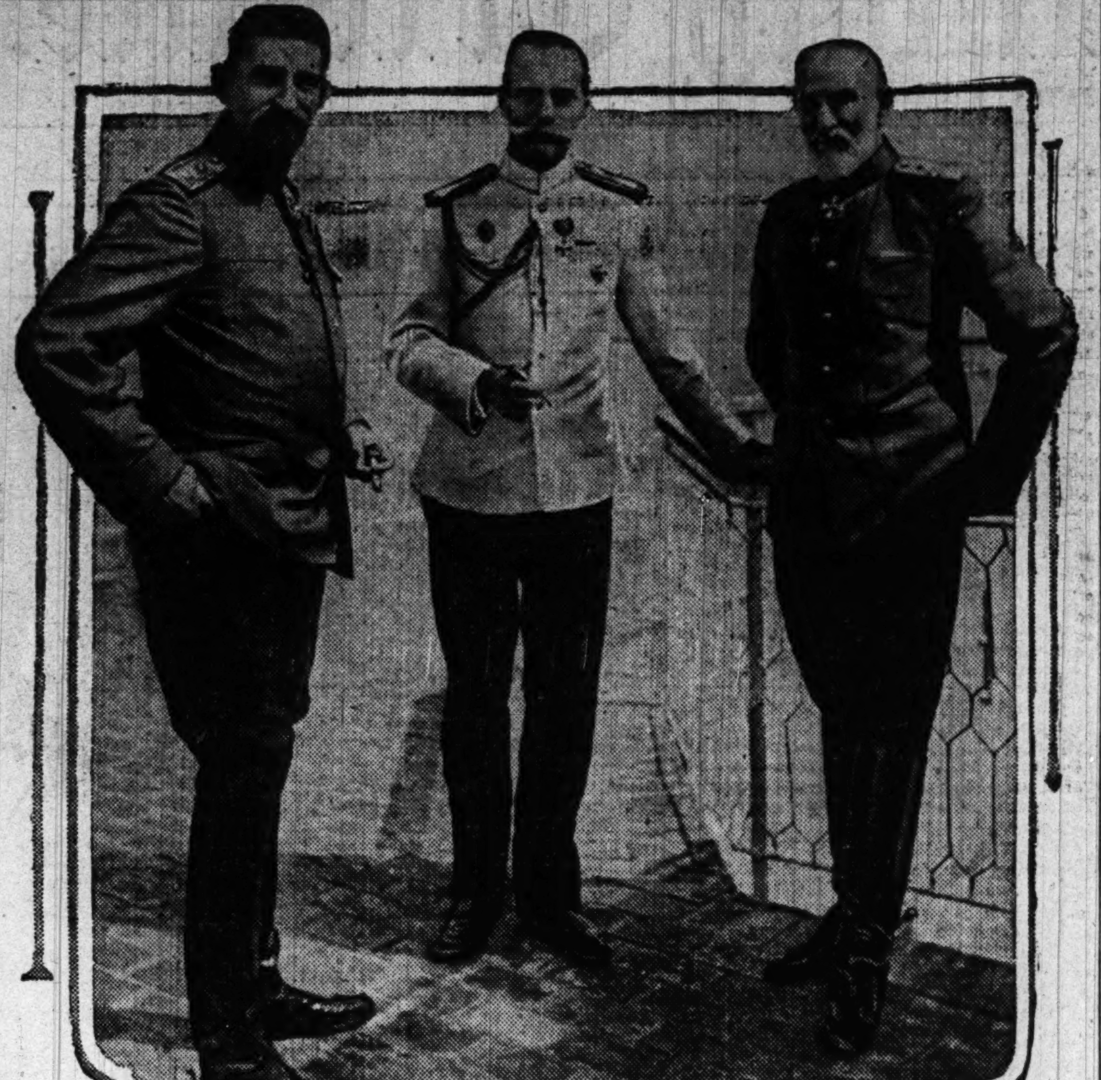
"Ma Tante d'Honfleur," which, according to report, the Shuberts are to bring over, the adaptation being made by Sidney Blow, who last year did "Oh, I Say," is an amusing but more conventional farce, in which the active hero, grown tired of his mistress, seeks to be rid of her that he may marry another. The mistress, however, clings as closely as adhesive plaster, and even with the help of his little aunt from the country he has three acts of trouble that is fun for the audience. "Ma Tante d'Honfleur" was popular in Paris and promises to run through the summer.

Following the departure of the impressionistic Russians, the directors of the opera have brought to Paris a lovely old fashioned Italian ballet, to which both the Parisians and their visitors have risen splendidly. "Hansli le Bossu" is the title, and the story, told in two simple but prettily set scenes, is of a poor hunchback violinist who falls in love with a beautiful village belle when she dances on the green to his music. But the girl has a cruel lover, one with a sack of money but a mean disposition, and though she really prefers the violinist she cannot bring herself to marry a man with a hump on his back and no money in his pocket. Which makes the hunchback quite miserable.

That night the gnomes come—a band of funny little fellows with a huge ax—and cut the hump from off the violinist's back and stick it on the back of the handsome lover, while next day the fairies drift in with the pot of gold from the rainbow's end and givo it to the transformed musician.

The audience with which we sat in mid-July filled the huge opera house and remained in its place until past midnight to see the last of the ballet, which followed a rather heavy performance of "Samson and Delilah." It was beautifully danced by Mlle. Zambelli as the village maid and M. Aveline as the triumphant hunchback.

Czar Visits King of Roumania.



THE CROWN PRINCE of ROUMANIA · THE CZAR · THE KING of ROUMANIA

LONDON, July 25.—In international affairs on the continent the recent visit of the czar and his family to the royal family of Roumania at Constanza is regarded with much satisfaction at Berlin and Paris. The two imperial families made up a delightful party and the event is considered of the greatest importance as giving definite public sanction to the improvement in Russo-Roumanian relations, that was one of the few satisfactory features of the Balkan crisis.

The czar, the czaritsa, the crazevitch, and the Grand Duchesses Olga, Tatiana, Maria, and Anastasia and a large suite arrived at Constanza in the middle of last month on board the imperial yacht Standart, escorted by Russian warships. The Roumanian family went to meet their guests, and the welcome was of a most friendly description, the two sovereigns warmly embracing each other. In the evening a great gala dinner was given at the royal residence, where toasts were cordially exchanged between the two monarchs. At this juncture, when the situation in Albania is disquieting and Turko-Greek relations are strained, the demonstration at Constanza is felt to make for stability in the near east.

AMERICA ROBS LONDON STAGE

TYLERGETS MISS TERRY

[SPECIAL CABLE TO THE TRIBUNE.]

LONDON, July 25.—William A. Brady, the producer, sailed for New York today and before he left he expressed wonder as to how the English theaters would be able to open this fall owing to the extraordinary number of English actors and actresses who have been engaged for America. Mr. Brady said:

"The engagements that have been made by Mr. Tyler, Mr. Shubert, Mr. Frohman, and myself will practically depopulate the English stage, and it seems to me that the English managers will have a devil of a time in making up their casts. While the 'movies' have played havoc in the United States, there is no doubt an increasing desire on the part of English actors to go to America and this will play havoc with the English theaters.

"The English actor, who formerly used to get £10 ($50) a week in England is imbued with a desire to conquer America and, turning up his nose at the English manager, says: 'My lowest price is £40 ($200) a week.' Curiously enough, the English actor is not so extravagant in his salary demands for an American season as he used to be. He has got back in his mind the phenomenal success of Forbes-Robertson, who came back from the United States independently wealthy and now has enough money to afford a knighthood.

"There is Cyril Maude also. His success in 'Grumpy' in New York and in London after he returned here probably will lead to his being knighted. This is all thanks to money from the United States. Now every English actor wants to duplicate their success and is willing to go cheap as long as he gets the opportunity. These actors believe that once they make good in the United States their salaries will automatically advance and their fortunes are made.

Phyllis Terry to Come.

"Thanks to George Tyler, New York will see that marvelous young actress Phyllis Neilson Terry, while we have engaged the equally beautiful, young, and talented Marie Lohr. This will leave the English stage with only one capable young actress, Alexandra Carlisle, and she will probably return to the United States. Sir Herbert Beerbohm Tree is anxious to go to the United States and take Mrs. Pat Campbell with him to appear in G. B. Shaw's 'Pygmalion.'

"Olga Nethersole, of course, is going to the United States via Canada. We will get F. R. Benson, the actor-manager; John Martin Harvey, the actor-manager; Miss Horniman's company, Cyril Maude, and Forbes-Robertson again. The only actor left here seems to be Robert Loraine, and he is only staying because he wants to fulfill his ambition to play 'Cyrano de Bergerac.' If I am only fortunate enough to get a suitable vehicle this is the psychological moment to have Grace George play in England while England's charming actresses are on their way to play in the United States."

An interesting clause in the contract provides for a court of arbitration consisting of ex-Justice Morgan J. O'Brien and Justice Leaventritt of New York. This court will decide any and every dispute between Miss Terry and Mr. Tyler.

Taylor-Morosco Row Ends.

Lorette Taylor, the star of "Peg o' My Heart," received a cablegram from her husband, J. Hartley Manners, the author of the piece, this week saying that he had made an agreement with Mr. Morosco, the producer, by which the latter retains the American rights to the play. Miss Taylor will have the European rights. She has arranged to produce it here at the Playhouse in the autumn. She intends to remain in London for some time. When asked what she would do if the play should not succeed here Miss Taylor replied, "My husband is capable of writing me many others."

DYNAMITE FACTORY TO ESCAPE TAXES.

DITTINGEN, Canton of Bern, Switzerland, July 25.—The cement factory which used to be the pride of this town, because it represented the principal industry of the place, has been blown to pieces by its owners under the supervision of the local police. The great mill had been bought by a syndicate and closed as unnecessary to the system. The syndicate had to continue to pay taxes as heavy as though the works were in operation, and it was decided therefore to destroy them. Charges of dynamite were placed under the tall chimneys and at various places in the walls throughout the manufactory. The cartridges were exploded simultaneously by electric connections, and the whole place became a mass of broken walls and piles of brick. Some of the townspeople cried as they saw the place tumble into ruins.

REJOICE IN 100 YEARS OF PEACE

NATIONS ARE IN ACCORD

SULGRAVE, England, July 25.—The first formal ceremony in honor of the one hundred years of peace between the English speaking nations occurred here today when Sulgrave Manor, the home of the family of George Washington, purchased for $42,500 subscribed in Great Britain, was handed over to members of the centenary committee as a gift to the American people.

Ambassador Page Attends.

This quaint village was in holiday attire in honor of the occasion. The visiting party consisted of the American ambassador, Walter Hines Page, the Duke of Teck, Lord Shaw, Shirley Benn, member of the house of commons; H. S. Perris, secretary of the committee; Harry Brittain, secretary of the Pilgrims' society, and Arthur Branscombe, author of the history of the Washington family. They were greeted by the mayor and other officials of the municipality, in their official robes, after which school children sang the national anthems of both the United States and Great Britain.

The party then proceeded in motor cars to the manor, where, at the ancient doorway, the Duke of Teck handed the keys to Ambassador Page, and thence to the ancient church, where Washington's ancestors are buried.

At Queen Eleanor's Cross.

At Queen Eleanor's cross, erected by Edward I. and which now stands in a new portion of the city of Northampton, the spot where the emigrating Washingtons took leave of the family, the centenary party was received by the mayor and local officials of Northampton, also in robes. A reception and luncheon followed in the Guild hall.

The mayor and committee members then visited the country seat of Earl Spencer, whose ancestors were related to the Washingtons, and viewed other Washingtonian shrines.

Moving pictures were taken of all the ceremonies, which will be exhibited throughout the United States. It is expected that they will be first shown before President Wilson in the White House.

BOIL YOUR LOBSTER SLOWLY

LONDON, July 25.—Experiments as to the most humane method of killing crabs and lobsters show that boiling over a slow fire causes the least discomfort. Humanitarians have long cried out against the cruelty of fishermen and fishmongers in torturing the lobster by boiling it slowly instead of plunging it mercifully into boiling water, but it seems that the fisherman was right after all.

Hotel Thieves' Black List.

GENEVA, July 25.—The Swiss Hotel Keepers' association has begun to publish in its official paper a list of notorious hotel thieves, with their portraits. Eighty of the leading towns in Europe have joined in the movement.

That the crown princess of one of the smaller monarchies of southern Europe has during the last month been very quietly interned in a private asylum for the insane, near Dresden, is a matter of current gossip in the various courts of the old world.

Nobody believes that she is really afflicted with lunacy. But her married life has been notoriously unhappy, owing to the utterly shameless misconduct of her husband, a prince of such unenviable reputation, not only abroad, but even in his native land, where morality is at a singularly low ebb, that a popular demand exists there for steps to deprive him of his rights of succession to the throne. Publicly humiliated, neglected, maltreated, broken in health and spirits, the crown princess, after putting up with this sort of life for some fourteen years, found it impossible to be endured any longer, and took to flight, turning her steps in the direction of that German state of which her only brother is now the reigning sovereign.

Unfortunately the crown princess was accompanied by one of the officers of her husband's household. According to some he had been moved to pity by her sufferings, of which he had been a witness, and had been led to travel with her by perfectly honorable sentiments of sympathy and disinterested devotion. According to others, he is a reprobate who took advantage of her unhappiness to ingratiate himself in her favor, with questionable motives in view.

Of course her husband put the worst possible construction on her departure for her brother's dominions, denounced it as an elopement, and insisted that she must have been bereft of her senses to embark upon any such a trip. He induced his father and sovereign to take the same view, and to invoke the intervention of the German authorities. The result was that as soon as ever she crossed the German frontier the officer traveling with her was turned back by the police, while she herself was arrested and taken off to the lunatic asylum near Dresden, to be held there as demented.

If the German authorities so readily lent themselves to a measure of this kind, it is because every reigning house in Europe appreciates the inestimable damage which has been inflicted upon the prestige of royalty and upon the entire monarchical system by the many scandals in which the former Crown Princess of Saxony has been involved since she eloped from Dresden in 1903 with the Belgian tutor of her children, Prof. André Giron.

This misguided lady seems never so happy as when occupying the center of the stage by some new extravagance of conduct or senational escapade. She seems to glory in every fresh affront to propriety and conventionality, and has even gone so far as to give her name as author to a most scurrilous book of alleged reminiscences of her life at the court of Dresden, full of malignant and incredibly vulgar attacks upon members of the reigning houses of Saxony and of Austria.

It is felt that all these many scandals, which have had the effect of alienating from the ex-crown princess every vestige of sympathy, could have been avoided if at the very outset she had been placed under restraint in some sanitarium, and thus protected against herself.

Princess Louise of Belgium, like the crown princess to whom I have made reference at the beginning of this letter, was, like her, most unhappily married and suffered so cruelly at the hands of her husband, Prince Philip of Coburg-Kohary, as to excite general commiseration at Vienna, where she made her home. On one occasion she traveled to Brussels and entreated her father, the late King Leopold, to permit her to leave her husband for good and all and to resume her place beneath his roof at Laeken and at the court of Brussels. But Leopold would not hear of anything of the kind, bade her make the best of her lot, and closed both his heart and his doors against her.

At length, finding life with her husband quite intolerable, she left him for good and all, carrying off with her her little girl and allowing herself to be escorted by Capt. Mattachich of the Austrian cavalry, who had lost his place as A. D. C. to her husband, through his interference on one occasion to protect her from the prince's ill usage. The party sought refuge in the south of France and Prince Philip of Coburg, like the husband of the crown princess mentioned above, at once put the worse possible construction on his wife's flight, describing it as an elopement. He successfully invoked the intervention of the French police to recover his little daughter on the ground that her morals were likely to be injured by the spectacle of her mother's association with the captain. The latter thereupon fought a duel with the prince and wounded him.

Had the princess remained in France and, above all, had seh avoided getting into debt she might have retained her liberty. But by her extravagance she became involved in all sorts of financial difficulties and was compelled to have recourse with the captain to such devious and questionable methods of obtaining funds as to bring them both within the reach of the criminal law. Having foolishly ventured on to Austrian soil, they were arrested there, and while the captain was sentenced by a court martial to a term of penal servitude, the princess was committed as insane to a lunatic asylum in Austria, from whence she was subsequently transferred to the same sanitarium near Dresden where the crown princess alluded to in the beginning of the article is now confined.

Princess Louise, after several years' detention, managed to effect her escape, with the assistance of ex-Capt. Mattachich, who had completed his term of penal servitude in Austria.

Desperate efforts were made by Duke Ernest I. of Saxe-Coburg-Gotha, the father of the English prince consort, and grandfather therefore of King Edward, to incarcerate his consort as insane, in a lunatic asylum, when, unable to endure any longer his cruelty, she fled with one of his chamberlains, Alexander von Polzig. In the very nick of time they managed to reach and cross the Swiss frontier and the government of the Helvetian republic, having assured itself of the sanity of Duchess Louise, refused to lend itself to any maneuver designed to place her under restraint in a German madhouse. Finding it impossible to recapture her the duke in due course divorced her, whereupon she married the companion of her flight, secured for him the title of count, and on dying, after several years of happy union, bequeathed to him all the property of which she could dispose, being prompted, however, by a jealous dread of his remarriage, to stipulate in her will that he should only enjoy her wealth as long as he kept her embalmed remains under his roof. He had them preserved in the case of a grand piano, which was always kept locked, and which was moved about to his various residences. One night his house in Paris was broken into, the burglars carrying off nothing but the mummied duchess in the piano. A week or so later Count von Polzig received a letter from Coburg, notifying him that the duchess had been entombed in the family mausoleum at Gotha, but that in spite of his loss of her remains no attempt would be made to deprive him of the fortune which she had bequeathed to him. Later he contracted another marriage.

Helen Vacaresco, in a book which she published some time ago, entitled "A Royal Wife," and which is based on her experiences as maid of honor to the queen of Roumania, makes reference to the royal dread of the madhouse, and not without reason. For the queen, so widely known in literature under the pen name of "Carmen Sylva," was put under restraint in one of her brother's German castles, for nearly two years, for having persisted in favoring an objectionable project of marriage between her nephew, the crown prince, and her then favorite attendant, Helen Vacaresco. The Roumanian government informed King Charles that if he or the queen countenanced any such matrimonial alliance it would result in the overthrow of the dynasty. It moreover insisted that the queen should dismiss from her entourage Mlle. Vacaresco. Rather than yield in this last particular, the queen preferred to leave Roumania, and took up her residence with Mlle. Vacaresco in Venice, in flagrant defiance of the views of the government and of the commands of the king. The latter suddenly appeared upon the scene and proceeded to summarily dismiss Mlle. Vacaresco and the remainder of the household of the queen, whom he sent off to Germany in charge of physicians and nurses, under whose care she remained in one of her brother's castles for nearly two years.

AUSTRIANS LIKE HEIR TO THRONE

BOTH SPEAK ENGLISH WELL

[SPECIAL CABLE TO THE TRIBUNE.]

VIENNA, Austria, July 25.—American Ambassador Penfield and his wife recently visited Archduke Charles Francis Joseph, the new heir presumptive to the Austro-Hungarian throne, at his modest residence, Hetzendorf, a villa just beyond the park of Schoenbrunn. During the stay Mr. Penfield expressed surprise that an Austrian archduke should have found time to learn English so well, for Charles speaks it with all the freedom of perfect knowledge.

The archduke was about to explain when his wife, Archduchess Zita, held up a finger, warning him:

"You must not tell."

Afterward, as the archduke was walking in the garden with Mr. Penfield, he remarked:

"You wanted to know how I learned English. When I was courting my wife, she was still at school in a convent. I spent a long time on the Isle of Wight, so that I could see her every day. That was where I learned English."

"Auerhahne" Strange Bird.

Among the trophies that adorn the hall of Hetzendorf is a beautiful stuffed bird of a species Mr. Penfield had never seen before. The young couple vied with each other trying to tell him what it is, but they only knew the German name, "auerhahn." They told how the bird lived and how it was shot among the budding beeches of Bohemia. At the next court function, soon as the formal part was over, the archduke and his wife went up to Mr. Penfield eager to tell him that they had found out all about the bird, that it was a "capericilzie," well known and carefully fostered in Scotland.

The archduchess, who is 22, has rather more dignity than the archduke, 27, who is all good fellowship, but this way of hers is the way of young mothers, proud of their offspring. After a year's marriage she brought into the world a sturdy little boy, another heir to the throne of Hapsburg, who was 2 years old in November. She followed her mother's advice and nursed the babe herself. This spring a daughter was born, to whom the archduchess is a devoted mother who gives up a great deal of pleasure to spend her time in the nursery.

Archduchess Lived Modestly.

Since her marriage the archduchess has lived in much more modest circumstances than when she was in the home of her father, the late Duke of Parma, in Schwarzau, on the way to the Semmering.

Robert of Parma, one of the wealthiest princes of Europe, kept up a princely court at Schwarzau. There the hothouses, the stables, and the magnificent park were lighted by electricity twenty years ago. The change to Hetzendorf and to Villa Wartholz, at the foot of the Semmering, must have put the good nature of the young princess to the test. Petroleum lamps, no bath, no carpets on the stairs—which is still the condition of Wartholz, must have been a great change from magnificent Schwarzau. But the love of the young couple gilded everything.

While Archduchess Zita was in bed after the birth of her first babe, the archduke, knowing how fond of flowers she is, carried armfuls to her rooms, and because the nurse told him she must only have flowers that exhale no perfume, he smelt of every single one before he carried them to her.

She has been very modest in her dress, accommodating herself to her husband's moderate means, but now very different conditions surround her. Archduke Francis Ferdinand having passed away, Archduke Charles takes the Este estate, which was left by the last Duke of Modena in 1875 to the heir to the throne of Austria, with an extraordinary clause.

Inherits Immense Estate.

The revenue from the estate, some $16,000,000 a year, is to be the property of each heir to the throne until he puts on the crown as long as there is no war between Austria and Italy. In case of war the capital is to become a war fund to be used for the reëstablishment of the duchy of Modena.

The late archduke mortgaged the Este estate to obtain the large sums of money he required for purchasing Ronopischt and Chlumetz, besides investing a million each for his three children. The money was advanced by Rothschild in the first place, then by the Laenderbank and the Bodenkreditanstalt. As the Este estate must be given over to Archduke Charles intact, all this money will have to be repaid.

When Archduke Charles' two infant children were taken from the villa where they had lived with their parents in rustic simplicity to the palace where they are surrounded with all the pomp and safeguards of royalty they cried piteously. And so did their mother, Archduchess Zita.

Favorite of Emperor.

When the assassinations at Sarajevo called Emperor-King Francis Joseph from his mountain retreat at Ischl to Vienna Archduke Charles met him at the small railway station near Schoenbrunn castle. Charles had been advised not to go there, as the emperor had sent word that he wished no reception. But the young archduke who hitherto had played the most unobtrusive rôle imaginable now asserted himself and declared: "The emperor can send me away if he does not want me."

But on arriving the emperor took the archduke's arm, made him get into the carriage with him, and took him up to his rooms in Schoenbrunn. Since then he has sent for him innumerable times, has consulted him on all questions, has asked him to bring his wife, and treats this young prince as if he were his own grandchild.

But the attitude of the people is still more remarkable. When Charles returned to Hetzendorf from Schoenbrunn he was cheered by the multitude which a short time before had silently greeted the returning emperor.

UNREST GROWS IN PHILIPPINES

Natives Backed by Administration in Scramble for Political Jobs.

AMERICANS ARE OUSTED

BY HENRY J. REILLY.

[Tenth Philippine article.]

MANILA, July 1.—Since the establishment of civil government in the Philippines its efficiency has depended upon the men holding offices and positions under it. As they have been efficient and honest we have succeeded, and as they have been inefficient and dishonest we have failed.

One of the earliest acts of the Taft administration was to pass a civil service act. Previous to coming to the Philippines the commission had received the promise at Washington that no political appointees should be forced upon them. The beginning then was a good one, first in the establishment of a civil service, and second in attempting to eliminate the influence of politicians from that service in the beginning.

Democrats Make Many Changes.

Within the last year a new administration has come into power. One of its first acts was to turn out of office in the Philippines a number of men who by their prolonged experience had reached a point at which they had become really efficient. These they replaced in some cases by men who as a whole knew little or nothing of the Philippines or the Filipinos. In other cases the American has been replaced by the Filipino.

Between Jan. 1 and April 30, 1914, 316 Americans have left the Philippine civil service for the following reasons: Reduction of force, 94; voluntary resignations, 210; deaths, 2; resignation requested, 1; other causes, 9. During April there were over 300 changes in the civil service. The chief ones were as follows: Appointments, 87, 5 of Americans and 82 of Filipinos; promotions, 193, 31 of Americans and 162 of Filipinos; reinstatements 18, 1 American and 17 Filipinos; reductions, 2, Americans.

Filipinos Are Given Jobs.

At the close of the fiscal year ending June 30, 1913, 71 per cent of the employés of the classified civil service were Filipinos. As a general rule it may be said that under the Republicans Filipinos were only given positions when qualified to hold them. Also the positions still filled by Americans were those which up to that time the Filipinos had been unable to show sufficient competency to fill.

There has always been a perfectly natural demand on the part of the Filipinos that they should be put in office. Another demand of theirs has always been that they should receive the same pay as the Americans. At first blush these demands appear just. A closer examination, however, shows they are not so.

When after an office for himself or his friends the last thing a Filipino thinks of is efficiency. They are apparently willing enough to take the examinations necessary to get the different positions, but are never satisfied to abide by the result, practically always claiming either that the examinations were unfair or else too hard.

Want Easier Efficiency Tests.

Their point of view in this matter is well illustrated by the complaint of an educated Filipino when a youthful friend of his failed on his entrance examination to the United States Military academy at West Point. He maintained that the Filipinos should be given easier entrance examinations than the American boys, as it was absurd to expect them to come up to the same standard. One of the earliest mistakes was that a number of Filipinos sent to American colleges as students were permitted by these colleges to get through more easily than would have been Americans.

With the arrival of Gov. Gen. Harrison and the installation of the Democratic party in power the evils of the old system have been intensified to such an extent that matters have reached a climax.

Political Pull Now Powerful.

Within a few days after the arrival of the governor general numbers of men, some of them occupying some of the highest positions, were summarily removed. Since then men have been discharged right along. Men who had a first class civil service status, whose work had been efficient, and against whom there are no charges whatsoever have been dismissed with no other explanation given them than a desire for economy. Their positions have then been filled, as a rule, by Filipinos, in the majority of cases untrained and incapable of giving satisfactory service. In other words, filled by political appointees pure and simple.

It is but natural that those who still remain should feel considerably alarmed and that it is essential for them to hunt up a position outside of the service. Probably 90 per cent of the Americans in the civil service today are only holding on to their positions until they can find one outside. They no longer take any real interest in their work, as they all feel sure it is but a question of a short time until they also will be dismissed.

Service Is Disorganized.

Some of those who have not been dismissed have refused to remain longer in the service, because not receiving the support which is necessary for them to perform efficient work. One of the most notable examples of this is Dr. Ward, chief veterinarian of the bureau of agriculture, who has had charge of the stamping out of rinderpest, an animal disease which has brought untold misery and suffering to the Philippine islands. The situation had been gotten under control and the rinderpest was steadily diminishing. The assembly passed a bill removing the control of the situation from the bureau of agriculture and put it in the hands of the provincial governors. Since then the disease has been spreading to an alarming extent.

Politicians Threaten Americans.

Those who fear that they must remain because they have no other position open to them and have families depending on them must in many cases condone inefficiency and abuses or else subject themselves to attack by Filipino politicians. Several instances have occurred already in which Filipinos have warned their American superiors that they had better be careful or they would lose their jobs.

A good example of what is going on is the attitude of the municipal board of Manila toward the police and fire departments of that city. Both these departments have always been noted for their high state of efficiency. At the present time the two elective members of the municipal board are Filipinos, named Reyes and Papa. Reyes is undoubtedly honest, but is the laughing stock of Manila.

Papa's record is far from a good one. He has been arrested and fined for putting a "jumper" on his electric light meter. He is the owner of a number of public rigs, and the majority of his cocheros [drivers] have been arrested again and again for persistent violation of the traffic regulations.

Filipinos Attack Policemen.

Every time a patrolman makes an arrest, if the courts do not convict the man arrested the Filipinos do the best they can to get the patrolman dismissed. They are continually interfering, particularly Papa, with the regulation of traffic by the police. They have done the best they can again and again to get policemen dismissed who have made arrests, even after the arrests have been investigated and announced to be proper by the police authorities. Their campaign against the police has been carried to such an extent that the Filipinos are commencing to lose their respect for it, as was shown in a recent case in which a number of them mobbed a patrolman who had just arrested a Filipino. There have been a number of cases of interference with patrolmen in the performance of their duty by the Filipinos.

Manila is primarily built of highly combustible materials. As it is scattered over considerable territory an efficient fire department is of primary importance. The recent attempts to do away with some of the positions in the fire department, particularly those held by Americans, has had its effect in making the firemen feel insecure and desire other positions.

Defy Health Officials.

Formerly sanitary inspectors had but little difficulty in getting the regulations carried out. Recently the Filipinos, due to their idea that they are to control everything as they wish, not only in many cases have failed to comply with the directions of sanitary inspectors, but have openly defied them and have gone to the extent of ordering them out of their houses.

The biggest error of all was the replacing of Carpenter, the executive secretary, by a Filipino, Villamor. Carpenter kept his eye on all the Filipino governors of provinces, presidentes, and other officials.

WOMEN WORK IN BANKS.

Take the Place of Men in Large London Institutions; Pay Not High.

The [illegible] Times

LONDON, July 18.—The women who are employed in the coupon departments in the city banks are at one of their busiest seasons just now, preparing for the summer quarterly dividends. In at least three great banks women have found employment for the last twenty years, and in one of these, where there is a large business done in foreign loans, about thirty or forty women are occupied in sorting, listing, checking, and canceling the coupons. This work is subsidiary to that of men, who handle the coupons in the first and last instance. In the Bank of England there are about sixty women employed in connection with the sorting up and listing and agreeing of old paid bank notes, and during the last year in the inspection of new bank notes from the printing machines. The Bank of England also employs women at typing and shorthand writing.

There is a distinct disinclination on the part of banks employing women to have the fact widely advertised, as the number of applications to the directors for nominations would very probably be far greater than any possible vacancies would justify. But, though the banks employing women in their coupon departments can be as reticent as they please on the matter, the evidence given by Mr. E. M. Harvey, the deputy chief cashier of the Bank of England, before the royal commission on the civil service, lifted the veil of secrecy very completely from the terms of employment of women by "the Old Lady of Threadneedle Street."

A very high standard of courtesy is expected from a bank clerk. This attitude of mind is said on competent authority to be difficult for women; while they continually exact respect from their male official inferiors, they do not always show it to their male official superiors. Women find a difficulty in rising to speak to a male head of a department; they are too mindful of their sex even when at work. And this charge is made with the cognizance that their work itself is as good and their capacity as great as that of men who might be engaged on similar duties. But they have not the official temperament.

By HON. JAMES E. BRUCE

That the declaration of the recent convention of noted alienists that "Alcohol is a poison, responsible for a large proportion of insanity, epilepsy, feeble minded children and other forms of mental, moral and physical degeneracy and for three-fourths of all the world's criminals" IS TRUE has been proved by the bitter experience of mankind.

THE POISON THEORY.

Unfortunately it is only within recent years great scientists have discovered the "poison theory" as the cause, effect and result of the continued use of intoxicating liquors or narcotic drugs. Hence millions of good men and women and their children have suffered and died because of the ignorance of themselves and relatives as to their diseased condition and the necessity for scientific medical treatment.

It is no longer advisable to rely upon "moral suasion," which always "fails to cure disease," nor upon a "will power" that has been weakened or destroyed by a virulent poison. Modern medical science offers to every person a simple, easy, quick, and effective method of permanently STOPPING the use of either liquor or drugs without submitting to the "old time" methods of using strong drugs, hypodermic injections and requiring weeks or months of absence from home and business.

PROBLEM SOLVED.

The Neal Treatment acts as an antidote for the poison of alcohol or drugs and DRIVES it from the system, thereby removing the CAUSE of the continued indulgence. It also restores the appetite for food and provides natural, refreshing sleep. IN A FEW DAYS, depending upon the nature and extent of the affliction, the patient returns to his home and usual work with a loathing instead of craving for liquor or drugs.

HIGH CLASS MEN

and women of sedentary habits are most susceptible to the poison of alcohol. Their systems fail to eliminate the poisons taken into the system. Many such persons have alcoholic or drug poisons retained in their systems from moderate or only occasional indulgence. We guarantee high class and strictly private accommodations to all patrons and satisfaction at end of treatment. The Neal Treatment may be successfully taken AT HOME in "moderate" cases or at any one of the 60 high class Neal Institutes established in principal cities.

HAS 14,000,000 CLIENTS.

LONDON, July 19.—Whatever place Lloyd-George may occupy in history, no one who has made a study of the workings of the insurance act will deny him credit for the development of a marvelous administrative system.

The act's machinery is built to deal with millions of persons, millions in money—dollars as well as pounds—and millions of cards. In Wellington house, for instance, a huge block of buildings in Westminster, now known as the home of national health insurance, thinking imperially is inevitable. The clients number nearly 14,000,000. The amount of money dealt with annually reaches £20,000,000 ($100,000,000), while cards of insured persons pour into the branch office at Maida Vale in avalanches of 10,000,000.

For besides Wellington house there is the Maida Vale establishment, once an immense skating rink. And then there is an office in Leonard street where an actuarial staff undertakes the responsibility of crediting the reserve values to the approved societies, a task involving the examinations and proving of some 11,000,000 claims. Thus it is seen that the insurance commission must think literally in millions.

The daily tide of correspondence at Wellington house flows into a large room on the ground floor, where, after the envelopes have been removed, it is diverted into the main channels of the department, the sections relating to approved societies, insurance committees, collections of contributions, and accounting.

Many Beneficiaries Illiterate.

A considerable proportion of those affected by the insurance act are illiterate and unaccustomed to writing or receiving letters. This fact serves to increase the difficulties of the commission. Their correspondence frequently arrives without any indication of the writer's address or without sufficient indication to secure a reply. So there must be an outdoor staff to reach the insured persons who don't know how to pen or receive letters intelligently.

Moreover, the daily mail bag covers a wide field of inquiry, and many of the questions raised concern matters of principle and inquiry which cannot be settled offhand. The correspondence is probably the most varied and curious received by any department of state. The American congressman's mail, with its prayers for postoffice or garden seeds, is outdone.

Here, for instance, is a letter from some one interested in a licensed woman hawker, "far advanced in consumption," who "has disappeared." What can Wellington do to assist? The next is from a physician who was sent for by a woman who had not her current medical card. The third is an application for refund of contribution from some one "insured in error."

And here is a sailor's wife asking if she will get 5s ($1.25) a week and 30s ($7.50) maternity benefit, and whether she is entitled "to anything from the navy."

Big Force Employed.

The staff at Wellington house comprises a whole "army" necessarily. In all, there are between 450 and 500 persons. For the purposes of the outdoor staff, which is the eyes and ears of the commission, the country is divided into nine divisions in charge of ten divisional inspectors, who act under the immediate instructions of the chief inspector at headquarters. Each division is divided into districts, arranged, so far as is geographically convenient, on a basis of equality of population.

Now picture a hall 480 feet long and 100 feet wide, covered by a glass roof. Divide it up with temporary partitions, line it with corridors of card filing frames, people it wtih hundreds of workers, and you will have some idea of the scene at Maida Vale.

Here is a girl engaged in telling the cards. Piled before her are packets of contribution cards sent in by one or another of the approved societies, and in front is a wooden case, in thirteen divisions, one for each week in the quarter. She has to place every card from her pile into one or another of these divisions, according to the number or value of stamps it bears, a task complicated by the fact that numberless cards bear stamps of varying denominations or value.

The cards come from the societies in bundles, and after their receipt is acknowledged they are stacked away until the telling section is ready for them. The telling sheet analysis is sent to the examining branch to be compared with the society's own return.

When one recalls all the criticism of the insurance act, it seems wonderful that out of 10,500,000 insured persons only a little more than 200,000 were not members of approved societies on Jan. 11 last, and of these fewer than 10,000 had neglected or declined to take formal steps to establish their status of insurance.

STARVING; DIES IN PARIS.

Former Noted New York Beauty Meets Pitiful End After a Life of Luxury.

[SPECIAL CABLE TO THE TRIBUNE.]

PARIS, July 25.—Investigations into the circumstances of the death of Alice Norton, the name of the woman who died of starvation in Montmartre nearly three weeks ago, confirm the pitiful story told briefly in earlier cables. At one time she lavished money like water in her own especial world. She was a born lady and was at one time celebrated for her beauty on both continents; yet died in miserable surroundings the day after the race for the Grand Prix in a little room on the sixth floor of a house on the Avenue de L'Opera, such as is generally allotted to the servants who belong to the apartments below. She died among strangers without food and without a doctor. She was literally penniless and her body was buried in a pauper's graveyard without a name to mark the grave.

The history of Miss Norton, so far as it can be learned, recalls Sir Arthur Wing Pinero's play, "Iris." She "guarded to the bitter end her air of refinement," and although she had been driven from hotel to hotel for the nonpayment of bills in the past, with all the attendant indignities which that implies, she kept her air of breeding.

Wore Ropes of Pearls.

One of her friends said to the correspondent of THE TRIBUNE today:

"It is horrible to think of her dying so, she who once wore ropes of pearls on her neck. I shall never forget her as I once saw her going down Fifth avenue in New York. She was a woman of remarkable beauty and her prematurely gray hair added distinction to her appearance. She was wearing her pearls and was accompanied by a great white dog. I am sure that every middle aged New Yorker will recall the picture, for she was well known. She lived in beautiful apartments at that time and was at the height of her career.

"That was the time when Miss Norton was reported to be engaged to Newton Eustis. She had been married and divorced. She had a son, whose whereabouts are unknown. She always claimed that Mr. Eustis when he died owed her money and said she had papers to prove it. She tried to collect this money from the estate, but failed. Her claim amounted to several thousand francs, which would mean much to her.

Friends Try to Help Her.

"Miss Norton's affairs had gone from bad to worse and I persuaded her to take the room where she died. I helped to furnish it in a modest manner and obtained a position for her with a friend, who is a prominent modiste, but after a few weeks she stopped going to her work. Perhaps she was too sick, or perhaps she hated to work. She really could not work as she had never had done anything like that before in her life. We tried to persuade her to go to her mother in England, but she said her mother was poor and she was not willing to bother her. She added that her son was a college professor in Australia, but he had been unkind to her and had refused to allow her to join him once before.

"For these reasons those who had known Miss Norton were always being asked to help her and we slipped bills into her purse. She who had once lived in a French chateau grew to accept such charity without shrinking. Once last winter I brought her down the Avenue des Champs Elysees in my taxicab. Passing Laurent's tears filled her eyes.

"'There is Laurents,' she said. 'What good times we had there. I remember Mr. Eustis once giving a dinner there when peaches were 20 cents apiece. After dinner one of the men guests threw a peach at a tree and soon every one wanted to hit the tree. The bill contained a charge for 200 peaches.'

From another source it was learned that her claim against the estate of Mr. Eustis was based on his checks on the Knickerbocker Trust company of New York. They amounted to 7,500 francs [$1,500] and the money was payable at his death. He left nothing so the checks were worthless. She always claimed that the checks represented money which she had lent to Mr. Eustis.

Countess Gives "Freak" Dinners.

COUNTESS VON CLEMENS

BERLIN, July 19.—In the higher circle of court society the Countess von Clemens has taken rank as one of its cleverest leaders. Although a comparative newcomer to the capital, she has already become famous for the lavishness and distinctiveness of her entertainments. The last of these was attended by the crown prince and princess, who complimented the countess warmly on the marked originality and sumptuousness mingled with good taste, of the entertainment provided. The countess, who is the wife of a fabulously wealthy Hungarian nobleman, has a fad for oriental jewelry, of which she has a unique collection. She has given several "freak" dinners, which Berlin society found vastly amusing.

SHIRTWAIST MAN MAKES IMPRESSION ON LONDONER.

LONDON, July 25.—England's hot spell has started an agitation for reform in men's summer dress, but so far none have had courage to follow the American fashion of appearing on the street in shirt and belt. An Englishman never dispenses with the coat except when playing tennis and cricket and boating on the river. To appear without a coat on the links is quite as unpardonable in England as to go coatless on the street.

"My long suffering brothers," asks one writer in a daily paper, "why not defy the women, take off our coats and waistcoats and be cool. They do these things in America, where woman is a very independent creature. Why can't we do them here Haven't we the pluck?"

"I was moved to these remarks," he continues, "by the sight of a gentleman, presumably from the states, sauntering down Shoe lane. He looked radiantly cool and supremely happy. And for the first time in my mortal career I envied an American. As a fact, he also looked smart. His straw was neat, his soft collar and horizontal tie were dressy, the awkward transition from gauze to tweed was masked in a becoming silken band. He did not look at all feminine; on the contrary, he looked far more male than the poor fellows in bales of tweed and homespun slouching around him."

The writer ends with the confession: "We do not like our muggy dress, we do not hug our fetters; we suffer, though with tears, for the sake of the ladies. The ladies like to se us 'smart.' Smart! Good gracious! And we are not allowed to powder our greasy complexions."

NEW RICHELIEU SWAYS RUSSIA.

The [illegible] Times

LONDON, July 15.—The mystic peasant born Russian monk, Gregory Rasputin, on whom a murderous attack was made by a woman while he was visiting his home in a Siberian village recently, is described by the St. Petersburg correspondent of the Daily Chronicle as "the absolute master of the Russias." It is certain that no great European court today is under such a mystic sway as that which Rasputin has been reputed to have over Emperor Nicholas of Russia and the whole imperial household. It has been the concern of Russia for three years back.

The rise of Rasputin has been an enigma to all the nobles of the court who have not fallen under his influence. His absence from St. Petersburg, during which the attack upon him came, was hoped to mean that he had fallen into disgrace, but just previous to the news of his being stabbed the announcement was made that he had been recalled to the emperor's palace.

A Modern Richelieu.

This modern Richelieu is the son of a fairly wealthy peasant of Tobolsk. He had but little schooling and led an uneventful life until about 30 years old, when he developed religious fervor, became a lay monk and went on a pilgrimage. At the monasteries he visited he picked up some learning and also managed to receive a letter of introduction to Bishop Theofan at St. Petersburg. This was in 1900. Through the influence of the bishop the peasant began to meet the influential people of the city and court. His mystic philosophy created interest, and he had the gift of repartee and polite conversation.

At first Rasputin stuck to his peasant garb, in which he made a picturesque figure. But soon he took up an elegant style of dressing and living, which excited the envy of Bishop Theofan. The bishop obtained an order to exile Rasputin to Siberia. But not only did Rasputin's appeal to the czar save him, but caused the bishop to be dismissed to Poltowa without even time to see his dying father.

Other powerful officials tried to check the advance of Rasputin, only to find themselves in disfavor. Rasputin became the intimate of the royal family, gave orders to the ministers, and conducted himself as the supreme power.

Czarina a Firm Supporter.

The only successful attempt to induce the court to send Rasputin away resulted disastrously for the plotters. Before leaving, Rasputin warned the empress that misfortune was sure to follow. When the heir to the throne fell ill the frightened empress recalled the favorite in haste.

Since his return Rasputin's power has continued to grow. His counsel is called for in deciding every question of importance. It is said on high authority that he brought about the ministerial change last year that saved Russia from a war with Austria. He lived as a prince, with a magnificent villa at Yalta, in Crimea. One of his daughters by his peasant wife is being educated in an aristocratic girls' college in St. Petersburg and is chief companion of the emperor's daughters. Rasputin is even reported to address the czar as "thou" and "thee," a freedom denied even the grand dukes.

A month ago Rasputin was ordained a priest by a minor bishop of his native district. This act aroused the antagonism of the powerful heads of the church. It is with these big ecclesiastics that Rasputin now will have to deal in holding his position.

Famous Herd of Pigs Destroyed.

LONDON, July 25.—Because of the ravages of swine fever it has been found necessary to destroy the world famous pedigree herd of Berkshire pigs owned by Arthur Hiscock of Manor farm, North Dorset. The extermination of the herd has been carried out under the supervision of the board of agriculture. The loss to the owner is estimated at not less than $10,000.

SIMPLE RECIPE FOR FUTURE DRAMAS.

Since the moving picture is supposed to have killed the legitimate theater in Paris and in European centers of fashion and culture generally, the leading playwrights are wondering what they can do to revive public interest in their art. Some are decidedly pessimistic, but there are a few cheerful victims of the "revolution." Capus and Lavedan, two brilliant French dramatists, have managed to keep their courage up. They are not only brave themselves but they have useful hints and suggestions for their fellow craftsmen.

They agree in asserting that dramatic authors will have to change completely their subjects as well as their methods. This would seem to be a rather formidable undertaking, but Messrs. Capus and Lavedan make light of the matter. They think the recipe quite simple, and are generous enough to give it in detail so that all may try it and prosper once more.

Well, here is the recipe: Follow life more closely than heretofore; think more deeply on the struggles and complications that are the raw material of drama; put more movement and vitality into plays; have high literary aims. Withal, do not talk over the heads of plain folk; avoid superior aims and excessive refinement; be sincere, human, and natural.

Now is there any excuse for failure to produce successful plays in view of these direct, explicit, simple instructions? Are we not justified in predicting a splendid dramatic revival all along the line, now that the secret of producing criticism proof plays is revealed?

TWO ALTRUISMS.

There are two kinds of idealists in foreign politics, not one, as Mr. Bryan and men of his way of thinking believe. The conflicting policies as to the handling of our Philippine problem illustrate this. The Roosevelt-Taft and Wilson-Bryan policies do not represent respectively selfish national aggression and lofty altruism. The two policies are to be distinguished, not on moral but on intellectual grounds. The Roosevelt-Taft policy is concrete, realistic, conservative. The Wilson-Bryan policy is based on generalization and idealistic radicalism. The former considers the ethnic and historic facts of the problem and seeks to work cautiously with them. The latter apparently relies upon the universal and immediate applicability of our political principles. The Roosevelt-Taft policy recognizes the backwardness of the island races and would have America preside over their progress. The Wilson-Bryan policy would remit them as soon as possible to "independence" with a gift of "free institutions" (Anglo-Saxon model) to "set them up housekeeping."

It is worthy of note, except by incurable doctrinaires, that virtually no one who knows Philippine conditions at first hand approves the latter course. There are substantial reasons of self-interest why a premature release of the islands from firm American control may be opposed. But waiving all considerations of self-interest, however modest, and considering the Philippine problem in the spirit expressed by the president with respect to Mexico, when he said "My passion is for the 80 per cent of the Mexican people who never had a look in on government," it seems to us as difficult to approve the administration's Philippine policy on altruistic grounds as upon grounds of self-interest. If Mr. Wilson's passion, and our own, is for the unrepresented masses of the Philippine peoples, why withdraw a control which at worst cannot be as interested as the control which will be substituted for it? Or do Mr. Wilson and Mr. Bryan believe that our guiding hand will be less gentle and less efficient than that of the ruling class which will take our place? Is the Visayan or the Tagalog superior to the American in political and social wisdom or benevolence? Is he more disinterested, more likely to feel a democratic passion for the mixed masses of the island peoples?

If he is, history is about to be given the shock of an unparalleled surprise.

It may be that it is better for civilization and even for the Filipinos themselves that they should fight out their own salvation as we fought out ours through centuries. But if we believe this let us act logically upon our belief, let us not compromise weakly, let us get out at once and stay out.

The Jones bill is a compromise which leaves us with heavy responsibilities, but strips us of means to meet them efficiently. We are not giving the Filipinos independence. We are not even giving the governing Tagalogs or Visayans independence. We are imposing a form of government on them and keeping a weak and unready hand upon the machinery.

LABOR AND COMPROMISE.

John H. Walker, the able president of the Illinois State Federation of Labor, made perhaps the most searching and fundamental remark of the hearing Tuesday before the industrial commission when he said:

"I think the main cause of industrial unrest is the double standard that is in existence, that is commonly accepted by most people as being right. A workingman is not supposed to ask anything more than a fair day's wage for a fair day's work. He is supposed to work until he is pretty fairly tuckered out, say eight hours, and when he does a fair day's work he is not supposed to ask for any more wages than enough to support his family; while with the business men the amount of labor furnishes no criterion for the amount they receive. People accept it as all right if they do not work at all, and accept it as all right that they get as much money as they can; in fact, they are given credit for getting the greatest amount of money with the least amount of work, and those things that are being accepted by the other side as the things that govern in everyday life and as being right have brought about this condition—this being, in my judgment, absolutely unfair; that is, on the merits of the proposition in dealing with the workers. The workers feel this, some unconsciously and some consciously, but all of them feel it, and it makes for unrest, in my judgment, and there can be no peace while that condition obtains."

Here is Mr. Walker, the Socialist, convinced theoretically that there must be fundamental changes in society to bring about justice to labor. At the other extreme are men like Mr. Dudley Taylor, attorney for the Employers' association, who declares that the incorporation and consequent financial responsibility of labor unions must come, together with the appointment of judges for life who would not be responsive to the labor vote. Mr. Taylor thinks such judges would constitute the ideal tribunal to pass on labor matters. Many employers will agree with him. No union men will.

Each man spoke as he felt; one for one side and one for the other. Here is the irrepressible conflict, the opposition of parties in a struggle based on the natural laws of human life. But it is between these extremes that progress comes—the result of the impacting forces. The contest will continue in varying forms, with gains and losses on both sides according to the viewpoint of each side, and from the struggle successive compromises will be forced which for a longer or shorter breathing spell must be accepted. Then another struggle; then another compromise.

Government, politics, love, sport, business, and art all proceed from compromise. There is no absolute among human beings.

There never was a constitution theoretically perfect even to the makers. Our own great document was a triumph of compromise, and in the more fluid relations of human society concession is the necessary law.

So it must be in the unending contest for the distribution of economic reward, not merely as between the manual worker and his employer but between all the many constituents of modern society.

Violence and injustice are human. Folly, selfishness, and shortsightedness are human, and all of these appear on both sides of the industrial struggle. What we need to realize and are realizing more clearly as time goes on is that the labor movement is a part of man's struggle upward, a part of the democratic advance which is the main phenomenon of our age.

Dr. C. W. Eliot Discusses Rural School Programs.

[From a letter to "The Banker-Farmer" of Champaign, Ill.]

There is great need for a thorough reconstruction of the programs of the rural schools. The instruction which they now provide in reading, writing, and arithmetic should not be diminished in amount, but altered in nature.

The greater part of the direct instruction should relate to natural history, agriculture, and farm life; and the books used for teaching, reading, and spelling should be on these subjects, with additional primers on geography, American history, and civics.

The arithmetic should be confined to the simplest examples in addition, subtraction, multiplication, and division, decimals being made familiar almost from the start; for the well taught child will learn about tenths and hundredths as quickly as about tens and hundreds.

All the child's reading and all the teacher's oral instruction should be illustrated with concrete examples; and every child should be trained to see, hear, and touch accurately, and to remember what it thus learns by observation. An important part of the school program should be devoted to the training of the senses, and to this kind of training of the memory. No matter what system be employed in teaching reading, every child should learn the alphabet by heart; and whenever a change is made in the system of teaching the children to write—such changes have been too frequent of late—the change should apply only to beginners, and not to the children who have already practiced long the rejected system.

In the last two years of the rural school's course every child should learn the elements of agriculture and gardening, and should have a garden plot to cultivate. Prizes should be offered for the best plots of vegetables, small fruits, and flowers. Every boy should be given practice in the use of carpenters' tools; and every girl should be taught to sew, cook, and can fruits and vegetables. Reading aloud and singing should be a substantial part of every rural school's program. The practice in English composition should mainly consist of writing descriptions of what the child itself sees, hears, or touches.

These improvements in rural schools cannot be made without spending more money than towns and counties have been in the habit of appropriating; but no town or county expenditure will be so profitable to the community as the expenditure which makes these changes possible.

In order to put these improvements into execution on a large scale, all normal schools will have to prepare their graduates to give instruction in the subjects and methods indicated. Some normal schools are doing that now, but by no means all.

In the meantime granges, farmers' clubs, bankers' and manufacturers' associations, endowed educational boards, and private givers may well promote liberally this much needed reform.

CHARLES W. ELIOT.

LA MARQUISE DE FONTENOY.

[Copyright: 1914: By the Brentwood Co.]

EX-PRESIDENT HUERTA'S departure from Mexico, to enjoy in Europe a fortune estimated at $10,000,000 and probably a good deal more, serves to call attention to the cleverness with which these fallen dictators make provision while in office for a rainy day. Monarchs do not have this foresight, and nothing has been more instructive in Paris during the last thirty or forty years than the contrast between the ostentatious opulence of former Central and South American presidents and the penury, and even destitution, of kings and queens who have lost their thrones.

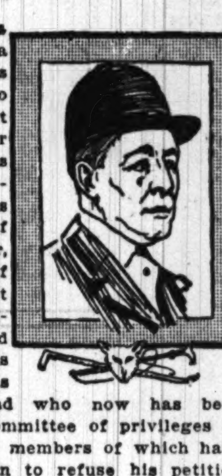
The late Ex-King Francis of Naples and his queen, who still survives, were forced repeatedly to pawn with the Mont de Piété, in Paris, and with Attenboroughs, the great pawnbrokers in London, not merely their jewels but even their table and toilet silver, and it is only since Queen Marie has lost her husband that she has been placed in relative affluence.

Ex-King Milan of Servia used to prowl about Paris completely penniless, and glad to accept loans of $50 and even $25.

Neither Napoleon III. nor Empress Eugenie had made any preparation for the loss of their throne in 1870, and for a time were in great difficulties, the empress being compelled to submit to the sale of all her jewels by auction.

While Parisians are thus accustomed to see ex-monarchs not merely in straitened circumstances but actually destitute, no one on the banks of the Seine can remember ever having seen there a former president of a transatlantic republic who has not been offensively rich. As a notable instance I need only mention ex-President Castro of Venezuela and ex-President Guzman Blanco of the same country. Blanco, indeed, found no difficulty, thanks to his ill-gotten wealth, in securing a titled husband for his daughter, in the person of the present Duc de Morny.

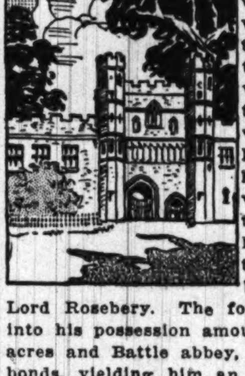
Ex-presidents of the Latin republics of America simply tread upon one another's heels on the banks of the Seine, where they thoroughly enjoy life and even obtain admission to official society and entertainments owing to their possession of the higher grades of the Legion of Honor, bestowed upon them while in office.



It is not often that a man at an interval of a number of years puts forward pretensions to two entirely distinct peerages, and after spending enormous sums in legal expenses is defeated in each case. This has fallen to the lot of Capt. Francis Forester, who after the death of his granduncle, the last Duke of Cleveland, unsuccessfully contested Henry de Vere Vane's claims to the old duke's barony of Barnard, and who now has been turned down by the committee of privileges of the house of lords, the members of which have recommended the crown to refuse his petition that the ancient barony of St. John, in abeyance for hundreds of years, and dating, according to his allegations, from 1290, should be revived in his favor.

The committee of privileges, after hearing an enormous amount of evidence, came to the conclusion that, while Capt. Forester had established his descent from the John de St. John, who flourished in the last three decades of the thirteenth century, that is to say, in the reign of Edward I., and had proved that he was this nobleman's principal heir, the parliament to which he had been summoned as a baron, was not really a valid and regular parliament, and in consequence thereof the summons could not be regarded as a title to the existence of a peerage of the realm in the reign of Edward I.

Yet on identically the same evidence the equally ancient barony of Hastings was called out of abeyance in 1841 in favor of Sir Jacob Astley. On the counsel of Capt. Forester pointing out the anomaly of reviving the Hastings peerage and reporting against that of St. John, the members of the committee declared that they could not be bound by older decisions, and that their knowledge and appreciation of the history of the thirteenth and fourteenth centuries as the result of modern research was infinitely superior to what it was in the early years of the reign of Queen Victoria.



It is quite possible, however, that Capt. Forester may receive a wholly modern peerage when the Unionists return to power, owing to the political influence which he enjoys through the possession of the very large amount of landed property which he inherited under the will of his granduncle, the last Duke of Cleveland, on the demise of the duchess, who, by the bye, was the mother of Lord Rosebery. The fortune which thus came into his possession amounted not only to broad acres and Battle abbey, but also to stocks and bonds, yielding him an income of considerably over a quarter of a million dollars a year.

Capt. Forester is married to the eldest daughter of Sir Powlett Milbank, chief of the famous Yorkshire sporting family of that name. Capt. Forester, who is a member of that ancient Shropshire family of which Lord Forester is the chief, has sold Battle abbey to Sir Augustus Webster, head of a house which had owned it for a couple of hundred years until purchased by the last Duke of Cleveland, whose favorite residence it became.

Battle abbey was built by William, the Conqueror, and richly endowed, with the object that its monks should perpetually pray for the souls of those Norman knights who had fallen in the battle of Hastings in 1066. It remained in possession of the monks until the reign of Henry VIII., who drove out the reverend fathers and presented the abbey and its lands to his favorite and master of the horse, Sir Anthony Browne, Knight of the Garter, who had attended King Henry on the Field of the Cloth of Gold, where he had distinguished himself by unhorsing the French monarch in a tourney.

Capt. Forester was probably very glad to get rid of Battle abbey. For not only are its occupants pestered by sightseers, but moreover there is supposed to be a species of blight on all the former property of the church confiscated by Henry VIII., and distributed among his favorites.

How to Keep Well. By Dr. W. A. Evans.

Questions pertinent to hygiene, sanitation, and prevention of disease, if matters of general interest, will be answered in this column. KEEPING FIT.

A WELL kept man had to spend a few days in the home of a woodsman away from the beaten track. The first morning he went to a dug well in the yard, drew a bucket of water, filled a tin pan and washed his face. He used the family roller towel. Beyond this he could not make much of a toilet.

A month later he had to make the same trip. This time he took his equipment with him. In the morning he cleared for action. He washed his face with his own toilet soap, dried it with his own towel. He brushed his teeth with his own tooth brush, brushed his hair with his own hair brush, his clothes with his own clothes brush, his shoes with his own shoe brush. The family hopeful broke in: "Mister, is yo' always that much trouble to yo'self?"

How much trouble should a man take to keep himself fit? On the one hand some men waste considerable time each day in keeping fit; on the other, some spend none at all. What is the proper middle ground?

CARE OF THE HAIR—A man should wash his scalp with soap and water at least twice a week. If, after the washing, his hair is too dry, he should use a very small portion of oil. The hair should be brushed thoroughly several times a day. The brushing is done to clean the scalp and hair as well as to stimulate them.

Is the individual brush too much trouble to oneself? I think not.

A woman cannot afford to spend the time required to wash her hair with soap and water twice a week. It is safe to say that the average woman would be the gainer by spending twice as much time on her hair as she now devotes to it.

Where an electric current is available, every home should have an electric fan. It is needed to keep the living room cool in summer and warm in winter. Nothing adds more to the comfort of a room in zero weather than an electric fan to move the hot air from the radiator to the places where it is needed. Nothing adds more to the comfort in summer than an electric fan to move away the air made hot by the body and to replace it by cooler air.

By following the plan of placing an electric fan behind the stove and blowing hot air through her newly washed hair, a woman can wash and dry her hair in one-fourth the time required under the old method.

CARE OF THE TEETH—The time spent in keeping the teeth clean is not too much trouble. An authority tells me that 15 per cent of the people brush their teeth; that six out of seven of the population make no pretense of brushing their teeth. At first thought one would say that since to six out of seven people brushing the teeth is a theory and not a custom and society is getting along pretty well, this talk about the necessity of clean teeth is useless. What are the facts?

The school inspectors tell us that there are not enough dentists to put in order the bad teeth of the children in the schools. The people complain of the amount of rheumatism, neuritis, and neuralgia. The insurance companies complain that the death rate from heart disease and allied disorders is on the increase.

Every one of these complaints, each a link in the chain, is justified. Society is getting along pretty well, but society would be getting on much better if six-sevenths of the people kept their teeth clean. The time spent in cleaning the teeth is not wasted. Such cleaning should consist of removing food particles after each meal, brushing with a soap powder twice a day, and thorough cleansing by a dentist at stated intervals.

CLEANING THE NOSE AND TONSILS—A large part of the rheumatism and the after-coming heart and kidney disease is the result of a neglected nasopharynx. The nose secretion that is on an exposed surface will be washed away. The secretion in the sinuses of the nose and in the pockets of the tonsils will not wash away.

If a person is prone to rheumatism, lumbago, or neuralgia he should go to a throat man at stated intervals to have his tonsil pockets and nose crannies cleaned out.

CLEANSING BATHS.—The frequency with which a bath is required depends upon the season of the year, kind of work done, and other circumstances and peculiarities. Under some circumstances the time spent in a daily cleansing bath will not be time wasted. One's work can be better done; there will be more snap.

Not all skins, though, will stand so much washing. The dead coat of the skin is there for a purpose. One feels himself clean as he sees this dead skin roll up, but it is easy to overdo the peeling process. The exposure of the delicate live skin makes one more responsive to environment, and this gives snap. The same exposure carried a bit too far is responsible for many summer rashes and bath rashes.

EXERCISE — There are people who spend an hour or more a day in exercising their muscles. Their bathrooms are equipped with dumbbells and exercisers. Some go to a gymnasium each day for a half hour or longer. A few spend enough time at it to develop those great, massive, monumental muscles shown in some advertisements.

On the other hand, we are told by authorities that muscles may be liabilities; that any muscle tissue in excess of that required for the day's work is useless in the first place and a burden in the second. They say: "Why carry around pounds of unused lumber; why feed unused tissue; why spend the hours a day needed to keep it in condition; why clog the system with its waste; why spend time, energy, money, in building up a Frankenstein, a muscle god, when common sense tells you it is an incumbrance that finally destroys its worshipers?"

How much trouble shall a man's muscles be to him? The muscles make up three-quarters of the man. If it is a matter of mathematics—as go the muscles, so goes the man.

However, the muscles are slaves. They are the hewers of wood and the drawers of water. A grain of brain, or an ounce of liver has more to do with a man's welfare than has a pound of muscle.

To say that a man to keep right should devote three-fourths of his effort to his muscles because they make up three-fourths of his weight is to lose sight of the factors which count.

As a further consideration we unintentionally exercise our muscles. Do we need any exercise in addition to the exercises of the daily routine? Yes. The man who works with his hands needs it just as much as the man who leads a sedentary life.

When a man has spent his day pounding rivets he needs a chance to play. The use of a different set of muscles rests him and helps him to get rid of the fatigue toxins resulting from his toil. He knows it. Does he not pitch, play ball, billiards, ten pins, when he gets a chance?

Those who argue that exercise is not necessary; that we develop in our work all the muscle power we need; that muscle strength over the daily need is an incumbrance; that function begets structure are partly right. Where the error comes in is here: There must be a broad margin between capacity and work. The man who depends on work alone to develop capacity will presently suffer from a sag in his capacity, and presently there will be a demonstrable sag in work.

Muscle forms a highly important part of some very important organs. The heart is a muscle. Flabby muscles mean a flabby heart. The stomach is a hollow muscle. Flabby muscles may mean poor digestion. The large intestines have a muscle coat. Flabby muscles may mean constipation. The walls of the abdomen are muscles. Flabby muscles may mean displaced stomach, movable kidney. The eyes are held in just the right position by muscles. Flabby muscles may mean a squint, eyestrain, headache.

A little while every day spent in exercise of muscles is not too much trouble to oneself. The effort should be to exercise those muscles not sufficiently exercised in the day's work. If play is not possible, a few minutes in the bathroom before an open window is nearly as good.

Exercise can be taken without any apparatus. The average man will succeed if he uses some form of exercise. The daily stunt should be mild. About every so often the task should be one to develop the wind.

The next generation will keep its teeth and tonsils cleaner than we have kept ours. Maybe a quarter of a century from now men will be clean enough to go back to the common drinking cup. When that time comes men will be much more supple than they now are. They will be able to bend over without getting a crick in the back. They will not crack in the knees.

At 50 now we are a crippled up lot. Some part of this disability is quite unnecessary.

When a man bends his knee through only forty degrees and the remaining one hundred degrees of latitude is left unused for a few years he finally gets so he hears a gritting, creaking sound whenever he bends it more than forty degrees. Any unused machine—joint—will rust tight in time.

The day's work keeps a certain area in each joint properly smooth and properly greased, but it does not keep fit the areas of the joint outside the used zone. No man should be satisfied to be bound in such narrow limits. If it were his horse he would say that it was stove-up and with that would get rid of it.

Is it good judgment to allow his joints to lose all their suppleness just because the work of the everyday only requires a limited motion? Should he not fight for a margin? How about the extraordinary day? Will he deprive himself of what that may bring him? His back, hip, and knee are not like his horse—to be sold and replaced.

It is not too much trouble to oneself to combine with the muscle exercises other exercises to keep the joints supple. For this purpose nothing is better than the setting up exercises used in the army. The hands, elbows, and shoulders, unless diseased, will require no attention. The backbone, the knees, and the feet are the joints in need.

A grown person can move his arms around about as well as a baby can. But where is the grown person that can put his toe in his mouth? Further, when grown people can wiggle their toes as a baby can, at that period of society flat feet will cease from troubling.

To my mind the next ten years will see the development of a new custom. The custom will not become universal in ten years, but it will be widespread. Perhaps twenty years later it will be as nearly universal as was the noisy Fourth custom five years ago.

The new custom will be taking the trouble with oneself to have a physical examination once a year or thereabouts. About every so often men will have a chemical and microscopical test of their urines. Probably other forms of laboratory tests will develop in the meanwhile.

They will go to their dentists to have their teeth examined; to the throat man for an examination of that organ; the internalist will examine the heart and lungs and take the blood pressure.

This plan in no sense will be based upon fear. It will have behind it the same motive that impels a man to brush his teeth, wash his face, or care for his hair.

The man who makes too much trouble for himself is a nuisance to himself and every one else. The man who is too little trouble to himself is offensive and sometimes spreads infection. The man who is just enough trouble to himself multiplies his days and increases his efficiency.

CELLAR VENTILATION.

I. H. writes: "I have heard people say never to open in very warm weather a cellar you wish to keep dry, but to open it at night or when the days are cooler. Others say to keep it open when the days are hot and dry. Is it true that you should not open up a cellar in warm weather on account of congealing the warm air on the cold walls and causing dampness?"

REPLY.

The air in summer contains a great deal of moisture. When it strikes a cold wall it is chilled enough to cause it to drop some moisture. In a northern climate any protected or shaded wall in a cellar or elsewhere is liable to sweat on a warm day.

Theoretically the remedy is to shut all openings and keep the water charged air away. Practically it cannot be done.

Practically the way to prevent wall sweating is to provide a circulation of air so complete that all cold walls will be brought to a temperature near that of the air.

If a cold walled cellar has few windows and doors and air cannot be made to circulate thoroughly through it, the walls will sweat regardless of what you do.

REMOVAL OF RUBBISH.

Chicago, July 20.—[To the Friend of the People.]—During what is known as clean-up week last spring I and several of my neighbors cleaned up the alley and vacant property adjoining, with the understanding the rubbish and refuse would be drawn away immediately.

Up to the present time the only rubbish wagon that has passed through our alley came through on Saturday afternoon, and he only stopped at once place, near the south end of the alley, where he loaded on a few weeds.

I asked why he had not picked up the rubbish before now. He said he could not see any. After I pointed out several piles of ashes and rubbish he promised to come back, but he has not yet shown up.

A barrel of old cans at this address has been removed. This vicinity calls for no rubbish service at any time, except on request.

INCOME TAX RECEIPT MAILED.

Chicago, July 26.—[To the Friend of the People.]—No receipt is given at the collector's office for moneys paid as income tax. What is to prevent many an error? What safeguard has the man who has paid in currency? If the books show that he has not paid, it comes down to a question of veracity. I paid my tax in currency this morning. Suppose the clerks forget to enter it. TAXPAYER.

Referring to this inquiry, re-payment of income tax, payment was made in currency on June 26, receipt issued therefor at once, and mailed to the writer's address.

LIGHTS FOR BROADWAY.

Chicago, July 17.—[To the Friend of the People.]—I understand Broadway between Bryn Mawr and Granville is to be paved immediately. Will you please tell us if the new lights which we have been promised will be installed before the paving commences. Will it be same electric lamps as put up on the cross streets in North Edgewater? JOHN BEAMER.

"Gas filled" incandescent lamps resembling in general the flame arc lamps now in general use throughout the city will be installed on this street within the next few months between the limits mentioned. Any underground work necessary for this installation will be installed in advance of the paving.

TERMS OF WILL.

Chicago, July 14.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—I have a wealthy paternal grandmother. If my father dies before she does, am I not entitled to his share of her property after her death? Can he will me his share, if he dies before she does? J. J.

In the event that your grandmother leaves a will, her property will be distributed in accordance with the terms of this instrument. In the event that this grandmother leaves no will your father will be entitled to a share of this property as her son. In the event that your father dies before your grandmother, his share of her property will go to you and to any other children whom he leaves.

TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

"A" IS NOT LIABLE.

Mount Vernon, Ia., July 14.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—A sold B a farm and warranted the title against the lawful claims of all persons. He furnished an abstract of title which was accepted. Fifteen years later B decided there was a defect in title and without consulting A began suit to quiet title. C appeared and claimed title. Court decided C had no claim, and rendered judgment for B as asked for. Is A legally liable for B's attorney fees and cost of suit by reason of the warranty? SUBSCRIBER.

So far as we can judge from your statement, A is not liable for B's attorney's fees and costs. The fact that no objection was made to the title for fifteen years bars B from making such a claim.

TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

NOT SUBJECT TO GARNISHMENT.

Chicago, July 9.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—If a man in the county assessor's office owes a grocery bill, can this bill be collected by going to the assessor? A. R. F.

It may be that the assessor will recommend the payment of this bill. However, the salary of a county employé is not subject to garnishment. TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

BOTH ARE LIABLE.

Chicago, July 14.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—My two sons signed a lease for a year. One has lost his position. Are they liable for the rent? MRS. A. S.

Both of the signers of this lease are liable for the full amount of the rent, and the fact that one cannot pay does not relieve the other from liability.

PLEA FOR THE DEFECTIVE.

Chicago, July 22.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—The savants have met, read, recited, resolved, are now wending their steps homeward, and the old scheme of things is going to settle back into its wonted status quo. The world is too prone in this swiftly moving day to pass the smutted and sullied sacrifice of the cast-out while it pauses to pay homage, honor, and hero worship to the ravener, ravisher, and rabble-successful. I plead that more kindness and greater consideration be shown to unfortunates; that each of us constitute himself a committee of one, contributing at all times his small best in human kindness, love, and protection toward alleviating the sorrowful lot of the soul-sick.

I appeal especially to business men to "have a heart," not to exploit the poor defectives, nor to permit other business men to prey on them. I am not asking for funds, not seeking to organize a society. Heaven knows there is a surfeit of them now. All I pray for is that Christian and Jew and agnostic and every man extend the helping hand to the defective whenever the occasion presents itself, assuring all that the defective, often love-starved, needs a little of the fellow feeling which makes us wondrous kind spent on him, and that to the doer of good to the defective will come a rich and rare enison.

NATURALIZED ENGLISHMEN AND PEERAGE.

Boston, Mass., July 20.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—In your Sunday's issue you say it is impossible for a naturalized Englishman to become a peer. I beg you to examine the case of Francis Allston Channing, Lord Channing of Wellingboro.

While the peerage is bought and sold for Englishmen, when foreigners are concerned the English still maintain their authority and honor. In rewarding foreigners the English still know the difference between gentleman and wealthy man, and exercise as much good taste in selecting their friends and rulers as in selecting their dogs and horses. I beg to state that Lord Channing is not wealthy, does not contribute to the party funds, and owns no newspapers, and that he never took steps in his whole life to obtain a peerage, but, instead, nearly refused it.

JOHN TEMPLE LL. JEFFRIES.

FIGHT FOR TEMPERANCE AN OLD ONE.

Camp Point, Ill., July 17.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—In your issue of yesterday you say: "The battle against the demon rum began a generation ago."

Seventy-five years ago, when I was a lad, a battle was raging against drunkenness and the drink habit. Temperance men taught that obedience to the divine law that prohibits drunkenness was conducive to the health, happiness, and prosperity of the individual, the family, and society; that drunkenness was a grievous sin; that the drink habit ought to be abandoned. Twenty-five years of this teaching lessened the consumption of distilled liquors in the United States from seven and a half gallons per capita to two and a half gallons. Distilled liquors were the beverages in common use in those days.

The saloon is the outgrowth of a demand, and can be successfully combated by removing the cause that brought it into existence and in no other way.

PHRENOLOGY AND OFFICE-SEEKERS.

Chicago, July 19.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—If THE TRIBUNE could get rid of the chronic officeholder as it did with the quack doctor it would be a good thing for Chicago. Every year we have a bunch ready to run for any office, some don't know a debit from a credit, others are only expert foam blowers instead of accountants. In order to give the voters a chance to size up the candidate for office this year I would suggest that each candidate have his head examined by a first class phrenologist and have the chart printed for the benefit of the voters.

WORK FOR HUERTA.

Elkhart, Ind., July 20.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—Now that Huerta is out of a job, why would it not be a good plan for the administration at Washington to engage him to assist in an advisory capacity in the diplomatic service? Huerta has certainly shown himself to be a past master in diplomacy, and has beaten Wilson and Bryan at every turn of the Mexican muddle, and has beaten them to a frazzle. His services could probably be had at reduced Chautauqua rates.

CHAMBERLAIN'S WIDOW TO VISIT

Will Come to America as Guest of Relatives in Near Future.

WEARS NO MOURNING.

BY LADY MARY.

LONDON, July 11.—Long before Chamberlain died he and his wife used to discuss her future, a subject which he would introduce again and again, much to the discomfiture of Mrs. Chamberlain. Among other things he asked her not to wear the orthodox widow's bonnet, to which he had a curious objection. Her dearest friends have criticised her severely for not arraying herself since her husband's death in heavy trappings of woe, little knowing that in not doing so she is merely carrying out the dead man's request.

From what I know of Mrs. Chamberlain, I believe, it will be futile for the king to offer her a title, as is said to be his intention. She is prouder of being Mrs. "Joe" than if they made her a duchess, and often has said so. Considering the life of incessant toil, which, in her devotion to her late husband, she has led, it is amazing how young she looks. Somebody who saw her at the funeral said she did not seem a day over 30, though her hair is beginning to turn gray.

Has Simple Tastes.

Chamberlain has left her in very easy circumstances, as he has given her everything he possibly could give away from the family, and as she is also provided with a handsome annuity arranged long before her husband's death she will have all she needs. Her tastes are most simple, and it has been her boast that she never pays more than $25 for a dress. She has not had a real evening gown for ten years.

"What do I want with evening dresses," she said some time ago to a friend who has always been on intimate terms with the Chamberlain family.

Mrs. Chamberlain used to refuse even to go to a theater because she did not wish to leave her invalid, and once, when induced to join a party at the opera much against her will, she went round to the box office twice during the performance to telephone inquiries about her husband.

I hear one of the first things Mrs. Chamberlain will do is to pay a long visit to the United States to see her relations, many of whom she has not laid eyes on for years.

Easy Mark for Beggars.

Of all the extremely wealthy men of the day there is none who is so pursued by genteel beggars who rig up all sorts of stories to gain his sympathy as is Lord Howard de Walden. An artist at heart, he has the good nature of the true bohemian, something of which he is. Were it not for his wife, who has taken to inspecting his business letters and interviewing self-styled philanthropists who come to see him daily, he would manage to get through a goodly part of his colossal inheritance.

The funny part is that where tenants and employés are concerned he is as hard as nails and will strike out for his rights, but an impostor with a smooth tongue can get anything out of him. Both Lord Howard de Walden and his wife hate society and never go to parties unless they be small gatherings of friends. He has been seen dining in Soho with good bohemians, musical enthusiasts, and apparently enjoying the fare far more than if he were at the Savoy or Ritz hotels. He likes to see his wife beautifully turned out, but his own favorite costume is a lounge suit and a Homburg hat completed by a pair of ugly spectacles. And how Lady de Walden has implored him to wear a pince-nez!

Cyril Henry Popular.

Cyril Henry, a son of Sir Charles Solomon Henry and Lady Henry, who was Miss Julia Lewisohn of New York, is voted by the girls, who become more and more fastidious, the "nicest young man in town." He has only just come of age, in honor of which event his mother and he—for the invitations were issued in their joint names—had a brilliant ball lately. He got no breathing time that night, dancing every item on the program and all the extras. In the midst of the gayeties, however, about supper time he managed to steal down to the housekeeper's room to whirl his old nurse around, she having been invited to 5 Carlton Gardens for the occasion. It was noticed that the hero of the event paid a lot of attention to Miss Gwen Robertson, the daughter of the parliamentary secretary, whose mother is also a clever American. Miss Robertson is quite a Juno, imposing looking and stately—altogether unlike the typical girl of the day—so sweet and frivolous, trying to pretend that she has not an ounce of brains in the world until you talk to her and find her out.

Cyril Henry's mother is very keen that he should have a political career and with this end in view has made him study elocution, history, and political economy.

Preparing for Cowes Week.

People are beginning to talk about Cowes week, which, by all accounts, is going to be very gay, with plenty of Americans to the fore. Lady Leith of Fyvie is to have a large family party there, including Miss Lorna Burn, her granddaughter, who, I am told, was engaged for twenty-four hours about a month ago, and then broke it off. Of course, she has no end of suitors, but when it is a question of pleasing her grandmother as well as herself, it is not an easy matter.

I hear Lady Decies, who has done things so handsomely here on a few occasions, may also be there, as the Goulds, her devoted parents, who are frightfully proud of her, as they well may be, are going to put in an appearance. Society at Cowes is abominally cliquey, and if you do not belong to a particular set you are out of all the smartest things. But it used to be forty times worse years ago when King Edward, then Prince of Wales, who detested that kind of thing, took the late Consuelo, Duchess of Manchester, and Lady Hesketh, who was a daughter of the late Senator William Sharon of Nevada and San Francisco, into the gardens of the R. Y. S., entertained them at tea, and put an end to the prejudice against Americans. There was furious jealousy over the then Prince of Wales' attention to the two beautiful Yankees, but his action was responsible for admitting them into circles in which they never before moved.

Leopard Hunt in Alps.

GENEVA, July 11.—Sportsmen in the district of Secco, on the Swiss-Italain frontier, are welcoming the opportunity of a big game hunt in the Alps.

Having escaped from its cage in a train, a full grown menagerie leopard took to the heights and has been wandering about for two days. By means of dogs, a shooting party consisting of policemen and sportsmen, all armed with rifles, is trying to follow the animal.

The Woman Question
THE VOTE
by Robert Herrick

THE other day they had a suffrage parade in Boston—in Boston, of all places! But they have them everywhere nowadays: the suffrage parade is getting to be a national festival, like Arbor day or Thanksgiving, only it comes every little while. I had to fight my way literally through this parade from the railroad station to my hotel. It was a Saturday afternoon, and the rivulets of Boston streets overflowed, as they always do when more than a handful of people pour into them. At last, after squeezing through several blocks of jellylike humanity, I reached my hotel on the hill and turned to look at the procession as it came over the brow of Beacon street, punctuated by frequent brass bands. They marched straight and well, these thin New England women, each one holding a banneret or some sort of flag. There was an aid in white with an enormous field marshal's sash who corrected the wavering ranks as they came opposite the hotel, much like a skillful dressmaker who stands off and criticises the hang of a gown. There were some women on horseback, a few astride, and a good many more in automobiles than should have been. It was a well managed affair, prompt and businesslike, with a curious dignity about it. One band as it topped the hill was playing "How Firm a Foundation Ye Saints of the Lord," and the sympathizers jammed around the statehouse took up the air and sang the old hymn. As I watched the ranks of perfectly refined women—the kind of women that the old order has created—stepping out a little uncertainly on the rough cobbles of the street, walking with heads seriously erect, keeping in step, intent on the business, unmindful of the myriad eyes leveled on them, I felt somehow that a new order was beginning, and that a suffrage parade, after all, was not quite the useless performance I had always supposed it to be. It was something to swing this long column of marching women; it was a living proof of convictions. A few men, not many, marched by the side of the women. One felt that they were the more courageous.

The crowded streets were abloom with yellow and red, for the "antis" had chosen the red rose as a symbol, while the "pros" had taken yellow. And the flower venders must have blessed both parties, because everybody seemed to have bought either a red or yellow flower, and was wearing it, too.

I am told that "conservative Boston," that all "good Boston society," is strongly anti. There must, however be a good many promising looking people in Boston outside of the Back Bay; red was not the dominant color.

With the music of the brass bands descending into the narrow streets of the city in recurrent waves, my mind turned once more to musing about the suffrage side of the woman question. It is no longer a joke, as even the most superficial man must realize. Quite apart from the fact that in a number of western states suffrage has already been won, the general attitude about the vote agitation is very different all over our country today from what it was a short ten years back. In Chicago, in Washington, in New York, one feels that female suffrage, universally, is only a question of time, and a very brief time at that. It should come, it must come.

And yet it has seemed to me a pity that the vocal efforts, at any rate, of all feminists are so narrowly concentrated at present on getting the vote. To most persons feminism—the whole woman question—means nothing more than the suffrage agitation, which a certain class of English women by their lawless tactics have put in such a bad light. The English suffragists have made of a good cause a notorious nuisance. All the energies of the woman movement are set upon this one single point of their large program. Even such a sane leader as Miss Addams throws an increasing emphasis upon getting the vote for women. The vote, of course, is something definite, a good war cry. Ours is an age of political panacea, when we believe that the world can be made over every spring and autumn by the simple process of voting about it. That is the natural and logical result of democrary, and the majority of the people still believe that they express their wills when they vote. No wonder the feminists believe in the magic of the vote and subordinate everything else to that one thing.

When any of us becomes excited about anything and thinks about it intensively that object gets out of perspective with all the rest of the world, whether it be a food, or a passion, or a religion.

To the mere male mind, to one like myself, who has long enjoyed the privilege of voting this yearning on the part of the woman mind for the ballot is somewhat incomprehensible. There are ardent patriots still left who feel that things are done by voting about them, real things; but they are not many among the more reflective class. The vote has been reduced, or rather expanded, in this country to its logical absurdity. So much so that ten or fifteen millions more ballots would mean very little in the grand result. By the time that women get the vote in all the states there may come a reaction against the voting habit, and we shall be experimenting with systems of preferential voting or suppressing the suffrage.

I know that the serious suffragist will consider this attitude as an example of masculine piffle. The right to vote means much more to the real feminist than the privilege of dropping a piece of paper in a ballot box every few months or punching the keys of a voting machine, as the case may be. The vote is a symbol, a sign of results accomplished, a living proof of equality and freedom gained, of becoming a responsible free human being like her trousered companions in humanity—of finally reading out of the marriage service that absurd word, which never had any meaning. Any one who has followed my earlier remarks on anti-suffrage arguments knows how little I regard them. Of course, women should vote, if they want to. And it is natural enough that they should want to. As soon as enough of them want consistently and coherently to vote they will get the insubstantial privilege. There is always some world inertia for every new idea to overcome, but woman suffrage has had a comparatively smooth course. Think of the centuries it took to rid the world of the ideal of political absolutism, of negro slavery.

And the sooner it comes the better, if not for the politics of the country, at least for women themselves, for the larger issues of the feminist movement. For after the vote has been won women will not "settle down," as some men fondly hope, but will look about for something to do with their toy, for new worlds to upset. And then the real fun will begin.

Quite seriously, even if men believe as they profess to sometimes, that female suffrage will deteriorate our political life (which seems to me an absurdity), how could it be worse, more inane and corrupt than men have made it in this country? It is likely to be the same, perhaps at certain emotional moments of crisis rather better, with women expressing themselves. But should the direst forebodings prove correct, even then men ought still to give women the vote. For the one thing that voting does to those who believe in it is to make for responsibility, and the taking of responsibility is the only sort of education that counts. Men who would like to have real companions—intelligent, self-governing human beings—about them in their homes should be as eager as good parents are to educate children to do everything in their power to evoke character in women. The privilege of going to the polls seems to be one wholesale way of giving a sense of responsibility.

Those men who are most contemptuous or pessimistic about "the sex," who treat women as a kind of domesticated animal or spoiled child to be caressed or cuffed at will, should be hastily converted to suffrage for their own sakes. They surely cannot desire to live surrounded always by these irresponsible beings whom they profess neither to respect nor to trust! The way to rid themselves of the uncertain creature of their imagination whom they do not think worthy of confidence is to give her all the rights and privileges of an exact equality, in the hope that she may awake to her responsibilities.

To my thinking, there are only two logical oppositions to woman suffrage; the first on the part of the sensual, predatory male who dislikes the idea of his sex plaything escaping from her dependence upon him in thought and deed, and thus making it harder for him to gratify his sensualities and egotisms through her. And the other, on the part of the parasitic woman, who realizes her comfortable privileges and emoluments under the present system between the sexes and naturally fears any change which may disturb her position. The sensual male and the parasitic female, these are the only reasonable opponents to woman suffrage. As a matter of fact, it is among these classes that one finds the most vehement denunciation of suffrage. Many of them belong to "our very best society," and some to our very lowest. To all other men and women alike the giving women the right to vote should be a simple and reasonable process to be accomplished as soon as possible without more fuss and needless excitement.

But when women have the vote everywhere, when suffrage is no longer an unappeased desire or a novelty, I suspect that a good many ardent women will be disappointed. "Is that all?" they will say to themselves. "We are no different now from what we were before, and the world is just about the same as it was under the evil rule of men." And, the cause won, there will be no more limelight for certain temperaments to frolic in, no more suffrage meetings, exhortings, and denunciations from platforms, no more grand parades of the faithful, and all the rest of the "agitation" which one suspects is so deliriously agreeable to some of those "prominent in the cause." A period of ennui will ensue until the next great cause announces itself in the feminist program.

Let us hope it will be something more real, more important, more useful for women and for society than the Vote!

BRITISH HYDROAEROPLANES MUST HAVE BIG ENGINES.

[SPECIAL CABLE TO THE TRIBUNE.]

LONDON, July 25.—While it was intended at first that the transatlantic flier America should be equipped with two 100 horsepower engines, and now that an additional 100 horsepower engine has been added, it is interesting to learn that the English admiralty demands far more than 800 horsepower for a hydroaeroplane. A famous airman, and also an aeroplane builder, had a long conference at the admiralty this week, where he was frankly told that the British navy department would not consider any waterplane in future orders whose engines did not exceed 400 horsepower. This is believed in aeronautical circles to indicate that the admiralty is about to begin the construction of a fleet of cruiser destroyers and dreadnaughts of the air.

WANTS FEMALE "BOBBIES" ON LONDON POLICE FORCE.

LONDON, July 25.—Female "bobbies" will be a feature of London life if Lord Bentinck's amendment to the criminal justice bill is carried by parliament. He proposes that each metropolitan and county borough should have at least two women police constables.

In the general bill, which is considered certain to pass, women officers are provided to look after women prisoners out on probation and each police station would have its matron.

The men will also gain by the new law. Workers will be allowed seven clear days within which to pay fines in order that a pay day may be included in the period. At present a prisoner unable to settle the fine on sentence has to take the alternative of jail.

The Misfortunes of Others.

The [illegible] Times

The news of any great financial failure, such as has recently been announced from New York, is apt to bring to many reasonably kind hearted people a comfortable little glow of happiness. It is not that they actively delight in the misfortunes of some one whom they do not know; that would show an incredible degree of general malevolence. It is rather that the gigantic catastrophe, with its array of figures so vast as to convey little to the ordinary minds, enables them to appreciate the moderate blessings that are theirs. The fact that the mighty bankers of the earth are no longer conferring night and day over their affairs, and that their exiguous incomes arrive at regular intervals, subject to no more uncertain peril than that of the tax collector, appears for once a cause of positive rejoicing. The rich man's difficulty of finding an investment to combine adequate security with a remunerative rate of interest appears more genuine than it has done before.

Those of us whose humble barks do not ride upon open and adventurous waters, but are tied up to a willow tree in a backwater, can hardly be expected to live in a state of perpetual ecstasy over that quiet anchorage. It is only when the great waters are troubled and the proud ship goes down that our backwater assumes a cozy and enviable air. There are a few people who continually and consciously derive pleasure from reflections of this comparative order; not in the least because they are unsympathetic, but rather because they have vivid and sympathetic imaginations. Most of us, it is true, only enjoy these delights of gratitude unconsciously. When we are warm in bed and the wind whistles through the trees outside the window we think, if we think at all about it, that we are merely taking an esthetic delight in that mysterious and romantic swishing of the branches; but there must surely be, though we do not know it, an added satisfaction in that we are not out in the dark to face the storm.

How far, if at all, it is allowable to indulge in the pleasures of comparison must be a delicate question. In some instances, at any rate, they must be regretfully set down as immoral. If, for example, we could be informed that no single person was abroad on that wild night, and the rain beat and the wind blew harmlessly, and if that knowledge brought with it a perceptible diminution of cheerful smugness, the evidence against us would be damning. There are some common cases in which our feelings are quite indefensible.

Indeed, it may seriously be argued that this is a laudable frame of mind, deliberately to be cultivated, since, in order to enjoy it to the full, we must also cultivate a sympathetic understanding of the feelings of others. We must try to put ourselves in the places of those flying for their lives down the side of a volcano, in order to be really thankful enough for

Even the tramp, without the roof over his head, does not in the abstract mean much to us, and so, owing to this lamentable lack of imagination, we are driven back for the purposes of thankfulness, on the misfortunes of our friend and neighbors.

This is altogether too dangerous a form of game to play. It is so likely that we shall, in spite of our better selves, feel just one malicious thrill, and, if we do, we may suffer tortures of conscience afterwards. Perhaps, then, it is wisest after all not to play the game in any shape, but not to do so is to forego much pleasant exercise of the mind.

Trust Deeds.

While the old form of mortgage, dating back centuries, still serves admirably the purpose of furnishing security for loans on farms and village property, for use in large deals in city property something more adjustable is needed. To fill this want the trust deed has been perfected. While having all the force and effect of a mortgage, it makes possible and convenient the transfer or sale of the note or other obligation which it secures without entering the transaction in the county records. The name of the holder of the note does not appear of record anywhere, and inquirers—curious or salaried—can find no trace of the real ownership.

The trust deed conveys to a third party the real estate involved to be held as security for notes or bonds which are therein described. Thereafter the notes or bonds may be sold at will, the security of the trust deed follows them, and if default occurs the trustee is bound to institute foreclosure proceedings.

Of course, the trust deed is filed with the county recorder, just like an ordinary mortgage. If any attempt should be made to sell or further incumber the property involved the public record would be there as warning of a prior lien held by the trustee for the benefit of the unknown persons.

When downtown buildings are used as the basis for bond issues the trust deeds are oftentimes formidable documents of many pages describing the property, the ground lease under which it is held, and all possible contingencies which may arise. Of course, the most vital thing in the security of such a bond issue is that the ground rent shall be paid. The ground lease usually provides that rent must be paid on certain days—probably the first days of certain months of each year—and that if an installment of rent shall not be paid within sixty days (or some other definite time) after it falls due, the owner of the ground may assume possession of the building.

To protect the interests of holders of leasehold bonds the trust deed provides that in case the owners of the building fail to pay the ground rent within thirty days (or some other period shorter than that named in the ground lease) after it falls due, then the trustee can take possession of the building, pay the ground rent, and administer the property for the benefit of the bondholders.

Numerous other contingencies are similarly described and guarded against in the trust deed, which is flexible enough to cover all possible cases.

International Harvester.

E. H. B.—There is not a great deal of preference between International Harvester Corporation and International Harvester Company of New Jersey stocks. For the fiscal year ended Dec. 31, 1913, the corporation reported income from operations at $10,856,628, and surplus after interest and depreciation at $3,055,253, or at the rate of 23.85 per cent on the preferred stock, whereas the New Jersey company reported income from operations at $13,284,671, and surplus after interest and depreciation at $3,815,526, or at the rate of 26.38 per cent on preferred stock. The amount of stock is the same in both companies, $30,000,000 preferred and $40,000,000 common, but the property account of the corporation is carried at practically $20,000,000 less than that of the New Jersey company, although total assets of the former are nearly equal to those of the latter. The rate of dividend is the same in both companies, preferred 7 and common 5. The preferred stocks maintain practically the same market value, but the common shares vary in difference of market value from one to three points.

Southern Pacific has been paying regular dividends since 1906, when 2½ per cent was paid, 5¼ in 1907, and 6 per cent in 1908, which rate has been continued. Earnings have been sufficient to pay all interest and dividend charges and to carry a credit to surplus account, but it can not be predicted how long the dividend will be continued, because a bad crop year or other unexpected losses might make it advisable to discontinue dividends until such losses are recouped. In Southern Pacific there is only one class of stock—common—and if it is necessary to cut down disbursements the stock stands first in line.

New Patent Not Savings Investment.

A. T. W., Milwaukee, Wis.—Even if the device you ask about is covered by a "fundamental patent" a purchase of shares in a company formed to exploit the patent would not be a savings investment. If the patent should prove valuable there might be a long legal battle to be fought and won before any returns could be realized. This department cannot investigate the records to determine whether the patent really has been granted and if it is a "fundamental" one.

Frisco Subsidiary Bonds.

W. H. W., Sumner, Ill.—The Frisco railway appears not to be a guarantor of the bonds of its subsidiary, the New Orleans, Texas and Mexico. The bonds are secured by a first mortgage on the subsidiary. The latter's May report to the interstate commerce commission shows a deficit.

Chicago Stock Yards.

H. W. S., Buffalo, N. Y.—The Union Stock Yards and Transit company of Chicago, after an independent existence of twenty-five years, passed in 1890 under control of the Chicago Junction Railways and Union Stock Yards company, a corporation formed under the laws of New Jersey. The new corporation bought and owns $13,095,000 of the outstanding $13,200,000 capital stock of the Union Stock Yards company. In 1912 the Chicago Stock Yards company took control by guaranteeing 9 per cent annual dividend on the shares of the Junction Railway and Union Stock Yards company. Most of the common stock of the latter company was deposited and its voting power transferred to the new company.

The Union Stock Yards and Transit company is still the operating company. It has no mortgage debt, but has outstanding $500,000 4½ per cent debentures due Jan. 1, 1920. The Junction Railways and Union Stock Yards company which holds practically all the stock of the operating company pays 8 per cent dividends on $6,500,000 of common stock and 6 per cent on $6,500,000 preferred. There never has been any receiver for any of these companies.

St. Louis Southwestern Subsidiary.

W. H. C.—The only quotations found of Stephenville North and South bonds is 80 bid, 90 asked. The bonds are guaranteed principal and interest by the St. Louis Southwestern Railway company, but the net earnings of that company have decreased so that for May last it reported a deficit of $156,522 in comparison with a surplus of $55,339 in 1913. The deficit is due both to increased rentals and interest charges, and to a decrease of gross earnings. The St. Louis Southwestern paid dividends on its preferred stock for several years, but the last quarterly dividend was omitted. The Stephenville North and South railway is controlled by the St. Louis Southwestern through ownership of all its capital stock. The road was chartered in 1907. It earned $7,637 in 1909, but has been showing an increasing deficit since then, the deficit balance for the year ended June 30, 1913, being $126,691.

Food Sales Company.

R. C. M., Fort Atkinson, Wis.—The Dennos Food Sales company is operating on semi-coöperative lines. It sells shares to physicians, druggists, nurses, and others who might help advance the sales of its product. The assets of the company are chiefly good will. The company has been operating six years in the west and two years here. It is stated at the company's office that it has begun paying dividends at the rate of 6 per cent a year. This is a business venture; not a savings investment.

FEMININE FOLLY, FEMININE TASTE

RACE WEEK COSTUMES.

PARIS, July 18.—Dress during the great racing week of the Paris season might be described as the "sublimated essence of levity, caprice, vanity, and extravagance" without the slightest straining after cynical expression or epigrammatic wit. Women wear things during that week which emphasize the height to which feminine folly and feminine taste can rise. The society woman wears priceless lace and wonderful pearls at the races when, as a rule, for the same kind of events earlier in the season she would be satisfied to put on a simple tailormade.

The Undaunted Mannequin.

The mannequin, who is such a feature of the Paris race course, surpasses herself in the launching of novelties. Nothing daunts her. She will put on the most amazing costume and carry it with the most perfect sang froid. Inconsistency is her watchword where her clothes are concerned, and to muffle herself in velvet, furs, and other wintry habiliments on a hot June day is a conceit of which she is rather proud than otherwise. Clothes to her are the beginning and the end of living and on them she plays the melodies of life. This week she has had a wide scope for her talent and she has not lost any opportunities.

Luxury in Materials.

Quite the most luxurious tendency in the matter of dress has been shown in the splendid materials with which women array themselves. The most lovely velvets, exquisite ermine, lace which must cost mighty sums of money and need constant repairing, silks and satins, embroideries, buttons of precious stones, feathers of the rarest variety; everything, in fact, which it is difficult to get and impossible to buy cheaply.

The reason for this tendency is, of course, the wonderful expedience shown by the managers of the big shops in having found a way to get every new fashion in their show rooms ten minutes after it has appeared in public. Nothing can prevent them from copying a drapery, a coat, or a sleeve, but there is much to prevent them from employing the same materials as those used by the big dressmaker, and it is here that the Rue de la Paix can hold its own.

Cheap Stuffs Ineffective.

It uses materials of such beautiful quality that only very big purses can pay for them, and it is useless to say that a cheaper quality will give the same effect, for it will not, and in all the dresses which were worn during the grande semaine it was the quality of the material which counted almost more than anything else. A simple lingerie dress with a flat black velvet waist belt and a short black cape with sleeves could look exquisite if the dress were hand worked, and the velvet of that fine pliable kind which "falls by itself"; but if the dress were machine worked and the velvet common, it looked commonplace, if not common.

The Lack of Color.

Very little color was worn during the great week, but few dresses were without just one touch of something gay unless the scheme was one all white, or all black, with purpose. A flower, generally a rose, would be tucked into the waist belt, or pinned on the shoulder on a lace dress or on a dark silk frock: a colored waist belt would strike a vivid note on many white dresses, and in the hats pale pink was seen a good deal with black, where a week or two ago one saw white. Vivid apple green sometimes crossed one's vision as a whole dress, as a silk pelisse, or as a sash.

WHEAT EXCITED BY WAR RUMORS

CORN HAS FAIR UPTURN

The bullish foreign news in respect to the possibility of war between Austria and Servia gave the wheat market a wild and excited opening yesterday, with a frantic rush on the part of shorts to cover. Sellers of offers were also in the scramble, especially those who sold offers on December. At the opening there was little wheat for sale, and the December was bid up to 86⅜c, or 2⅝c above the previous close. The other months were less in demand, but were strong. Resting prices for the day were 1⅛@1¼c to 1½@1⅝c up.

British consols and French rentes were sharply lower, reflecting the unsettled political conditions, but the foreign grain markets were not much excited. Liverpool was ⅛d up; Berlin, ½c up; Antwerp, unchanged; Paris, ⅛@⅜c up; and Budapest, 1⅛c up. Foreigners did not follow the advance in prices here, and there was little call for wheat from exporters.

Local Traders Excited.

While reports during the day from abroad were of a somewhat more reassuring nature than early, traders were nervous and the market had several sharp rallies. Commission houses were free sellers. Barrell, Andrew, Shearson-Hammill, J. Rosenbaum, and Armour were the principal sellers. King-Farnum, Hulburd-Warren-Chandler, and houses with New York connections were credited with buying wheat early.

The cash demand was shut off by the advance in futures and sales were the smallest in some time at 100,000 bu, mostly to mills. Charters were 1,200,000 bu, part to Montreal and part to Buffalo, Port Colborne, and Georgian bay points. The rate was 4c to Montreal and ⅞c to Buffalo. Offerings from the country were quite liberal in some instances and light in others. Outside cash markets were steady to firm relative to the futures. Minneapolis wheat stocks decreased 200,000 bu for one day.

Northwest Reports Mixed.

Reports from the northwest were a good deal mixed, but nearly all the experts who sent in reports, while admitting considerable damage, said the general conditions were still indicative of a fair average crop. In western North Dakota the acreage has been increased a good deal, and this will offset losses in other sections. Liverpool cabled that Russian and Indian offers were firm and that the continent was a good buyer of wheat.

Receipts here were 820 cars, with 620 cars inspected yesterday, and primary receipts for the week were 16,472,000 bu, against 12,852,000 bu a year ago. For the week, receipts at Chicago were 7,184,000 bu, against 5,524,000 bu shipped out. Northwest receipts were 261 cars, against 158 cars a year ago. Winnipeg had 121 cars; last year, 111 cars. Clearances for the day were 473,000 bu.

Liverpool Corn Steady.

The corn market was not affected as much as wheat by the foreign news. Cables from Liverpool were only ¼d up, in spite of the possibility of the interruption of Danubian shipments. There was a fair demand here, principally from local shorts, while commission houses, led by Armour, Bartlett-Frazier, and Shearson-Hammill, were good sellers. Brosseau, Geahart, Bailey, and Hellman were buyers. Last prices were ½@1c higher.

The cash market was ¼@½c up, and there were sales for shipment of 55,000 bu. Country offerings were moderate. Generally, outside cash prices were easier. Plate offerings were reported firm at Liverpool. Receipts here were 128 cars, with 114 cars the inspection yesterday, and primary receipts for the week were 2,955,000 bu, against 2,863,000 bu a year ago. Weather conditions were generally fair, with the official map showing but little precipitation.

Oats Show Easy Tone.

The demand for oats was moderate, and at the close prices were a shade up to ⅜c off. Hedging sales by cash houses checked the buying demand. Harris-Winthrop, Ware-Leland, McKenna-Rodgers, and Brosseau were fair buyers, and Armour and Lamson were sellers. Cash prices were steady to a little lower, and sales were 135,000 bu. Receipts here were 128 cars, with 114 cars the inspection Saturday. Primary points for the week had 4,412,000 bu, compared to 4,113,000 bu a year ago.

Products Close Higher.

The foreign developments, together with the early strength in grains, helped provisions recover part of the losses of the previous day. Swift was credited with buying lard and commission houses were fair buyers. Tietgens led the selling. Hog prices were about steady and receipts were 9,000, with 32,000 the estimate for tomorrow and the estimate for this week was 120,000 bu. Receipts in the west for the week were 361,700, against 443,000 a year ago. The cash trade was moderately active.

Rye Prices Higher.

Rye prices made a further gain of 2c, selling at 67@68c for No. 2 and 67c for No. 1. Receipts, 4 cars.

Barley was quiet and steady, with malting 51½@53c; feed, 49@51½c; and screenings, 47c. Receipts, 12 cars.

Timothy seed was higher at $6.60 bid for September and $4.60@5.75 for cash. Clover seed was firm at $10.00@13.75 for cash.

Duluth flax closed 4@4c higher, with cash on track $1.84¾; July, $1.84¼; September, $1.85¾; October, $1.86½; and November, $1.86¾. Receipts, 7 cars. Minneapolis was 4½c higher at $1.83@1.85¾ for cash on track. Receipts, 8 cars. Winnipeg closed 4⅛@6⅛c higher, with July $1.61⅛, October $1.65⅛, and November $1.66⅛. Receipts, 13 cars.

AMERICAN GRAIN MARKETS.

MINNEAPOLIS, MINN., July 25.—The wheat market was strong today, due to the European war situation; receipts were 218 cars, as compared with 92 a year ago. WHEAT—July opened 89½c; high, 90¼c; low, 89½c; closed, 90c. September opened 84⅛c; high, 85⅝c; low, 84⅛c; closed, 85⅝c. Cash: No. 1 hard, 98c; No. 1 northern, 93@97c; to arrive, 92½@94½c; choice to arrive, 86½c; No. 2 northern, 91@95c; No. 3 wheat, 89@91c. CORN—No. 3 yellow, 69½@70c. OATS—No. 3 white, 34½@35c. FLAX—$1.83@1.85¾. FLOUR—In good demand at the following prices: Fancy patents, $4.60; first clears, $3.65; second clears, $2.70; shipments, 57,200 brls. BARLEY—44@52c. RYE—57@58c. BRAN—$18.50.

EXPLAIN ACTION ON TRADE BILL

Senate Committee Tells Why Chicagoan's Criticisms Were Not Heeded.

ONE SECTION CUT OUT.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., July 25.—[Special.]—Reasons for the acceptance and rejection of amendments proposed by the Chicago Association of Commerce are given in the report of the judiciary committee to the senate today upon the Clayton anti-trust bill.

The committee eliminated from the bill only one of the sections defining specific unfair trade practices which the association contended the trade commission could suppress effectively under its general powers. President Wilson agreed to adopt the association's suggestion, but the committee disagreed with this view.

The committee, however, applied the suggestion of the association by adding a new section to the bill authorizing the trade commission to enforce the sections in which the unfair trade practices are defined.

Answers Chicagoan's Criticisms.

The criticisms presented by President Defrees of the Association of Commerce and the position of the committee on each proposal follow:

Defrees—Section 2, forbidding discrimination in price between different purchasers would necessarily make fixed prices and destroy rather than aid competition.

Committee—This section relates to discrimination in price by persons engaged in commerce with the purpose and intent thereby to destroy or wrongfully injure the business of a competitor.

"The first senate amendment to this section changes the form of the substantive law to a declaration of the illegality of the act, instead of the declaration of the house bill that the person committing the act shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and may be punished. This was done because it was thought best, especially in view of the experimental stage of this legislation, that the harshness of the criminal law should not be applied but that the enforcement of the section should be given to the federal trade commission.

Discrimination Penalty Removed.

"Accordingly the penalty provision is stricken out and the enforcement of the section is provided for in section 9 B, under which the commission may arrest the practice by an order, failing in which it can apply to the courts, where disobedience of such order may be redressed.

"After full consideration it is deemed advisable to enlarge the exception in the first proviso to the section by adding that due allowance may be made for difference in the cost of 'selling' as well as transportation, and 'discrimination in price made in good faith to meet competition and not intended to create monopoly' upon the ground that the enlargement will tend to foster wholesome competition.

"In the second proviso of this section, to the effect that nothing contained in the section shall prevent persons from choosing their own customers, the limitation is made by amendment that the selection must be made 'in bona fide transactions and not in restraint of trade,' which will enforce good faith and prevent restraint of trade by this method."

Takes Up Mine Ownership.

Defrees—Section 3, forbidding refusal of owners of mines and others to sell to any responsible firm, etc., is well covered by the Sherman law in all instances where such practices are contrary to the public benefit.

Committee—The proposed senate amendment is to strike out this section altogether, because, in the opinion of the committee, it would be unwise to enact such legislation as is contained in it. It would, primarily, deny freedom of contract to one of the parties and consequently be of doubtful constitutional validity.

Question of Trade Good Will.

Defrees—Section 4, forbidding the disposition of merchandise on the condition that the purchaser shall not use or deal in the merchandise of a competitor can in all instances where harmful be readily reached under the Sherman law. If applied literally it would reduce the incentive to capitalize good will in American trade names in many instances where it might not be against the public interest.

Committee—This section relates to exclusive and tying contracts. It is believed section 4 is strengthened by the proposed senate amendments to add contracts for sales to leases and sales denounced by the house provision, and to make the prohibition applicable whether the articles leased, sold, or contracted to be sold are patented or unpatented.

Committee Adopts House View.

"The committee adopts the house view: 'By fixing the price so high that the retail dealer will make an extraordinary or unusual profit on the commodities actually sold, the manufacturer is enabled to induce him to enter into an arrangement whereby the local dealer can actually increase his profits for the time being at least by giving up his entire trade in competitive commodities, which he is compelled to handle on a small margin.

"'Undoubtedly the system results in higher prices to consumers. Great department stores and mail order houses flourish under it.'"

The committee adopted Mr. Defrees' suggestion that a decree in an anti-trust suit should be prima facie, not conclusive evidence, in other sections.

Some Organizations Exempted.

In giving its reasons for eliminating consumers and fraternal organizations from exemption from anti-trust prosecutions, the committee says:

"The principal consideration which moves the committee to strike out 'consumers' which also applies in a less degree to 'fraternal' organizations is that they believe the only organizations which should be excluded from the operation of the anti-trust laws are those where labor is the basis or one of the chief factors in the organizations as in the case of labor organizations proper, and in agricultural and horticultural organizations. The committee rests this distinction upon the broad ground that labor is not and ought not be regarded as a commodity within the purview of anti-trust laws."

The senate amendment to Section 18, says the committee, is to permit courts to issue restraining orders and injunctions in connection with picketing in strikes.

Hog prices had a small rally from Friday's low level, selling strong to 5c higher than at the close that day. Only one load of prime 163 lb shippers reached the top of $9.05, however, and the bulk of sales centered between $8.65 to $8.90. Several of the big packers stayed out of the market, and there were 2,000 hogs carried over unsold, although fresh receipts were only 8,000 head. Eastern shippers took 2,000 of the latter number and local killers' total purchases for the day aggregated 7,500 head.

Final prices made hogs 10@20c lower than a week ago, and pigs unchanged to 10c lower.

Cattle on Weaker Basis.

Prime beeves were scarce and sold at steady prices at Chicago this week, topping at $10.00. The less desirable grades, however, were in excessive supply and closed at a net decline of 25@50c. Packers had Texas cattle direct from Missouri markets and refused to buy native grass fed steers unless they could get them at greatly reduced prices. The fair to good grades of natives found an outlet at a reduction of 25@35c, but plain and common thin steers sustained a loss of 40@50c. Cows and heifers were classed with cheap steers and sold at a loss of 40@50c.

Lambs Firmer, Sheep Weaker.

Lamb prices finished the week on a small rally, but still showed a loss of 50c from the closing figures in force a week ago. Aged sheep were unchanged to 25c lower for the week, while yearlings closed at a loss of 25@65c. A glutted outlet for dressed mutton was responsible for the downward movement of values.

"Some Story"

A typical Tribune reader was asked his opinion of Harold MacGrath's story, "The Million Dollar Mystery," now appearing serially in The Chicago Sunday Tribune. His answer follows verbatim:

"The Million Dollar Mystery? Believe me, it's some story! I've read every Episode you've printed and I honestly believe it's the best work of fiction that Harold MacGrath has ever produced. The way he works out such startling climaxes, such tensely dramatic situations and his methods of bringing into play all the spirit of modern times have fascinated me beyond expression.

"I am going to send in my solution of the mystery and try for that $10,000 offered by the Thanhouser Company. I've read the story and I've seen the motion pictures, and I think I've got a good chance to win."

London Banker Hits Warburg.

Sir Edward Holden, chairman of the London City and Midland bank, is reported to have said that while he has the greatest admiration for Paul Warburg, he is of the opinion that the stand of the Warburg's Wall street connections is not without some merit. He says:

"In my opinion the federal reserve board should be like Cæsar's wife. Its personnel should offer not the slightest cause for criticism in the present public sentiment. It should be truly representative of the people, and the few bankers provided for it by the act should come from the national or state banks, not of the private banks. Mr. Warburg is a forceful man. He is, of course, an expert in finance and probably knows more than all the other members of the federal reserve board put together. For this reason he would have no difficulty in inducing the other members of the board to follow his views. This, to my thinking, is a bad thing. It will then be a one man board and this is not desirable under any circumstances.

"As regards your new banking and currency system, I am much impressed with it and believe that it means great things not only for America, but for the whole world. But I am equally convinced that it is destined to go through many changes before it reaches perfection. For one thing, it lacks the concentration of reserves that we have found so essential for a proper banking system. You will find this out in time, which will probably lead to a central bank, in fact if not in name, situated, not at Washington, but in New York, where the bankers will be in closer touch with the real money market, which, as every one knows, changes almost from hour to hour."

IN FOREIGN STOCK MARKETS.

LONDON, July 25.—Fears that the Austro-Hungarian trouble will involve Europe and he unconfirmed rumor of Russian mobilization caused panic conditions on the stock exchange during the forenoon session. Everybody offered stocks without finding buyers, and the declines registered were out of proportion to the stocks changing hands. Consols slumped 1¼ per cent to 73¾, rallied to 74, but again dropped in the last hour to 73⅝. The closing was at the lowest, with Austro-Hungarian bonds and Rio Tintos showing three points loss. All other issues were sympathetically weak, and although a fraction over the worst, the closing tone was nervous and unsettled over the uncertainty as to what will happen before Monday and the settlement commencing then. Money was dearer, while discounts hardened on the possibility of a higher bank rate if war breaks out. American securities opened weak, with prices ⅛@2½ per cent off. The decline was led by Canadian Pacific, which was affected by continental selling. Later the market hardened somewhat, but the close was unsettled with prices ½@2 points under the New York closing of yesterday.

PARIS, July 25.—The bourse was demoralized today. Many stocks were offered without buyers. No official quotations were made for numerous shares. Three per cent. rentes closed 78 francs. Exchange on London, 25 francs 15 centimes. Private discount, 2⅝ per cent. The bourse late in the date showed a slightly improved tone upon the report that Austria was willing to grant a further forty-eight hours' delay to Servia. All trading in French government securities was suspended. Both the regular and curb markets then fell off again and closed greatly depressed.

BERLIN, July 25.—The stock market here opened today under the impression that Austro-Servian hostilities were inevitable and that intervention of Russia and a general European conflict were increasingly probable. The demoralization continued as the day passed without the receipt of any intelligent news. Securities were dumped promiscuously on the market and prices on all sides continued to fall to an extent which had not been witnessed for years. Russian bank stocks and Austrian securities were the hardest hit. St. Petersburg International showed a loss of 23 points, the Russian Bank of Foreign Trade 16 points, Turkish bonds 16 points, Turkish Tobaccos 14½ points, while Russian and Austrian government bonds did not recover their losses of the early morning. Curb prices after the close of the regular market improved on reports from Vienna and Frankfort that Servia intended to yield. Exchange on London, 20 marks 52¼ pfennigs. Money, 2. Private discount 3.

N. Y. STOCKS RISE: WAR FEARS LESS

News That Servia Will Submit to Austria Brings Rally.

NEAR PANIC ABROAD.

New York, July 25.—War clouds overshadowed the leading markets of the world today. The crisis in the Servian situation again precipitated panicky conditions in London and on the continent.

Rumor went to the extent of declaring that the French government had deemed it expedient to stop trading in rentes on the Paris bourse. This proved to be untrue, but it was a fact nevertheless that absolute demoralization prevailed at the French capital, with similar if not worse conditions in Berlin and Vienna.

London's depressed level at its close was responsible for the extreme heaviness of our opening, Canadian Pacific losing 2⅝, with a loss quite as great for Northern Pacific, while many of the other internationals fell 1 to 2 per cent. The decline was accompanied by a greater degree of activity than on any previous day of the week.

Market Rallies Midway.

Midway in the session vigorous support was extended and the market rallied all around, some of the important shares closing with substantial net gains. The recovery synchronized with cables from London and Vienna indicating that Servia probably would submit to Austria's demands, though these advices came too late for use on foreign bourses.

Little of interest was noted in domestic affairs aside from the announcement of further gold engagements for export to Paris next week. These were not unexpected, in view of a further rise in exchange, and substantial additions to the gold ordered in the last few days are altogether probable.

Mercantile trade reports presented the usual mixed aspects, with increased optimism respecting the fall outlook. Local banks scored an actual cash gain of $8,000,000 with a further strengthening of their reserves.

Bonds were heavy, in keeping with the movement in shares. Total sales, par value, $1,239,000. United States coupon 4s gained 1½ per cent and Panama coupon 3s ½ per cent on call, while Panama registered 2s declined ¼ per cent.

Review of Week's Market.

Governmental affairs, both foreign and domestic, prevailed over other influences in the week's stock market. The Servian situation emerged into first place, after relations between the Washington government and business had been the earlier dominant influence.

Circumstantial reports that the decision in the eastern freight rate case would be given in an unfavorable form caused weakness. The New Haven suit rumors of an official inquiry into Rock Island affairs, the steps taken to push trust legislation, and the failure to confirm the remaining members of the federal reserve board were marshaled as related factors.

The Servian crisis confirmed indications of foreign strain long in evidence, such as persistent liquidation of our securities, withdrawal of gold in their payment, and huge accumulations of gold in the reservoirs of government banks. These financial preparations appeared to imply a safeguard against war. Their depressing influence was aggravated by uneasiness in London over the Ulster situation.

WALL STREET NEWS.

New York, July 25.—[Special.]—Criticism of today's stock market must be made in terms of strength rather than of weakness. The insignificance of the declines in stocks in this market was emphasized in a remarkable way by the list of losses sent over from the other side. Probably few people can call to mind an occasion when the stock exchange here has displayed such a power of resistance to unfavorable developments as it has in the last few months. The present stock market crisis abroad caps the climax. Consols had an extreme fall of 1¾ points, French rentes, 1½ points, Russian government bonds 2½ points, and Austro-Hungarian rentes, 2 per cent.

Such declines in securities of this rank are extraordinary, no matter what the circumstances. At any time they would suggest nothing less than a condition of panic. When it is considered that under the present circumstances they come on top of an almost unprecedentedly severe decline running for months, some idea of the present temper of foreign financial sentiment is obtained. If further proof were required of the fact that the financial community abroad today lost its head it is furnished in the prices made for American stocks in the London market. Canadian Pacific sold as low as 177⅝, Steel at 58¼, Union Pacific as low as 123⅝, and Amalgamated Copper at 63¾. The American department is only a small portion of the London market. It is also the department which was least likely to be affected by the troubled European political situation, and the department which has consequently shown the greatest resistance.

A firm with Paris connections received a cable which contained the information that the situation there was so bad that trading in French rentes had been prohibited pending the outcome of the present market crisis. This fact alone tells the story of the situation in the foreign market. Apparently what is intended to be conveyed by this message is that the bourse authorities took extreme measures to stem the spread of panicky conditions there by instructing the agents de change to accept no orders for the sale of rentes unless these were accompanied by the actual securities.

In other words, the authorities placed a bar against attempts to shake confidence by the forcible depression of the price of the premier security. Such measures are only resorted to in cases of extreme necessity, as in the demoralized markets following the outbreak of the first Balkan war in 1912. In those days the declines were so severe that the Corporation of Agents de Change even went so far as to fix the settlement price as high as possible so as to restrict the profits of the bears and less of the losses of the bulls. Arrangements were made to give time for the payment of differences on installment.

The panicky break in the European markets on Oct. 12, 1912, has assumed the proportions of a landmark in financial history. It was the climax of an extraordinary speculative movement on the European bourses, especially in Paris, in Russian and other securities, and the beginning of a period of drastic liquidation in the financial position abroad which has continued until the present time practically without interruption. The present break is in many respects similar to that which occurred nearly two years ago. But the main characteristic—namely: the state of the speculative and investment account—is radically different.

The continental markets two years ago were clogged by an overextended speculation for the rise in Russian securities which had previously been floated in prodigious amounts. Generally speaking, prices were high and the markets in a vulnerable position. Now the renewed outburst of selling comes at a time when the markets are in a thoroughly liquidated condition, the price of French rentes, for instance, being at the lowest level in thirty-five years. Under the circumstances it is not unlikely that the present decline may also turn out to be a landmark, indicating for future generations the end of the great decline in the Balkan war scare.

KANSAS HAS BIGGEST CROP.

Topeka Man Declares Wheat Yield of 160,000,000 Bushels Breaks Record.

"The wheat crop of Kansas for 1914 will exceed 160,000,000 bushels, the largest crop ever grown in the state, and possibly any other state," said David Winfield Mulvane, an attorney of Topeka, Kas., at the Congress hotel yesterday. "The crop is now being harvested, and much of it has been shipped to Chicago and other markets."

TO AID GERMAN ORIENTAL TRADE

New Scheme Discussed to Improve Empire's Interests in China.

BANK UNSATISFACTORY

BERLIN, July 17.—For some considerable time past the "development of Germany's economic interests in China" has been becoming a new catchword of politics. The subject was discussed at length in the secrecy of the budget committee, and there was hardly a speaker who did not refer to it in the reichstag debate on the foreign office estimates. The reporter on the estimates, Herr Bassermann, said that grave anxiety had been expressed that Germany was being outpaced in China by other European powers and by Japan.

Herr Spahn, who said that China was the greatest foreign market still open to competition, complained of the lack of interest in Germany and of the defects of organization due mainly to the concentration of financial resources in a small number of large banks. Herr Gothein and others told the same tale. The representatives of the government said they must admit the defects of German financial organization, and the fact that, since industrial loans last autumn were thrown open to competition, valuable industrial concessions had been secured by foreign countries. They also indicated that government support would be given to efforts which are being made to create a German industrial organization for China independent of the Deutsche-Asiatische bank.

An Industrial Syndicate.

It is doubtful whether all the makers of speeches are much more clear about what they want in China than when they thunder about the opening up of Turkey and Germany's claim to a "place in the sun" there or in South America or in any other profitable part of the world. The demand for new "industrial" organization is, however, incessant, although there is considerable obscurity about the scheme actually contemplated. The movement is said to have originated, strangely enough, in certain Austrian successes in China.

The chief organizers seem to be the banking house of Schroeder at Hamburg, which is one of the most important German houses not included in the comprehensive syndicate known as the Deutsch-Asiatische bank. The scheme is doubtless intended to comprise all the most important German industrial concerns, and there is some reason to suppose that it is desired to secure English coöperation. The theory that Germany and England are now natural partners in Chinese business is being systematically propagated. It is certainly held in high political quarters, as well as in financial and commercial circles, which have always maintained that the six powers group was a farce kept up in the political interests of the powers which could not find money.

Bourse Conditions.

Until more definite information is provided regarding the new scheme it will be well to bear in mind some facts of the present position in Germany. The public and parliamentary complaints and the new industrial proposals are based nominally upon dissatisfaction with the Deutsch-Asiatische bank. It is no doubt true that a close financial syndicate is not the best source of initiative and is not likely to look eagerly for "new business" and to seize upon any opportunity that arises. At the recent general meeting of the bank it was admitted that proposals were made from time to time for the support of Chinese undertakings, such as coal mining, iron production, construction of private railways, cement and sugar factories, and so on; but the conditions in China, where the investors in such undertakings would have no guarantee, and the conditions imposed upon the German boerses made all such proposals unacceptable.

Herr Dernburg, who is being much criticised for "frightening German capital away from China," put the matter plainly in a letter to the Berliner Tageblatt. He showed that foreign industrial undertakings are seldom placed on the German market, because the risks to which company promoters are exposed b yGerman law are too great; because new issues in Prussia are entirely under control of the government, which is guided mainly by the desire not to force up the rate of interest; and because there is in these circumstances no public in Germany with an appetite for foreign shares.

The Best Vacation You Can Possibly Choose
A 7-Day Cruise $40
Including All Expenses
CHICAGO TO BUFFALO AND RETURN
Visit Historic Mackinac Island and NIAGARA FALLS
THE MAGNIFICENT 3,000-TON STEEL
Steamship "Minnesota"
Through Lakes Michigan, Huron, St. Clair and Erie

This course is identical with the popular yachting cruise chosen by millionaires; yet the accommodations on their floating palaces are not so elaborate or complete as you will find aboard the "Minnesota," because, on account of her comparatively gigantic size, she is steady in the water and absolutely safe. Then, too, on the "Minnesota," which was built expressly for summer tourist travel, passengers form an interesting community, adding greatly to their mutual enjoyment, through the use of our broad decks for games, promenades; our parlors and ballrooms, with their ORCHESTRAS and Victrolas for dancing, cabaret, etc., entertainments and accommodations same as on the finest ocean liners.

Our staterooms are all "outside" and cool, and each passenger has a far greater deck and cabin space, per capita, than on any other lake steamship.

The "Minnesota" sails from Chicago at 1:30 p. m. every Saturday, reaches Buffalo Tuesday morning, leaves Buffalo Tuesday night and gets back to Chicago Saturday morning. Just a week—but passengers are permitted free stop-overs at all ports of call for a week or even longer.

The "Minnesota" offers the ONLY SATURDAY SAILING for the Buffalo ALL EXPENSES PAID cruise.

Absolute safety; wireless, and all modern appliances.

Think of It, Only $40 for All This—

No additional expense necessary. Is it any wonder that this cruise on the "Minnesota" has done more to popularize the week's lake trip than any other boat afloat?

Recollect that this cruise is cool and invigorating; there is no chance of being disturbed by business, and the "Minnesota" appeals to a high class of patronage—seekers of complete change in daily habit. The constantly changing panorama of passing craft and shifting scene—in fact the joys which are known only to wealthy yacht owners—are experienced by everyone who takes this cruise.

All meals—which, remember, are included in the cost of the ticket, $40—are served in the immense glazed observation dining room, where an unobstructed view of lake and sky gives an enjoyment little less than the pleasure of the splendid meals and perfect table service.

AUTOMOBILES, taken by passengers who wish to avail themselves of our unlimited stop-overs to tour New York and Eastern States, will be carried at the rate of $25 in each direction.

Call or write now for free booklet-folder giving complete description of the trip, the boat, and pictures of the scenes en route. Do not delay placing yourself in communication with us, so that when the time of departure arrives we will have just the accommodations you require. Address today.

AUSTRALASIANS TRIM CANADIANS AT ONWENTSIA

Brookes and Wilding Easily Win Their Matches in Davis Cup Play.

CLEAN SWEEP IN ROUND

Davis Cup Summary.

SINGLES.

Wilding defeated Powell, 6—1, 6—2, [illegible]

Brookes defeated Schwengers, 6—3, 6—2, 6—2.

Wilding defeated Schwengers, 7—5, 6—2, 6—1.

Brookes defeated Powell, 6—0, 6—1, 6—3.

DOUBLES.

Wilding-Brookes defeated Schwengers-Powell, 6—4, 6—3, 6—4.

BY JEWETT E. RICKER JR.
[Vice President Western Lawn Tennis Assn.]

Having the best tennis they have yet shown in this country, Norman E. Brookes and Anthony F. Wilding yesterday made it a clean sweep against Canada by winning both of their remaining single matches in straight sets.

The largest crowd of the week turned out to see the matches at Onwentsia and the bright sun which had dried out the courts made conditions ideal for the best quality of tennis. Onwentsia, in all its history, never entertained a more gala crowd and the visiting teams were given a great reception as they appeared for their final matches. Practically every prominent tennis player in this section of the country was present to get a final glimpse of the great Australasians.

Brilliant Players Meet.

The first match, between Anthony F. Wilding and B. F. Schwengers, was put on at 2:30 p. m. In this match the most brilliant players of the two teams were drawn against each other for the first time and the best match of the week resulted.

Wilding won the toss and began serving. Schwengers' first return was a brilliant pass and the crowd at once realized that a real struggle was impending. The Canadian was hitting the ball much harder than during his previous matches and evidently had determined to stake everything on a whirlwind attack. Wilding answered this fusillade by rushing into the net and volleying sharply to Schwengers' backhand. Both men were playing wonderful tennis and a deuce game resulted. Schwengers, however, weakened a little on the critical points and the game was Wilding's.

Puts Power in Service.

Schwengers' service in the next game was a wonderful exhibition and divulged the method of attack he had chosen against Wilding. Putting tremendous power back of his service he directed the ball four successive times deep to Wilding's backhand and then—rushing into the net—forced the New Zealander to drive out of court. It was a splendid and successful attack and the Canadian took the game at love. The aggressiveness of Schwengers continued into the third game and, playing magnificently, he added this to his side of the score and led the great Wilding at 2—1.

Wilding was visibly annoyed by the unexpected strength shown by Schwengers and setting his jaw in his characteristic way he fairly smothered the Canadian in the next two games.

Crowd Cheers Schwengers.

But Schwengers was not yet through. Instead he put all the power he had back of his next service and scored another love game on the antipodean. The crowd was pulling hard for Schwengers by this time and encouraging him in his uphill fight.

The next two games alternated, making the score 4 all. In both the quality of play had been far ahead of anything previously shown by the two men and Wilding, at last, was seen at his best. The ninth game, Wilding serving, was [illegible] the Australian and he led at [illegible]

Then came the big moment of the entire match. In the ninth game Wilding gained by clever passing shots in securing a lead of 40—15. It looked as if the set were over. But Schwengers came back in magnificent fashion and had the crowd yelling by bringing the score up to deuce. This rally seemed to unnerve Wilding and the game was Schwengers' after the former had banged two balls out of court.

Wilding Wins Next Two.

That was Schwengers' last real stand. Again the Wilding jaw snapped shut and the next two games were quickly his with the loss of only one point. The set score was 7—5 for Wilding. It was the best [illegible] of the Canadians had done and Schwengers was given a great hand by the crowd.

The remaining two sets of the match were rather easy for the New Zealander. Brilliant tennis was played in spots and Schwengers at times put up a magnificent game. His driving nearly always was good and his volleying the best he had done. But he was up against a fully aroused Wilding, and the Australian, in this mood, is the best, so the records tell us, in the world.

Few serious errors were made by the Australian during the remainder of the match, and his drives—always deep to the corners—were practically unreturnable. Schwengers strove valiantly to stem the tide, but Wilding was far too good to be stopped, and the match was his at 7—5, 6—2, 6—1.

Bill to Steve.

BOSTON, Mass., July 25.—Steve: Well Steve old pal I wont have no chance to go out to the White sox park at Chi mornings and learn them White sox some thing about batting because O'Day has at last got wise to him self and tooken me on this trip and here I am in Boston and not in Chi but right here with the club where I should ought to be. I guess probily Taft the owner of the club must of told O'Day some thing and I guess he must of told him that I was to be tooken on the trip but may be O'Day knowed enough to take me without Taft telling him because now we are right up in the race for the pennant and Steve and no wonder they want there full strenth with them. May be I will get in to the game this P. M. and if I do look down in the place where they put the home runs in the paper because we come passed the ball park when we was comeing in to Boston on the train and it is a little bit of a ball park with short fences and is just made for me.

Well Steve I bet the boys will be glad when they know that O'Day has brung me a long with him and you can bet I am glad to because it was not no fun laying round Chi all alone even if I was kept pretty busy keeping dates with that swell doll I all ready told you about. You should ought to of saw her cry and carry on when I told her I was going on this trip and I bet she is crying right now and wishing I was there with her but I will send her some post cards from the different towns we play at and I all so will buy her some presence to take back to her so she should ought not to have no kick coming but still it is pretty hard for her and you cant hardly blame her for feeling lonesome. Who would not.

We had some trip here from Chi and I have got $2.00 more then I had when I started out and I did not play no cards neither to get it. You see Steve the secertary of the club gives each man a $1.00 a peace for each meal they got to eat on the train but I over slept my self for breakfast yesterday morning and when it come time for dinner we was at some town in N. Y. state and was there for 20 minutes so I gets off of the train and beat it in to the lunch room in the station and I got some pie and coffee and it did not only cost me $.20 and last night I eat my supper in the dining car but I was not hungry and all I eat was a small stake and a peace of pie but the robbers soaked me $.80 for it and there prices that they charge for stake and pie is just like stealing the money. But you see I only spent $1.00 out of the $3.00 the secertary give me and so I am $2.00 a head only it is really only $1.90 that I am a head because I had to give the porter on the train $.10 when I got off of the train. I did not have to give him nothing but why should a man be cheap Steve when there getting the salery I am getting and is in the big league. I see Schulte give the porter $.25 but may be he had road with the same porter the last time the Cubs came east and did not give him nothing that time and may be he was paying him for both times at once.

I did not sleep good on the train and when I have wrote you this letter I am going up and take a nap because I want to be feeling O. K. this P. M. so if O'Day sticks me in the game I can bust a few and I guess he will stick me in the game O. K. because if he was not going to use me he would not of brung me a long but would of left me in Chi. I was hungry when we got here all right and I wisht you could see what they give us to eat at this hotel and we dont have to pay by the meal but so much a day that the club pays for us and that includs the meals so why not eat when it dont cost nothing but still you know Steve I would not make no hog out of myself. One of the boys told me the fish was pretty good eating here because the ocean is right near Boston and they catch the fish right out in the ocean and then they bring them right from the ocean to the hotel so why should the fish not be fresh and good eating. Well I had some prunes and oat meal of coarse and then I eat some ham and eggs and country sausage that they have speshul at this hotel and then I asked Schulte who I was setting at the table with what kind of fish I should order and he says I dont believe you got room for nothing but a eel. I says What does a eel taste like and he says It tastes a good deal like a mixtur of gold fish and onions so I asked the waiter did they have any eel and he says they was just out so I could not try it but he brung me in some sord fish and I wish you could of tasted it Steve because it was the best fish I ever eat and we dont get nothing like it down home. It filled me up pretty full but I put a way some cakes and drunk my coffee and then Schulte asked me why did not I order some turkey and oysters but I felt like I had eat enough for 1 time. So I got up to leave the table and Schulte says You should ought to leave a nickle for the waiter because you have eat a nickles worth all right. I says Yes but the club is paying for what I eat. He says The club will go broke if they dont send you home. But I did not want to argue with him no longer so I give the waiter a nickle and then come out in the writeing room and that is where I am at now. When I have wrote this letter I am going to buy some post cards and I will send you some while I am sending some to the girl. She will get them a Monday if I send them today and it wont be no blue Monday for her when she gets them post cards eh Steve.

I and Schulte is rooming to gether and that shows that O'Day is figureing on sticking me in the game regular or else why should he room me with a man that is playing regular him self. Most of the young fellows that has not got no chance to break in as a regular is rooming with each other. So it looks pretty good me rooming with Schulte. Our bagage has just came and I will go up to my room and clean up and lay down a while but you bet Steve I will get up in time for dinner at noon because I am not going to miss no meals in this hotel.

We go from here to Phila. and then we wind up the trip in N. Y. and Brooklyn and while we play Brooklyn we still stay in a hotel in N. Y. I will step some while I am there Steve and I wont over look nothing they is to see in that town and I bet some of them broad way dolls will give me the once over to. But I wont pay no a tension to no girls Steve and the only thing I care about is getting in to the game and showing O'Day what a sucker he has been for keeping me on the bench and if I play against them Giants we will be way out in front before we come home because I know I can hit there pitchers Steve and especially in front of a big crowd. Yours res'y,

BILL.

BY J. G. DAVIS.

Grand Rapids, Mich., July 25.—[Special.]—Olympic cup honors wentto the Chicago District Golf association team after one of the best battles in the history of the competition in the tenth annual struggle for the big cup at the Kent Country club of Grand Rapids today. The Chicago four finished first with a total of 628 strokes, the same score made by the Western Golf association at Homewood last year.

This was three points lower than the score made by the Eastern Intercollegiate four, whose total was 631, and passed out the Michigan State association team by three points. This was a wonderfully fine finish in a team match at thirty-six holes.

Chicago's success was due to a splendid round of 70 by Fraser Hale of Skokie, who set a competition record of 70 for the course. Playing in a foursome in the morning Charles Evans had a card of 36—33—69, but this was not made in competition. Hale's card was as follows:

Slump of Smith.

Chicago also benefited by an unfortunate slump which came to W. Alden Smith Jr. of the Michigan team. He was the last man to finish on the team and the side had a great chance to win. At the fifteenth hole Smith got in an oat field and tried to chop out, taking ten for the hole. On the seventeenth hole he took a seven and these black marks cost his side the hole.

Fraser Hale led the individual work with a total of 146 and was closely pressed by John Simpson of Galesburg, who played great golf both in the morning and afternoon.

The 6,200 yard course was in splendid shape and the weather perfect.

Morning Play.

The Chicago district team led the field at the end of the morning play with 311, the strong Eastern Intercollegiate team, headed by E. P. Allis III. of Milwaukee, being second with 315.

The Central Illinois association, with a quartet which contained Howard Walton, the Central Illinois champion, was third, with 319, young John Simpson, who won the low score cup in western junior championship, leading the whole field with a fine card of 73. Michigan State, with Phil Stanton, J. D. Standish Jr., and H. B. Lee, all former state champions, came next with 320. Summary:

Introducing Neal Brown of Wausau.

By B. L. T.

NO one, I should say, is better fitted to discourse of fish and fishing than Mr. Neal Brown of Wausau, Wis. Izaak Walton was not more companionable, nor had he a sprightlier wit; while to watch the Wausau Piscator at work is a very liberal education in the art of casting a fly.

I walked with him one morning from his shack on the Plover to a bridge a short piece upstream. He had taken his rod along—not to use, as he did not mean to fish that day; but because when near a trout river he is as lost without a rod in hand as a dandy without his cane. A farmer was fishing from the bridge; he had caught nothing, and his wife, who sat beside him, vouchsafed the information that the fishing was very bad.

"Why not get them a few?" I suggested to Brown, who needed no better excuse for setting up his rod.

Slipping into the river, he waded upstream perhaps a hundred yards, dropping the fly with precision in every likely spot, and almost always hooking a trout. No time was wasted. While with one hand he dropped the fish in his pocket, with the other he set the line in motion. It is a pleasure to watch an artist function, whatever may be his medium.

Piscator's perfect artistry was thrown away on the farmer and his frau. The woman thanked him for the dozen trout that he dropped in her basket, and ascribed his "luck" to the fact that he had got into the water, whereas her man had remained on the shore.

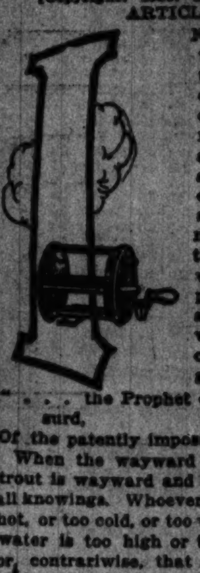
ARTICLE I.



IN many ways the trout is subtler than all the beasts of the field; in other ways he is most credulous and dupable. An angler, however experienced, who should make dogmatic assertion as to what a trout will covet on any particular occasion, or what it will do in a given case, will be regarded as—

"... the Prophet of the Utterly Absurd,
Of the patently impossible and vain."

When the wayward fit is on him the trout is wayward and uncertain beyond all knowings. Whoever shall say it is too hot, or too cold, or too windy, or that the water is too high or too low for trout, or, contrariwise, that all conditions are perfect for the taking of trout, will often be refuted and put to shame.

Any trout angler would condemn without benefit of clergy a cold, raw first of May, with a rain falling that was almost snow. Yet on such a day I have seen trout taking a fly eagerly, although a natural fly that ventured out would have been frozen to death. Yet on a warm June day, with the water at the right stage, and a soft south wind blowing, every trout in the stream may be dumb and lifeless. Together with another ardent angler I once fished some of the best stretches of the Ontonagon for three days in June, using every known device and fly, and our total catch was two trout. Yet shortly before and after this, under like weather and stream conditions, great catches were made on the same ground.

About June 1, 19—, two of us were in camp on —— river. It was the day of the Big Wind, and the wind blew a gale every which way. Trees were constantly falling in the woods along the stream. The water was high and turbid and filled with buds, twigs, and branches that had been broken off by the wind. We unanimously agreed that no trout would venture to the surface in such a tornado, so we loafed around camp most of the forenoon. Just before noon we waded in, more as a matter of principle than anything else, for we believed it a vain quest. It was impossible to land a fly in the right place, yet the moment the fly touched the water a trout was waiting for it. With the trout in this crazy humor our catch was something scandalous, and long before nightfall we were so near the legal limit that we had begun to speculate as to what would happen if we met a game warden. The day was cool almost raw, and theoretically impossible. The same day on a rival stream of greater reputation two expert fishermen labored all day in vain and came home with empty creels. They reported that it was too windy and cold for trout.

"I speculated on what would happen if I met a game warden."

Sometimes a stream will flow dead and sullen for many hours, with not a trout in sight. Suddenly pandemonium breaks loose, the water will be full of leaping trout that will snap at anything that moves. All at once they will subside and become nonexistent.

Generally speaking, at some time during the day, under any kind of favorable conditions, trout will rise to a fly, but it is beyond human ken to foretell the time.

Other days they will be intermittent and subject to frequent spasms of rising. On some days they will have only one of these spasms, other days none at all.

Anglers will maintain that trout will not take the fly readily in bright sunshine, yet many good catches have been made under blazing suns. Other anglers will argue that trout will only take the fly when natural flies are dropping on the water and the trout are rising to them, but this is dictum not to be relied on.

Many other ancient delusions are hung on the direction of the wind. Some of these uncertainties of trout can be given reasonable explanation, but many of them are unexplainable.

For all that we know, trout may be subject to a kind of mob-hysteria. When the main population is dull and inert an emotional trout may be seized with an attack of nerves and rush frantically at something or at nothing; or he may feel that he must start something and break up the deadly ennui. Others, witnessing his excitement, begin to imitate him, and their flow of spirits quickly infects others, until finally the whole populace rises up as one trout. If you happen along about this time and are properly equipped your reward may be great.

These hysterical practices of trout are not unlike those of masses of human beings. They are victims of suggestion. They will crazily take the bait that any demagogue throws before them, create a new god, or cast down an old one. They alternately deify and crucify.

Something more should be said of the perversity of trout.

Many years ago some public spirited anglers carefully stocked with trout fry a most enticing and perfect stream. After waiting patiently for a number of years these unselfish foster parents tried to reap their reward. They hunted for these trout in different years and different seasons, but in vain. At last they gave up in despair and this barren water became as the Land of Lost Endeavor.

Witness now the perfidy and deceit of these trout, who through man's benevolence had been given this happy home. They lay low in concealment until they thought the pursuit had been abandoned by their benefactors, then they crept out and spread themselves in countless numbers on every bar and spawning bed.

They enjoyed this stream for many years without the payment of any imposts and finally were discovered by the merest accident. Among them were old veterans who had been laboriously transported thitherward in cans, years before the Great Discovery.

But let us make flies our theme:

Observe the justly celebrated Bucktail Fly to which I claimed exclusive rights, until I found that E—— H—— had pirated the design, and was using it to catch big trout on White river.

This fly is not like any other article of diet or amusement affected by trout. It looks about as appetizing as a cockle burr. It is a monstrosity, with a fat red body and a tail of deer hair and this tail is not trimmed off evenly and made a thing of bashful beauty; it is irregular and waves sinuous filaments through the water. It has a terrible fascination for some trout, being especially deadly as a dropper.

Anglers have vainly tried to imagine what the trout imagined it to be. I have heard it stoutly maintained that trout thought this bucktail was a new born mouse. But a new born mouse does not skate merrily around on the surface of the water or fly in the air. I have had a trout leap a foot into the air and seize this dangling fly.

Another nature faking fly is the Reuben Wood. It is a ladylike fly, of chaste, trim appearance, not coarse and sprawling like the Bucktail. It has a white body, with a gentle little red tick at the lower end and is dressed in neat, though not gaudy, tackle of no distinctive characteristics. It is a good old reliable fly on most any stream and especially in the afternoon on hot days between April and September. Yet it is not dressed in the likeness of anything natural.

True, a white miller comes on trout streams for a short period, but it has not even a remote resemblance to the Reuben Wood.

Shall we imitate nature or shall we ruthlessly ignore her and go out after trout with unnatural lures?

I counsel a middle course. When trout seem to be looking for a patch from an old buffalo robe, or a rag from a red blanket, gratify their depravities, though admitting that it may be more scientific to proffer them a genteeler fly.

I once read of a cunning angler who was fishing for trout on the south shore of Lake Superior. He had tried every kind of fly without success. It was in the season of ripe thorn apple, and as he brushed against a crimson branch a thorn apple fell into the water. It was greedily snapped up by a big trout. Acting on this hint, this angler baited with thorn apples and turned defeat into victory. It simply happened to be thorn apple with the trout and nothing but thorn apples would serve their appetite.

One truthful angler has assured me that out in the western mountains he once caught many trout with a certain red berry that he found growing there and this was in the winter time with much snow on the ground. I understand this method is also followed in Alaska.

"The angler baited with thorn apples."

The angler should have no fads that will not yield to the instant emergency. He must be quick to change his tactics, to grasp another weapon, to plan a new line of attack. He will, in theory, hold midge flies and No. 8s in equal favor, yet in practice adopting the most effective. His highest state of wisdom will have come when he determines that a hook smaller than No. 10 is not as effective in holding trout as the larger hooks. Thereafter his fly hook will hold a majority of No. 10s and larger and he will make fewer barren casts.

Notes of the Sox.

A double header with New York will be played today, the first game starting at 1:30 p. m.

Manager Callahan announced that Ed Walsh will pitch one of the games, so now Chicago fans may judge for themselves if the Big Moose has regained his old time form.

Mrs. Chance gave it as her expert opinion that the Yanks are weak hitters, but splendid fielders and awfully nice boys. The Peerless Leader agreed with her.

Frank Isbell, the old time Sox player and now part owner of the Des Moines club, was a spectator at the game. "Izzy" is on a secret mission here, and it is thought he has designs on the Western league pennant.

The fielding of Daniel Boone, Chance's second baseman, had a lot to do in extending the game to thirteen innings. He started two corking double plays, and once he robbed Fournier of a hit on a slow bounder.

Roy Hartzell is distinguishing himself as an outfielder. He already has made good as a third baseman, a shortstop, and a second sacker. Probably next season Roy will try playing first base and catching.

Maisel's running catch of Weaver's foul fly in the sixth was one of the sparkling bits of fielding. When he nabbed the ball he was about six feet from the concrete stand and still going.

Pirates to Make More Changes.

Pittsburgh, Pa., July 25.—Additional changes in the lineup of the Pittsburgh National league club were forecast here today, when official announcement was made that James R. Kelley, outfielder, had been released to the Jersey City club of the International league.

LYMAN WINS ROQUE TITLE, DEFEATING L. H. PLUMMER.

Dr. H. E. Lyman won the championship diamond medal yesterday afternoon in the final match of the Western Roque association, held at Washington park. Besides getting the medal, Dr. Lyman, whose home is in Topeka, Kas., was presented with a gold medal as winner in the first division, as were the winners in the other two divisions. Dr. Lyman won eight games and lost none.

F. H. Sheldon of Kansas City won in the second division with a score of six games won and none lost, and J. De Cook of Chicago won in the third division with a score of eight won and none lost.

Dr. Lyman defeated L. H. Plummer of Chicago in the final.

RIVERS TO BATTLE CROSS.

Los Angeles, Cal., July 25.—[Special.]—Joe Rivers and Leach Cross were matched today for their fourth fight. It will occur at Vernon on Aug. 11 and will be for twenty rounds. Both agreed to make 135 pounds, ringside, which is practically catch weights. Charley Eyton will referee. Rivers has two decisions over Cross, and their other affair was a draw.

SOX NOSE OUT CHANCE'S MEN IN 13 INNINGS

Errors by Highlanders, and Fournier's Hit Enable Demmitt to Score.

FINAL COUNT STANDS 1-0

BY JAMES CRUSINBERRY.

In one of the most exciting contests of this year the White Sox celebrated their return to the home lot yesterday with a victory over the New Yorks, winning, 1 to 0, in thirteen dramatic rounds. It was a pitchers' battle for the most part, between Joe Benz and Jack Warhop, and, although the latter gave the Chicagoans only four hits all told, while Benz yielded seven, the butcher boy was better in the tight places and more brilliant all the way.

The swell pitching alone didn't drag the game along to such extent. There were wonderful and thrilling plays, great infielding, and spectacular outfield catches that prevented trouble for the hurlers time after time.

In the regulation nine innings, the Sox did not cut much figure in the offensive playing, getting only four men on the bases in that time, two of whom managed to reach second. The Yanks had two or three good openings before nine innings were over, but lacked the final punch to put over the run.

Go After Enemy.

From the ninth on the Sox were more aggressive, and after Benz had pitched himself out of a bad hole in the twelfth his mates went after the enemy determined to win. However, the game was actually handed to them in the thirteenth, though Jack Fournier did deliver the knockout punch in the form of a single after horrible blunders by the Yanks had placed Demmitt on third and Collins on second, with none out.

Up to the thirteenth Chance's boys had not made a miscue in their defense. Then big Catcher Nunamaker muffed a pop foul by Demmitt, which should have made the first out. Demmitt then bounced in front of the plate and was safe when Nunamaker heaved wild to first. Collins laid down a perfect bunt toward third, and Warhop heaved over Mullen's head to the stand. This blunder let Demmitt reach third and Collins second, and after Fournier had fouled off four balls he succeeded in punching one between Maisel and Peckinpaugh that finished the battle.

Game Draws 12,000.

The loyal Sox rooters were out in droves regardless of the fact the team had experienced a bum trip in the east and dropped from second to sixth place. The south side rooters attend games just the same, whether they go to rejoice or mourn. There were at least 12,000 present when the contest began and they cheered the prodigal athletes one by one and collectivey. Ed Walsh commanded much attention as he displayed his rejuvenated throwing arm in front of the box patrons during the practice session.

Jack Fournier, who has batted his way into the .300 class with the Cobbs, Bakers, Jacksons, and Speakers, was roundly applauded by the fans.

Thrilling Double Play.

It looked like the break of the game had arrived in the seventh, when Weaver started things by heaving Cree's roller to the grandstand. Cree reached second on the error and Mullen put him on third with a sacrifice. A thrilling double play followed and killed the opportunity. Cook bounded to Benz and Cree tried to score. He was easily headed off at the plate, so turned back for third. Schalk lit out after him, tagging him two-thirds of the way to third base. Then Schalkie shot to Weaver in time to nail Cook as he slid for second.

In the last of the seventh the Sox made their first hit when with two out Fournier lammed a clean one over second for one base. He was shot out stealing a moment later, so the hit profited nothing.

Benz opened the ninth by walking Boone, the first man he passed. But a moment later Schalk picked him off the base by a lightning shot to Fournier. Hartzell followed this with a terrific drive to right, and Collins made a sparkling running catch close to the foul line.

Cree started the tenth with a line drive to right center that rang like a triple, but Collins raced across the green and captured the ball off his knees. Then Benz fanned the next two guys.

Fielding Stops Sox.

Nunamaker began the eleventh with a line single to center. Maisel failed to bunt, then got the call of three and two. With Nunamaker on the go Maisel fanned and Nunamaker was doubled at second. Wonderful fielding by the Yanks stopped the Sox in the last half. Bodie led off with a screaming drive to center that brought a roar from the crowd. Cree turned and sprinted for all his might, finishing with a leap into the air. He came down with the ball in his hands. Schalk then singled and Alcock followed with a red hot smash to Boone. Daniel dug the ball out of the earth and a double play followed.

It looked as if the Sox were gone in the twelfth when the Yanks filled the bases with one out. Boone led off with a pop fly. Then Hartzell and Peckinpaugh walked. Cree singled sharply to left and Demmitt shot the ball home so lively that Hartzell remained at third. In this crisis Mullen fanned and Cook fouled to Schalk.

How Run Occurred.

The big break came in the last of the thirteenth. After Nunamaker dropped Demmit's foul fly the latter followed with a bounce in front of the plate and was safe on Nunamaker's wide throw. Collins then bunted and Warhop heaved over Nunamaker's head. Demmitt reached third, and Collins second. Fournier followed with a single to left, Demmitt coming in with the winning run and ending the game.

RED SOX DEFEAT NAPS, 8-6, IN ELEVEN INNING GAME.

Cleveland, O., July 25.—Boston defeated Cleveland today, 8 to 6, in eleven innings, Lewis' batting being responsible for the victory. Lewis made three singles, a double, and a triple, driving in five runs and scoring another himself. Gregg pitched great ball for five innings, but then weakened. In the eleventh, with Hagerman pitching for Cleveland, Scott got on through Chapman's error. An error of judgment put Speaker on. Lewis and Gardner singled, scoring two runs. Score:

Rain Stops Washington Game.

St. Louis, Mo., July 25.—After two Washington players had been retired in the first inning of today's game with St. Louis, it rained and the game was called off. A double header will be played tomorrow. Mike Mitchell, recently purchased by the Washington club from the Pittsburgh Nationals, reported to Manager Clark Griffith today and was in the lineup.

SPEAKER IN SHIRT MYSTERY.

Cleveland, O., July 25.—[Special.]—The literal failure of Tris Speaker, the hard hitting center fielder of the Boston Red Sox, to keep his shirt on, gave him a fright this afternoon and almost cost him $25. It seems Tris left his shirt, containing a $25 pair of diamond cuff links, on the Payne avenue car that brought him from the ball park after the game.

Whether Tris boarded the car without a shirt; whether he had donned a clean one and was carrying the other; whether he wore his baseball shirt, or whether he removed his shirt on the car could not be learned.

He arrived at the hotel without this particular shirt. The clerk telephoned to the car barns and discovered that Speaker's shirt was in escrow there.

ECLIPSE WORSTS C. T. E., 3-1

Roseland Eclipse won a hard fought game from the Chicago Telephone Engineers at Roseland yesterday, 3 to 1. Jack Taylor bested Harry Hicks, the ex-leaguer, on the mound and only allowed the Telephone men four hits. The Eclipse team won the game in the fifth inning on two hits, an error, and a double steal, which scored two runs. Score:

Pittsburgh, Pa., July 25.—[Special.]—Patsy Brannigan shaded Johnny Ray here in a rattling good six round bout. Both boys showed cleverness. Brannigan was the aggressor for the first five rounds, but in the final round Ray compelled Brannigan to clinch when he showered him with rights and lefts to the face. Young Ray has been matched to fight Johnny Coulon.

RAWLNGS JUMPS TO FEDS; BLOCKS CINCINNATI DEAL.

Cincinnati, O., July 25.—[Special.]—A hitch in the deal by which the Cincinnati National league baseball club was to secure Red Killifer, slugging outfielder, from the Minneapolis club of the American association came up today when it was learned that Johnny Rawlings, Red infielder ordered to Minneapolis as part of the deal, has jumped to the St. Louis Federals.

The Reds were to give Minneapolis Rawlings, Maurice, Uhler, and a catcher or Killifer, who is a brother of Catcher Killifer of the Phillies. Uhler left for Minneapolis Friday night.

Baseball circles had the report today that another player had jumped to the Federals and left on the same train with Rawlings. This could not be confirmed, however.

NATIONAL TO PROTECT UMP; GETS ACCIDENT INSURANCE.

New York, July 25.—Officials of the National league have sprung something new in baseball by taking out accident insurance on all ten umpires employed by the league. In commenting on it, the officials said it was not due to demonstrations by players or spectators who threaten the umpires at times, but that the step was taken to protect the league against railroad accidents and injuries on the ball field. In such cases it would be necessary for the league to pay the doctor bills as well as the salaries of the arbitrators. Terms of the policies call for a payment of $25 per week while victims are out of commission, $5,000 in event of death and $10,000 if death is caused by a railroad accident.

SAM MICHAELS STOPS SHUBA

In a furious exchange of wallops in the sixth round Sam Michaels planted a right cross to Stanley Shuba's jaw and the Chicago north sider went down for the count in the feature bout of the show at Maple Grove Friday night. Frankie Imo forced "Young" Virgo to take the count in the sixth; Ben Richmond and Jack Lindgren fought six rounds to a draw, and John Ritchie floored "Kid" Burns in the third round.

"Kid" Herman Coming Here.

New Orleans, La., July 25.—[Special.]—"Kid" Herman of New Orleans, conqueror of every bantam of note in the south and who made such a remarkable showing against "Kid" Williams last month, has gone to Chicago with a view to securing matches.

BARON SHERMAN AWARDED MIXED RACE; CROWD ANGRY.

Contests in which skillful driving between amateurs and professionals featured were in evidence at the matinée of the West Chicago Driving club at Austin yesterday. Seventy year old Dave Leary, driving the bay mare, Esche, put it over young C. E. Beveridge with Elwood by saving his power until they reached the homestretch. The judges awarded the mixed race, a combination of trotters and pacers, to Baron Sherman. The Baron was unsteady in the stretch, and the crowd did not approve of the verdict. Summaries:

2:20 trot—Stalts Chimes, bl. h., by Council Chimes [Pentecost], won; Ito, second; Bessie Custer, third. Time, 2:22, 2:24.

2:19 trot—Esche, b. m., by Red Medium [Leary], won; Elwood, second. Time, 2:19¼, 2:20.

2:25 pace—Helen Bondsman, b. m., by Bondsman [Beveridge], won; Rockwell, second; Rudy Hal, third; Gerald Wilkes, fourth; Sweet Vengeance, fifth. Time, 2:20½, 2:10¼.

2:40 trot and pace—Baron Sherman, b. g. [Martin] won; Baron Alte second; Conqueror Don, third; Hilda Porter, fourth; Peggy Harmon, fifth; D. Jim, Jack Dryden. Time, 2:23, 2:24, 2:23½.

2:18 pace—Glenlent, dn. g., by Bonnie [Bangert], won; Ardmore, second; Calva Dare, third; Belle Knight, fourth. Time, 2:17½, 2:16.

WESTERN TENNIS TOURNEY ON AT THE ONWENTSIA CLUB.

Owing to the desire on the part of most of the participants to watch the Davis cup matches no serious attempt was made to make more than a small start in the preliminary round of the Western tennis championship tournament, the men's singles of which began yesterday at the Onwentsia club.

Monday, however, all players will be expected to report promptly at 2 p. m., and an effort will be made to complete the first round of singles as well as the first round in doubles. None of the out of town men entered have yet arrived in Chicago except George M. Church and Dean Mathey, the former Princeton pair. All are expected tomorrow.

All of the matches played yesterday were won in rather easy style, only two requiring more than two sets. Summary follows:

MEN'S SINGLES.

First round—E. H. Smith beat A. G. Stanton, 7—5, 6—3; Arthur F. Tuttle beat James M. Elliott, 4—6, 6—0, 6—3; Walter Wring beat H. M. Ferry, 6—3, 6—3; H. Mikanil beat T. Y. Sherwell by default; J. H. Winston beat L. F. Pope, 6—1, 6—0; A. J. Lindauer beat William Swift, 6—1, 6—0; W. A. Futterer beat W. W. Springer, 9—7, 6—4; Jerry H. Weber beat W. P. Martin Jr. by default; M. A. James beat H. C. Champlin by default; Henry Raeder beat G. A. Neeves, 6—0, 7—5; J. H. Chandler beat F. M. Fargo, 3—6, 6—3, 6—2; J. J. Charles beat T. Y. Smith by default; H. T. Byford beat H. E. James, 6—3, 6—1.

M'DERMOTT PLANS TO SWIM.

After grabbing off nearly all the natatorial honors he possibly could in United States, Michael McDermott, holder of several world's championships, will go to England in the fall to attempt to swim the channel. This feat has been tried by hundreds in the last fifty years, but only two have been successful.

McDermott is the national ten mile champion and, although young in years, is a powerful swimmer. He combines the crawl and breast strokes. His arms move overhead, but his kick is scissors similar to that used by speed natators. Because of his wonderful endurance Coach Bachrach of the I. A. C. is confident McDermott will cross the channel.

Accompanying McDermott will be Harry Hebner, holder of dash and back stroke records, and Conrad Wohfeld, the I. A. C. fancy diving champion. Hebner will go to Muenchenberg, Germany, at the invitation of the Hellas club, for only the single exhibition. Wohfeld also will demonstrate what he learned under American tutelage and probably will remain there.

SCANDAL TINGES THREE BIG BOUTS STAGED ABROAD

RING LESSON OF AMERICA

BY RAY C. PEARSON.

Europe's sudden and in many ways remarkable splurge in Fistiana has come to a close temporarily after a series of three battles which have left a dark brown taste as a reminder of what happened. In London and in Paris, for one of these contests was staged in the French capital while the other two were held in the great British metropolis, the citizens suddenly went fight mad. In Paris they jammed the big exposition building known as the Velodrome d'Hiver, while in London at the famous Olympia there wasn't room for any more fans when the gong sounded. The fighters got a huge chunk of the coin that came through the gate.

As a financial proposition the boxing game is "all to the rosy" in Europe, but financial success isn't going to be a lasting thing if the present "tricks of the trade" are continued. Every one of the three bouts staged, the first between the negro champion Jack Johnson and Frank Moran, the second between Willie Ritchie and Freddie Welsh, and the third and last between "Gunboat" Smith and Georges Carpentier, has left a most disagreeable odor.

Accusations Follow Fights.

The odor has been produced not by lack of ability shown by the performers, for every one of the six men who took part is known from one end of the world to the other as the classiest that could be obtained for an attraction, but by an aftermath which has revealed crookedness, and plenty of it. Charges of fixing, double crossing, artful trickery, and unfair refereeing have come into the bright light to awaken those who follow the sport out of their wild excitement over the game of pugilism.

Just what effect this awakening will have remains to be seen, but a glance back through the pages of American boxing history plainly shows one thing, and that is that "smelly" fighting did more to start the decline of the sport in this country than all the legislative laws ever could do. Therefore it behooves those who have anything to do with boxing in Europe to have a care and pay a little more attention to the fighters and a little less to the box office if they would look forward to continued prosperity.

Shows Ring Agreement.

There was nothing to indicate before the gigantic crowd frantically surged into the arena in Paris that the Johnson-Moran contest was anything but what it should have been. Immediately after it was over and when all believed that it had been a great battle staged just as it should have been, they were talking of finding another opponent for the negro. But crookedness will out, and it wasn't long after that that the "inside stuff" came to the surface. Dan McKettrick, manager of Moran, waited just long enough to leave Paris and land in London to explode the whole works. He produced an agreement made with Johnson whereby the negro was to pay Moran 40 per cent of the gate money to lay down in the tenth round. This was great news to those who saw the contest and it had the effect of a bombshell.

McKettrick wanted to show up the negro champion and that was the method employed. In order to make Moran himself look good he declared that fighter had double crossed Johnson and tried to knock him out instead of laying down.

Johnson Gives Version.

But that isn't all that this Johnson-Moran affair produced. The negro got his turn a little later, for in a cable to this country at some little expense Johnson declared that McKettrick's statement was anything but the truth. He said that he and Moran had agreed to battle the full limit of twenty rounds to the decision—whatever it might be—of Referee Georges Carpentier. That comeback was certainly a "pippin." Perhaps each and every one of these statements contains a bit of truth and every one of them certainly shows the crookedness of the Paris contest.

There is talk of running the negro out of Europe now that this startling exposure has been made, but an investigation that will go deeper into the transactions of Moran as well as Johnson should be made before any real action is taken. Then, perhaps, there will not be so much chance for fighters who don't mind turning a trick to perform in Paris.

American Loses Crown.

When a contest with a title attached can develop such business it's going some. Two of these three European bouts were title affairs and one of them resulted in a change of ownership of a championship. Strangely, this contest was the cleanest of all three and incidentally the American lost his crown.

For twenty rounds Willie Ritchie fought and for twenty rounds Freddie Welsh went through the motions, at the end of which time Eugene Corri, the official London referee, placed his hand on the head of the Britisher and proclaimed him world's champion lightweight. There were many Americans at the ringside when this happened and Corri came in for a lot of panning. The best reports that could be obtained in this country made it appear that Ritchie should not have received worse than a draw. The American [illegible] did nearly all the leading and when he landed, which was infrequently, he did greater damage than Welsh was able to inflict in the entire bout.

Welsh evidently is of the school which believes in the landing of blows whether or not they inflict any damage. Welsh undoubtedly landed more taps than Ritchie and for that reason was awarded the decision, but no referee in America would have been able to get away with that kind of stuff.

Smith Lands Light Tap.

What happened in the "Gunboat" Smith-Georges Carpentier match staged recently in London certainly puts a crimp on Corri which will be hard to remove. Corri again officiated as third man in the ring and in the sixth round, when the Frenchman was on the floor as the result of a smash from Smith's right to the jaw, the American fighter had the misfortune to start a follow-up punch. According to our information, he was unable to stop the blow and landed a light tap on Carpentier's ear.

The Frenchmen's seconds with a wild hurrah jumped into the ring and yelling "Foul! foul!" carried their man to his corner. After that had been done Referee Corri announced that Smith had been disqualified for hitting Carpentier when he was down.

Makes Decision Late.

Corri did not make his decision until after Carpentier's seconds had carried their man to his corner, and what Jim Buckley, Smith's manager, who is a wise bird in pugilism, wants to know is why the referee didn't disqualify the Frenchman when his seconds jumped into the ring. Buckley contends that a fight is still a fight until the referee calls a man loser and he seems to be right, for Corri certainly didn't make his ruling until after Carpentier's seconds had picked up their man.

HARRY GILMORE, SR.
QUIN HALL

BY HARVEY T. WOODRUFF.

PRESIDING over a boxing academy in East Adams street, Chicago, is a compactly built man of medium height, with a square jaw and a steady gleam in his eye, who was a professional prize fighter in the days of London prize ring rules and skin tight gloves cut away at the knuckles. This veteran—"60 years young," for his looks belie his years—is not ashamed of his profession.

Harry Gilmore, who once fought Jack McAuliffe for the lightweight championship, attended prize fights with his father when a boy. He was encouraged in the adoption of what was then a precarious occupation so far as the law was concerned. Harry Gilmore, as father of five sons and three daughters, whom he has brought up and educated from his earnings as a pugilist and in giving boxing lessons, insisted that every one of his sons should learn the art of self-defense.

Every one of those sons is clever with the gloves, but not one of them dares try to put it over on the "old man," who does more active boxing than any one of his staff of instructors. Two of Gilmore's sons are earning their living from pugilism. Fred is assistant to his father. Tom, a younger brother, is instructor at the Illinois Athletic club of Chicago. Harry Jr., formerly known in the sporting world as a promoter and manager, now conducts an amusement pier at Venice, Cal.

So Harry Gilmore, who has spent more than forty years of his life in the atmosphere of pugilism, sees nothing in the profession which would make him wish to dissuade his sons from following in his footsteps.

Perhaps the most interesting fight, and certainly the most important, in Gilmore's long career in the ring was his meeting with Jack McAuliffe at Lawrence, Mass., in February, 1887. In reality an attempt to follow the advice of his seconds and turn a clever trick was in part responsible for his defeat in twenty-eight rounds.

Gilmore at that time was Canadian champion and challenger of the world. He had disputed McAuliffe's right to the title of world champion, so a match was made for a $1,000 side bet and the Police News diamond belt, emblematic of the championship. Only eighty-three spectators were permitted to view the bout, the privilege costing $25. The entire gate receipts and side bets went to the winner.

The battle was held in a big, barnlike structure, an upper floor of which was used as a Salvation army headquarters, which was one reason for its choice, as the fighting gentry thought such a place less likely to draw the minions of the law. Skin tight gloves, cut off at the knuckles, and London prize ring rules prevailed.

The ring was pitched in a big room, a brick wall of which formed one side of the arena, with ropes stretched for the other three sides. That brick wall had an important bearing on the result of the mill. But let Gilmore tell his own story of the encounter, as follows:

"It was a tough fight, for I was a little fellow compared to McAuliffe. I weighed in at 128 pounds on Wednesday at 2 o'clock, and we did not fight until Friday night at 10 o'clock. Jack scaled at 133 pounds, but afterward we found the scales had been fixed for him. He weighed at least 140 pounds when we fought. Harry Phillips of Montreal, afterward backer of John L. Sullivan, was my backer. Hal Smith of New York was referee.

"Well, we went along and I was giving him as good as he gave me. In the nineteenth round he made a lunge for me and when I sidestepped he fell flat on his face in the ring. A fall constituted a round under London rules. When I went to my corner for the one minute rest—it was one minute between rounds then—my seconds said 'If you only had been near the wall he would have fallen against it. Get him to do it again.

"So I began working around for a similar position so Jack would miss me again and fall against the brick wall. The chance came in the twenty-third round. Jack rushed as I was in front of the wall, and I tried to sidestep, but I was too close. My heel struck against the wall and I couldn't get out. Just then Jack clipped me on the jaw with his right. My head flew back against the wall. Then I fell forward flat on my face on the floor. The fall broke my nose and bruised both my eyes so I was practically blinded.

"When the twenty-fourth round began my eyes were so puffed I could not see his face, but I could see his feet, and I clinched and wrestled with him until I could see a little. Meantime blood from my broken nose was running into my mouth and his seconds kept shouting to my backer, 'He's bleeding innardly. Don't let Harry get killed.' We kept it up until the twenty-eighth round, when my backer threw up the sponge, scared by their chatter. Jack was all in, too, and I think if they had let me go on I would have had a draw and maybe won.

"In those days where the winner got all the money, it was customary for the winner to pass the hat for the loser. McAuliffe was too weak to act, so Jack Dempsey, one of his seconds, who was middleweight champion, passed the hat for me. I got $195 for my six weeks' training, my hard fight, and my broken nose. That doesn't seem very much compared to the $30,000 purses of today, does it?"

Gilmore was born on March 9, 1854, in Toronto, Canada, where his father, born in Dublin, was a shoemaker. Harry learned the trade and to this day he makes his own fighting shoes and most of the punching bags used in his gymnasium. When Packey McFarland was under the management of Harry Jr., Gilmore made Packey's shoes, including one green pair which was Packey's especial delight at the time.

As a youngster Gilmore received instruction and advice from Jack Scholes, heavyweight champion of Canada as well as champion snowshoe racer. Scholes conducted a boxing academy in Toronto. Harry boxed at clubs and in private bouts, meeting all comers of all weights, for poundage was not so strictly drawn then, until 1883, when he quit the shoemaking business for good and adopted pugilism.

In 1888 Gilmore located in Chicago at the solicitation of Tom Barrett, afterward sheriff, who had seen him box with Eddie Gallagher. Barrett was one of his first pupils.

Advocate of the left lead and the head spin to avoid a blow, of which tactics Jem Mace was a past master, Gilmore developed several notable performers whose cleverness rather than ruggedness gave them a place in the annals of the American ring. Among these may be mentioned Packey McFarland, Tommy White, Eddie Santry, and Harry Forbes, all of whom met and defeated men better adapted by nature for the rough usages of the arena. Jimmy Barry, once bantam champion; Frank Garrard, George Kerwin, Martin Duffy, Benny Yanger, Jack O'Keefe, and Jack Moffat also were Gilmore productions.

Harry Gilmore, "60 years young," is just as game as he was when he fought Jack McAuliffe. So any boxer going into his gymnasium for a "tryout" better not try to "sneak over" anything on the veteran.

CARPENTIER WRITES BOOK FOR AMATEUR ATHLETES.

[BY CABLE TO THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE.]

PARIS, July 25.—Georges Carpentier, French champion boxer, in his amusing little book, "My Method," just published here, gives some sound and interesting advice to amateur athletes. He begins with the confessions that the pen always has appeared to him as a dangerous instrument, and that he was horrified when his friends first suggested that he should write a book on his methods.

"Besides," writes Carpentier, "I did not know I had a method, and no one could have been more surprised than I when I was told I had one."

He goes on to tell how, with the help of a friend, the book was laboriously completed, and how at the end of his labors he discovered himself, so that after all there was some justification in calling the book "Ma Methode."

Carpentier, who passes most of his time at his country place, Manitou on Reine, in Normandy, between Biverney and Vernon, is a good all around athlete, and when training does a great deal of rowing, tennis, sprinting, rope skipping, jumping, and Swedish leg and arm joint exercises, always accompanied by scientific deep breathing.

AUSTRALASIANS TRIM CANADIANS

the two conservatives were pitted against each other and a battle of tacticians followed. As a match it was a poor exhibition, but as an answer to those who have criticised and belittled Brooks' play during his preceding matches it was well worth going miles to see.

Probably no set ever played between first class men was more one sided than the first one of the Brookes-Powell match. Beginning with a love game on his own service, the Austalasian was only forced to win twenty-four points in the entire set to win. He easily could have given the Canadian a point a game and won hands down, for as it was Powell only captured seven points in the set.

Australasian at His Best.

The Australasian was at last the "superhuman Brookes," and the precision and mechanical perfection of his play was a revelation to the gallery. He was in position for his returns long before the ball had reached the net, and his power of anticipation was positively uncanny.

A story of the first set is but a story of Brookes' wonderful placing ability. Powell figured only as the pawn that Brookes was forced to move. He moved him where he wanted and when he wanted with the skill of a Lasker. Just as the great "Three Fingered" Brown in times past forced batters to pop up feeble infields, so did Brookes literally force Powell to feed him shots at the net. And the kill—surely and most cruelly placed—invariably followed.

The second set was but a continuation of the first. Broockes always was the master and, barring the one game that Powell won, the set was even more one sided than the first, the Canadian—this game excepted—winning but six points in the set.

Powell's Efforts Unavailing.

There was nothing in the tennis category that Powell failed to try. He lobbed short and deep, he drove down the lines, he cross-courted, he rushed the net. But Brookes' answer always was the same—a stroke so perfectly executed and well directed that Powell was left wondering just how it happened that he was so far away from the ball.

In the third set Brookes let down noticeably in his play and the first game was a love game for Powell. The Canadian, perhaps, played a trifle better. He took more chances and put more "stuff" on the ball. But the fact that he won three games was due more to Brookes' leniency than to any particular brilliancy of his own.

The third set was chiefly a fight for the net. Powell is no novice in this position—he is one of the world's best. But on those times when both men were in close—and this occurred often in this set—Powell often was made to look absolutely ridiculous. It is doubtful if any one ever volleyed with more brilliancy than did Brookes in this set.

Brookes Ends the Agony.

The real mastery of Brookes was shown when, with two games to go, he turned in and scored four successive points and the final set at 6—3. The match score was 6—0, 6—1, 6—3.

Following the Brookes match an exhibition contest was staged between Stanley N. Doust and A. W. Dunlap of the Australian team and George M. Church and Dean Mathey, former eastern intercollegiate champions.

The Australasians found great difficulty in handling Church's service and Mathey's passing shots were most effective against them. The first set was won by Church and Mathey at 6—4, the second by Doust and Dunlap at 7—5. The rubber set was not played.

Combination Two and Four Passenger Roadster

You will find the auxiliary rear seat of this roadster both convenient and distinctly good looking.

The idea on which this unusual body has been designed comes from abroad. It is, we believe, the very first design in which a Roadster has been made convenient and comfortable for occasional extra passengers, and, at the same time, very smart in appearance.

All kinds of uses suggest themselves for such a car. It makes an admirable machine for town use. It is a splendid all around car for two people who occasionally wish to have room for at least two others, without sacrificing comfort and appearance. Indeed, haven't we all wished for a Roadster which could serve at will as a Touring car, without compromising with good looks? This is the need the new Pathfinder Roadster fills.

Pathfinder cars are owned by discriminating people. The chassis, which measures the larger part of an owner's satisfaction, has always been a well-nigh perfect piece of work, built for strength, efficiency and long life. Owners will praise to you also the splendid bodies and equipment, and what they are pleased to call our generous idea of service.

TINKERS DIVIDE DOUBLE HEADER WITH TIP TOPS

After Being Beaten, 6 to 5, North Siders Come Back and Win, 5 to 0.

FIRST, A SEESAW GAME

BY I. E. SANBORN.

Brooklyn, N. Y., July 25.—[Special.]—Chicago's Tinx stood still in the pennant race today by breaking even with Brooklyn in their getaway doubleheader. The Tip Tops pulled the first game out of the furnace, 6 to 5, but were never in the second game, which the visitors copped, 5 to 0.

A home run smash by Holt with two men on the bases in the eighth inning snatched the first scrap away from the Chicagoans after they thought they had it stowed away in their jeans. Up to this spasm the count was 5 to 2 and McGuire was going along easily on the slab.

Holt's Homer Brings Defeat.

In the fatal eighth the Tip Tops slapped out two hard hits before a man was gone and Tinker called on Hendrix to step in and stop things. He might have succeeded if Fritz had not made a wild peg to first which let the tying run on the circuit. Holt caught one of Hendrix's best hooks squarely between the seams and whaled it across Second street for three runs and the game.

The Tinx rolled up fifteen hits in the first battle off Seaton, while the locals made only nine, but the visitors wasted some of their fire. A lucky double play by Westerzil in the second round also helped defeat Chicago. McGuire aided the home team by pulling the same bone play twice, fielding bunts to third base with no chance to get his man there either time.

Zwilling Poles Six Hits.

Zwilling featured with four consecutive hits in the first game, including a home run and a double. He came across with two more in the second game, giving him six safeties out of nine times at bat for the day.

Prendergast shut Brooklyn out with six scattered hits in the second game. No two of them were made in the same round. The Tip Tops got only one man as far as third base during this game. That was in the sixth round after Chicago had a margin of five runs.

Manager Tinker remained out of the second game and let Stanley cover short for him. The youngster got everything within reach. Westerzil kicked so hard over a third strike that he was canned in the middle of the second affair and Gagnier finished.

Chicago Takes Lead.

Chicago took the lead in the second inning of the first game and would have sewed it up right there but for a horseshoe play. Zwilling doubled, Wickland tripled, and Beck singled, putting over two runs before a man was out. Fritz forced Beck out. Then Farrell singled. McGuire pulled a fast one over third base for what should have been a double, but Westerzil knocked it down with his bare hand and recovered in time to double up Fritz and McGuire. Evans opened the home half with a triple, but could not score. Hofman lined to Wickland. Westerzil flew to Zwilling, who doubled up Evans at the plate by a perfect throw.

The Tip Tops got to McGuire for one run in the third. Holt and Land singled. Seaton bunted to McGuire, who threw to third too late, and the bases were full with none out. Cooper popped out, but Myers beat out an infield hit, scoring Holt. Shaw forced Land at the plate and Evans skied.

Brooklyn Ties Score.

McGuire pitched himself into a hole in the fifth and couldn't get out before Brooklyn tied the score. Land singled and Seaton walked. Cooper bunted, and McGuire made the mistake of throwing to third, again too late to get anybody. Myers forced Land at the plate. Fritz fumbled Shaw's roller, letting Seaton register. Then Evans hit sharply to McGuire for a double killing.

The visitors increased their lead by two runs in the eighth on singles by Wilson, Zwilling, and Wickland before anybody was out. Beck then ran into his own bunt and was called out, and Fritz hit into a double play.

Tip Tops Grab Game.

The Tip Tops rallied in their eighth, drove McGuire to cover, and grabbed four runs and the game before Hendrix could stop them. Shaw singled and Evans doubled. Hendrix took the slab. Fritz booted Hofman's bounder, filling the bases. Westerzil forced Hofman, scoring Shaw. Then Holt cleaned up the game with a terrific smash over the right field fence for three more runs.

Singles by Block and Stanley put the Tinx in position to win in the ninth, but Tinker fanned and Wilson fouled out.

The second game went through two innings without a break. Then Finneran lost control and gave the Tinx a pair of tallies. Farrell walked and went to second on Prendergast's sacrifice. Walsh flied out. Stanley walked and Block scratched a single over second, filling the bases. Zwilling rapped out his fifth straight hit, scoring Farrell and Stanley. Wickland drew the third pass of the round, but Beck flied out.

Hit Finneran Hard.

The Tinx hit Finneran hard in the fourth, but got nothing, because Hofman pinched Fritz's bounder with one hand, and Finneran threw out Farrell, after being knocked down by a swift liner, which hit him in the left arm and dropped within easy reach. Beck's error and Hofman's walk gave Brooklyn an opening in its fourth, but Westerzil struck out and Holt fouled. Westerzil was so peeved that he was chased and Gagnier took his place at third base.

A single and boot by Gagnier and a pass did not help the visitors any in the sixth, because there were two down and Beck grounded out.

Tinker's kids mauled Finneran for three runs in the sixth with a little help. Farrell was grazed by a curve with one down. Prendergast and Walsh singled, scoring Farrell. Stanley doubled over Cooper's head, driving in Prendergast and Walsh. Stanley was run out trying for third on his rap, and Block popped.

Neither team came close to a run after the sixth.

Tinx Sydelights.

Brooklyn, N. Y., July 25.—[Special.]—Buffalo next.

Four games will be played in Buffalo, weather permitting, after which the Tinx will jump to Pittsburgh.

A soaking rain all the morning put the field in slippery condition at the start, but the sun dried it out before the double bill was over.

This was called "Finneran day," and the pitcher was presented with a gold watch and chain by local admirers before the second game.

Both games dragged dreadfully, the players taking their time in everything. The first one extended nearly two hours and a half and the second one was completed just inside of two hours.

The Tinx and Tip Tops outdrew the Brooklyn and Cincinnati teams that were at the National league park here today. There were estimated crowds of 4,000 at the National league grounds and 6,000 at the Federal park. Both attractions were double headers.

President Gilmore of the Federal league was on hand, coming over from Baltimore to see the games here. He will finish his swing around the circuit by taking in Buffalo early next week, while the Tinx are there. The president says the Federal league wants only six more players from the National and American leagues and expects to get those soon.

Umpire Anderson was off on the rules in the game which he tried to arbitrate behind the bat. In the eighth inning Beck bunted toward first and ran into the ball, which Land picked up and threw to first. Vanayckle came up and told Anderson something, whereupon the latter called it a foul and sent the runner back to first. There was more discussion before Anderson called Beck out for being hit by a batted ball.

HARD STRUGGLE IN NET TOURNEY

Clothier and Gardner Give Hackett and Alexander Fight in East.

OLD TITLE TEAM WINS.

Boston, Mass., July 25.—A fierce fight in the eastern doubles between the old championship team, H. H. Hackett and F. B. Alexander, and W. J. Clothier and G. P. Gardner Jr., was the feature of the tournament play at Longwood today. Five hard sets were necessary before the superior team play of Hackett and Alexander overcame the greater individual brilliancy of the Philadelphia-Boston pair. The winners will play the Californians, Fottrell and Murray, in the semifinals on Monday.

Alexander rested scarcely ten minutes and then came on to the grandstand courts again for four sets with Williams, playing in all eighty-four hard games in three hours. He lost the singles contest after a hard battle.

McLoughlin Hard Pressed.

McLoughlin narrowly escaped dropping a set in his match with A. S. Dabney of Boston. The Californian usually makes his matches straight set affairs, but in the third with Dabney the latter obtained a lead of five games to two before the national champion woke up.

In the eighth game Dabney was within two points of the set when McLoughlin, speeding up his service, ran out the game and then took the next four and the match.

The doubles teammates, Murray and Fottrell, had a long duel in singles, in which fifty-two games were played in four sets. As the heat was oppressive, the youngsters were exhausted when Murray drove out the deciding point.

Davis Players Present.

A decidedly international flavor was given to the tournament today with four English and three American Davis cup players in the inclosure at the same time. While R. Norris Williams II. was engaged in beating F. B. Alexander and McLoughlin and Bundy were playing a practice match, the four members of the English team, who reached New York this morning, came on to adjoining courts for a test of the American turf.

The English players were James C. Parke, who played with A. R. F. Kingscote, and T. M. Mavrogordoto, who opposed A. H. Lowe. Spectators were especially interested in seeing the game of Parke, who beat McLoughlin in England nearly a year ago. The foreigners will play here practically every day until their Davis cup match with the Pittsburgh winners on Aug. 6, 7, and 8. They used American balls today for the first time, and all four expressed themselves as pleased with Longwood turf.

Summary of the Play.

LONGWOOD CUP SINGLES.

Fifth round—M. E. McLoughlin, San Francisco, beat A. S. Dabney, Boston, 6—3, 6—2, 7—5; R. Norris Williams II., Philadelphia, beat F. B. Alexander, New York, 4—6, 6—1, 6—3, 6—3; R. L. Murray, San Francisco, beat E. Fottrell, San Francisco, 8—7, 7—5, 4—6, 6—8; Wallace F. Johnson, Philadelphia, beat G. T. Putnam, Boston, 7—5, 6—4, 6—4.

EASTERN DOUBLES CHAMPIONSHIP.

Fourth round—H. H. Hackett and F. B. Alexander beat W. J. Clothier and G. P. Gardner Jr., 4—6, 6—3, 6—4, 2—6, 6—3.

GERMAN NET TEAM ARRIVES.

Pittsburgh, Pa., July 25.—Otto Froitzheim and Oscar Kreutzer, German aspirants for Davis cup honors in the international tennis play, arrived at Sewickley, Pa., today and were met by a committee from the Allegheny Country club, on whose courts the matches with the Australasian team will be played next week. They will be given every opportunity for practice, as will the Australasians, who are expected to arrive tomorrow. All the players will be housed at the club, on Sewickley heights.

Whist Query.

Albany, Ga.—[To the Editor.]—The declarer bids one royal spade; No. 2 bids no more; No. 3 has spade A; diamond A, Q, J, 10, 8, 6, 3; hearts Q, 8, 5; clubs 9, 4. Is two diamonds No. 3's correct bid? J. A. D.

Two diamonds was the correct bid. The hand is worth more, but would give the declarer a chance to go to no-trump if he thought his hands warranted.

Chicago.—[To the Editor.]—Would you kindly let me have at your earliest convenience your judgment on the correct way of scoring the following hand at auction bridge:

South bids two lilies, is doubled by east, and south redoubles, south making five odd tricks. In addition, east revokes. C. H. L.

South would score 100 points for making his contract, 100 points for each additional trick, and 100 for the revoke, making 500 points above the line. Below the line he would score five times 36, or 180 points. The 100 points would be more profitable for south than taking tricks from the adversaries, as they had but two, and he could not get 40 points for making a slam.

BRITISH SEND NET STARS FOR DAVIS CUP MATCHES.

New York, July 25.—The four tennis stars of the British isles team, which will play in the Davis cup matches, arrived today on the steamship Baltic. The party included J. C. Parke, the captain, 33 years old; A. H. Lowe, 28 years; T. M. Mavrogordato, 30 years, and Lieut. A. R. F. Kingscote, 25 years. A. Wallis Meyers, the English expert, accompanied them.

Parke, who visits this country for the third time as a member of an international challenging team, said the players were all in fine condition. They looked it.

The team left for Boston at 10 o'clock, for Parke believes his men need a lot of practice on American courts. As to the makeup of the team, which has won a place in the cup finals by beating Belgium and France, he was unable to say.

"It will all depend on what the men do in practice," he declared. "The only thing certain is that I will play first place in singles. Probably Lowe will play second in singles, but he positively will not be in the doubles. It is Lowe's second visit to America and I expect great things of him. Lieut. Kingscote is strong. He has special leave from his regiment in India to play in these matches.

"Our chances of standing as the challengers of the Americans are good. Whatever we may do we will have to return to England, much as we would like to remain for the American championship at Newport."

The Britons meet the winners of the Australasian-German matches in the finals on the courts at Longwood, Boston, Aug. 6, 7, and 8.

NET TITLE TO ARMSTRONG.

Minneapolis, Minn., July 25.—Joe Armstrong of St. Paul successfully defended his title as northwestern champion in the final day's play of the Northwestern tennis tournament at Deephaven. He defeated Selforde Stellwagen of this city 6—3, 7—5, 1—6, 7—5. Miss Marguerite Davis of St. Paul had little trouble in disposing of Miss Alice Drake, also of St. Paul, for the championship in the women's singles. She won in straight sets 6—1, 6—2.

The match in the doubles between John Adams and Joe Armstrong and Selforde Stellwagen and Trafford Jayne resulted in a victory for the Adams-Armstrong pair.

FIRST BUOY LOST; YACHT RACE OFF

Annual Lipton Cup Event Postponed When the Marker Disappears.

SAIL CONTEST TODAY.

The race for the Sir Thomas Lipton trophy, scheduled for yesterday afternoon at the Chicago Yacht club, failed to finish owing to the mysterious disappearance of one of the buoys marking the course. As a result Chairman Sheldon Clark of the regatta committee declared the contest off and it will be resailed this afternoon in connection with the Marigold trophy contest.

With six boats competing on time allowance, the race promised keen competition. Instructions to skippers of the competing boats showed the first mark to be to the southward and all of the contestants made for it, with Fred A. Price's international cup defender Valiant in the lead. The Snite syndicate's Olympian was second, Charles D. Chapin's Michicago was third, while the other three boats trailed astern. Then the hunt for the initial stake started, but officials and skippers soon discovered that the mark either had broken from its mooring or been taken away by somebody.

Olympian Goes to Front.

While searching for the stake Olympian went into the lead and started for the second mark, which was in place. The Snite craft kept in front of Valiant, which followed it over the finishing line, with Michicago third. The others had dropped out. Following the finish of the boats Chairman Clark and other members of the committee decided that no race had been sailed and ordered the skippers to report for the contest today.

Commodore William A. Lydon, bowing to a popular demand on the part of the members, yesterday agreed to accept a renomination as head of the Chicago Yacht club, and it was officially announced that he would lead the ticket framed for 1915 by the nominating committee. The administration of Commodore Lydon has been such a successful one that it is not likely the commodore will have any opposition at the election to be held in September. Named to run on the same ticket with the commodore were Fred A. Price for vice commodore, Charles D. Chapin for rear commodore, and George O. Clinch and J. J. Corkhill for directors. George L. Weed and Harry M. Higinbotham, who occupy the respective positions of secretary and treasurer, were named by the committee to succeed themselves.

C. A. A. Swimmers Exhibit.

Members of the Chicago Athletic association's swimming team gave an interesting exhibition of fancy swimming and high diving at the Chicago Yacht club during the afternoon.

The first of a series of three races for the George B. Carpenter trophy was sailed at the Evanston Yacht club. Undine, owned by F. B. and R. F. Hutchins, was the winner, with A. D. Andrews' Dawn second and L. G. Shepard's Chiquita third. The next race of the series will be sailed Saturday. It is announced that the trophy, instead of being held by the winner for a single season, as in the past, will become the permanent property of the successful boat this summer.

FIGHT BILL IN MINNESOTA.

St. Paul, Minn., July 25.—[Special.]—A bill legalizing fifteen round boxing bouts in Minnesota will be introduced at the next session of the legislature by Senator Peter Van Hoven of St. Paul, if he is reelected. Mr. Van Hoven said he had discussed the matter with several senators, who were favorable to the measure. Senator Van Hoven would permit bouts only in cities of 10,000 population, where police protection is provided. He would have a boxing committee to supervise the bouts.

CUBS POUND BALL; TRIM BRAVES, 5-4 FOR NINTH IN ROW

FAN BEANS UMPIRE BYRON

BY SAM WELLER.

Boston, Mass., July 25.—[Special.]—Jim Vaughn foiled his Boston jinx today and the Cubs hung up their ninth straight victory by a 5 to 4 count. Because the Giants beat the Pirates, Hank's hopefuls still are two games and a half behind first place. Vaughn has lost only four games this season and three of them were lost to the Braves. Old Otto Hess gave Jim a hard fight, but the Cubs bunched most of the eleven hits.

A two run rally in the seventh, when the Braves had a one run margin, won for the Cubs. Saier's homer gave the Cubs a run at the start and a muff behind a double yielded another in the third. Then the tribesmen went ahead by scoring twice in each of the third and fourth frames. The third Cub tally resulted from a double and a single in the sixth.

Vaughn Puzzle After Fourth.

Vaughn allowed the Braves eight hits, seven of which came in the first four innings. Hess pounded three safeties and drew a pass in his last trip to the plate. Good led the Cub attack with three hits, two of them doubles, and Sweeney and Derrick each poled two swats.

An enraged spectator beaned Umpire Byron with a pop bottle after a double play wrecked a chance for the Braves in the last round. The fans were sore because Byron allowed a great catch made by Tommy Leach among the spectators in center field earlier in the fray.

Leach crashed into the center field crowd and caught a long fly from Deal's club in the sixth. The Braves kicked claiming Deal was entitled to a double. Vaughn batted four times and fanned in each trial. After breezing from one side of the plate Jim displayed his versatility by turning around and whiffing from the left hand batters' box.

Crowd of 16,000 at Game.

Over 16,000 fans, the biggest crowd the Braves have drawn at home in years, turned out to welcome them after their wonderful success in the west. In sixteen games played in foreign fields the Braves triumphed twelve times. Their spurt lifted them from last place to the fourth berth and the first division. Half an hour before game time the little Columbus avenue park was packed and still the bugs kept flocking in and they poured on to the field in such numbers as to make ground rules necessary. It was agreed that a hit or an overthrow into the populace would be good for two bases.

Vic Saier started the Cubs right by smashing a home run into the right field bleachers after two were out in the first inning. Cather singled and Maranville doubled with two down in the home half, but Schmidt rolled to Saier.

Singles by Sweeney and Derrick and Maranville's boot of Hargrave's bounce filled the sacks with one out in the second. Vaughn fanned and Leach rolled out.

Error Gives Cubs Tally.

Dugey handed the Cubs another run in the third. Good began it with a double into the right field overflow. Saier fanned and Zimmerman tapped out. Dugey made a two base muff of Schulte's long fly and Good tallied. Sweeney died via the infield route.

When the Braves went to bat Grandpa Hess made an assault which tied the score. Otto singled and was forced by Dugey. Hargrave missed a pitch and Dugey took second, from where he scored when Derrick threw low on Evers' easy chance. John of Troy reached second and went home when Cather dropped a Texas leaguer into right. Maranville and Schmidt were easy.

Two more Tribesmen crossed the plate in the fourth. Again Hess was a big factor in the scoring. Singles by Whitted and Gowdy put the former on third after Deal skied. Hess dropped a single in front of Leach and Whitted counted. Hargrave's low throw let Gowdy reach third, and the catcher scored when Dugey forced Hess. Dugey stole, but Leach took Evers' fly.

Sweeney Scores in Sixth.

Sweeney doubled to center in the sixth and completed the circuit when Derrick's bounder hopped over Evers' head for a single. The round ended when Hargrave hit into a double play.

Two more markers in the seventh put the Cubs in command once more. Vaughn fanned for the third time. Leach singled, Good doubled, and Saier walked, filling the sacks. Zimmerman's single to center scored Leach and Good. Corriden batted for Schulte and fouled to Gowdy. Zim hiked to second after the catch, but Sweeney lined into Evers' hands.

A fumble by Derrick and Vaughn's wild pitch put Maranville on second before a Brave was out in the eighth, but the rabbit died on third. Good was out in the ninth when Saier walked and went all the way to third while Deal threw out Zimmerman. Johnston fouled to Gowdy and Vic's trick play was wasted.

After Gowdy went out Vaughn walked Hess and Dugey. Devore ran for Hess and was doubled off second when Leach made a shoestring catch of Evers' fly.

DEWAR WINS KING'S PRIZE.

BISLEY, England, July 25.—The king's prize, the most coveted trophy of the annual prize meeting of the National Rifle association, was won today by Sergt. J. L. Dewar of the Royal Scots territorial regiment, after a tie with Private A. G. Fulton of the London territorial. Each made 309 out of a possible 355, and then shot off the tie. Private Fulton was the winner of the king's prize in 1912.

Sam Wellerisms.

The start was delayed fifteen minutes to allow the overflow bugs to arrange themselves about the field.

Deal robbed Zimmerman of a single in the fourth by a pretty scoop and a dazzling throw of Heine's slow roller down third base line.

While the crowd was sifting on to the field half a dozen kids suddenly hove up on the summit of the high fence in center field. Four husky cops dashed toward the invaders and the kids dropped outside the park without stopping to argue the matter.

Stallings wanted to get as many right handed batters as possible into the lineup against Vaughn and Davis and Ellison, a pitcher and a catcher, were announced as two of the Braves' outfielders. Dugey and Cather, right handed batters, took their places when Hank named Vaughn as his twirler.

ELGIN SURE OF RALPH MULFORD

Star Will Drive Either Duesenberg or Peugeot in Motor Classics.

ANOTHER ENTRY MADE.

Competition of Ralph Mulford, winner of the 1910 Elgin National trophy race, in the fifth renewal of the Kane county classics, set for Aug. 21-22, was assured yesterday when Fred Duesenberg of Des Moines, Ia., entered a second Duesenberg as a running mate to the car to be driven by Eddie Rickenbacher, winner of the recent 300 mile race at Sioux City. This makes twelve cars nominated to date, twenty-four entries in all.

In filing his nomination with Chairman C. G. Sinsabaugh of the Chicago Automobile club's entry committee, Mr. Duesenberg did not definitely name his driver, but in a letter accompanying the entry he stated that negotiations were under way to secure Mulford as Rickenbacher's teammate. Therefore, in case Mulford fails to secure the Kauffman Peugeot he now is dickering for, he will accept Deusenberg's offer and drive the latter's second entry in the Chicago Automobile club trophy race on the opening day of the Elgin meet and also in the Elgin National trophy contest on the second day.

Big Fields Expected.

The largest field of cars that ever competed in the Elgin races already is assured for the fifth annual renewal of the contests. With a dozen machines already named, Chairman Joseph E. Callender of the contest committee expects to round up no fewer than twenty-four cars that will be sent away by Starter Fred Wagner on each day of the races.

Among those who have promised to enter and whose nominations are expected at any time are Ernie Moross, with three Maxwells, Wishart and Pullen with two Mercers, Johnny Jenkins with one and possibly two Great Westerns, Wilcox with the Gray Fox, Chandler with the Braender Bull Dog, Keene with the Beaver Bullet, Kline with the King, and Alex Sloan with a pair of Cases. Other good prospects include the Ray, Chevrolet, Simplex, and D'Alene, Marmon.

Starter Wagner in Town.

Starter Fred Wagner visited the city yesterday on his way to the Galveston beach meet and conferred with officials of the Chicago Automobile club regarding Elgin plans. Officials of the Elgin Road Racing associaton have finished the work of oiling the homestretch.

BEGIN ON SPEEDWAY SOON; DEAL FOR LAND COMPLETED.

Consummation of the deal for 315 acres of land located in the vicinity of Maywood, Forest Park, and Riverside is announced by D. F. Reid, president of the Speedway Park association, which has set out to build for Chicago an automobile race course and country club that will care for other sports besides motoring.

Started primarily for the purpose of building a motor speedway that can compete with the big oval at Indianapolis, the project has broadened, according to President Reid, until now it is proposed to have a club of at least 2,000 members—membership involving the purchase of twenty-five shares of stock—which also can look after the interests of polo, golf, tennis, trapshooting, archery, swimming, and aviation. Reid also plans to have the clubhouse open the year around and to encourage such winter sports as hockey, skating, etc.

Actual work on Speedway park will start within a few days, says President Reid, who states that plows and graders soon will begin the work of converting the virgin prairie into a modern speedway. In addition to the track, President Reid is planning the construction of the clubhouse, two big grand stands, three pavilions, and two field stands. The association now is waiting for the Illinois Central to run a spur to the grounds and deliver $300,000 worth of building material, President Reid says.

Outside of the fact that the speedway is to be a two mile affair and that it is planned to have two big races a year and several smaller motoring events, the association's leader does not go into detail as to the automobile feature of his project.

A. U. track meet, held under the auspices of the C. A. A. at Grant park yesterday afternoon. The C. A. A. won the meet hands down with eighty-six points, because few outside athletes were entered.

Goelitz, as usual, starred; not only in breaking the world's 100 yard high hurdle record of :13 1-5, but also was the individual point winner, scoring a total of fifteen points.

Loomis caused a great surprise in beating Sol Butler, the "Kansas Flyer," in the 120 yard dash. This race was so close that it was hard to decide who won, two judges picking Loomis, while one judge selected the colored speed marvel as the winner. The time equaled B. J. Wefers' world's record for the distance.

Robinson Easy Victor.

Robinson, the former Mercersburg academy athlete, had an easy time winning the 300 yard run, beating Brown of the C. A. A. by eight yards in 0:34 4-5. He ran under the colors of the Detroit Y. M. C. A.

You are the Wonder Flower of the Passions of My Life.
On Your Heart, in Your Eyes, through Your Lips I Have Felt the Bliss of a Miraculous Love and Have Been Exalted Above This World.
I Tremble at the Consciousness of Having Been Loved by You so Completely

The Love Life of Richard Wagner

COPYRIGHT FROST AND REED

In Wagner's own eyes he was the Tristan of that most impassioned of all his operas, "Tristan and Isolde." To those who knew him best, however, to the women who worshiped him, and to the men who befriended him, he was no hero, but only pitifully ungreat. "All I aspired to be and was not," translates perhaps most perfectly Wagner's real relationship to his immortal Tristan. It was his own conception of himself, of the best that was in him, of the self that he could never be. With years of failure graying his hair and bending his shoulders he infused into Tristan the spirit and soul of an eternal youth which time was never able to destroy.

By LOUISE JAMES.

"I AM your Tristan and you are my Isolde. I have erected this monument to you, the most beautiful of all my dreams. You are the wonder flower of the passions of my life. On your heart, in your eyes, through your lips I have felt the bliss of a miraculous love and have been exalted above this world. I tremble at the consciousness of having been loved by you so completely. Always shall I breathe the enchanted fragrance of those flowers you plucked for me from your heart. They are miracle flowers and they will bloom for me through eternity. Your caresses are the crown of my life, the blessed roses that sprang into bloom from the crown of thorns which before wreathed my brow. Do not repent them. They are ours. No wish is left me. No desire. Only joy and a sublime consciousness. Power and capacity for everything."

So wrote the greatest musical genius the world has ever known to the love of his earlier life, Frau Matilde Wesendonk, the woman who raised that genius to its supremest emotional heights. But it is so hard to keep "heights the soul is competent to gain." Circumstances of life are so apt to drag them down, to besmirch them pitilessly, and to leave in their wake only a painful sense of more lost than gained.

And in Baireuth, Germany, within the last few weeks the world has just been given another instance of this same sort of anti-climax, calling it by as mild a name as possible. The long buried ghosts of that deep love between Wagner and his second wife, Frau Cosima von Bülow Wagner, have been dragged before judge and jury, and there paraded in full view of a gaping, curious world.

All their long years of intimacy before their ultimate marriage have been made the subject of speculative debate and all the wide lengths their love went those same years have been mathematically measured out with true German precision.

* *

Court Decides for Widow.

The reason of all this ugly notoriety was the rather unusual desire on the part of Frau Cosima's daughter, Frau Beidler, now the wife of the leader of the Munich Opera company, to be publicly known as the natural child of the great Wagner instead of the conventional daughter of her mother's first husband, Von Bülow. Indeed it seems that she insisted on having "nee Wagner" after her name and Frau Cosima objected most decidedly. Not on any moral or ethical grounds—her adored son Siegfried is admittedly her child by Wagner, and born a little less than a year before their marriage—but because of the question of the division and inheritance of the composer's large estate.

Frau Cosima won. The judge ignored the striking family resemblance between Wagner and the daughter in question. "Legal grounds" triumphed over "facial evidence," as the German papers jocularly remarked, and the final judgment, it seems, was given on the testimony of Frau Marzeik, a former housekeeper in the Von Bülow home.

So has ended a rather sickly by-episode in the long chapter of one of Wagner's most passionate attachments. The smoky effects which sometimes come after the ecstasy of love seem to have settled down in this case on those who were left. Though Wagner, a genius and in no way a normal man, is not to be judged perhaps by normal standards. Throughout his life he lived the old French definition of love—"constancy in love means not always to love one, but always to love some one." Women played an obsessing part in his scheme of things. They were a need, a necessity. Without them he would have been unwinged.

First Love His Inspiration.

Frau Cosima of the late Baireuth incident was undoubtedly the one woman who was fitted in every way to share the throne his genius had bequeathed him while he was alive and govern him for his kingdom of adorers after death. But his love for her was with the reason quite as much as with the senses. And in that she differs markedly from all the women before her; differs strikingly from the woman of his earlier life who was the inspiration of that most impassioned of all created things, "Tristan and Isolde."

"I am your Tristan and you are my Isolde." So he wrote in the late twilight of their love when the anguish of the passionate renunciation they were forced to endure was foreseen by them both.

For five years Richard Wagner had known and adored her, the aristocratic, ethereal, fairylike Frau Wesendonk, wife of Otto Wesendonk, and mother of three small children. Thirty-nine years old when he met her, and in the eyes of the world a failure, he had found in her an inspiration, an intoxicant, which moved him to his mightiest efforts. She it was who had proved the emotional impetus to all of his great works after "Lohengrin." In some way or other she had stood in intimate relationship with the "Rheingold," "Walküre," "Siegfried," "Götterdämmerung," "Meistersinger," and even "Parsifal." Everything he wrote those years he submitted first to her. All that he had composed during the day he would play for her in the evening dusk in her music room of the villa on the Green hill.

Irresponsible in Personal Dealings.

Then came "Tristan and Isolde," their wonderful child of great joy and pain, as Wagner described it, and after it, very shortly, the end. Until that time they had held themselves in leash. But the barriers were not as strong as they had thought and the appeal of their own passions was too great. Despite the fact that Wagner was no longer young, that years of struggle and years of failure had grayed his hair and bent his shoulders, the spirit of eternal youth which he had infused into Tristan was still his. The body might be wearing but the soul was fresh. Tristan was Wagner, perpetually young. Tristan was Wagner according to his own conception of himself.

But the gulf between Wagner and his ideal Tristan was infinite, indeed. "All I aspired to be and was not," perhaps could be said of the great man's work of art. But in real life Wagner was so pitifully ungreat. In his dealings with his friends he was often so petty; in his dealings with those nearest to him and dependent on him he was so often irresponsible; in his dealings with the women who had given to him all that was theirs to give he was often so base. Into his work Wagner threw the best that was in him. His soul went into that. Those who were about him, feeding the fires of his genius, were the ones to suffer from the other side of his nature. He was no Tristan to those who knew him best. Only to himself was he the hero of that immortal work.

And if Wagner was Tristan in his own eyes and Matilde his Isolde, so Otto Wesendonk, the husband, might be called the King Mark of the real life drama. Instead of going hunting, however, as King Mark did, he stayed obtrusively at home. Twice in the course of the five years he had sent Wagner into temporary exile when instinct told him that affairs were reaching the danger point. It was a matter to him not only of preserving the woman he loved, but also the mother of his children, who, as Wagner says, were unconscious obstacles between Matilde and himself.

Matilde Not Inclined to Follow.

The outcome of it all and Wagner's final precipitous flight from Zurich and the house on the Green hill was not due, however, to Wesendonk alone. Matilde showed no inclination to respond to Wagner to the extent of giving up her husband, home, and children. He fascinated her, swept her from her feet to the extent of winning her avowed love and adoration, but there were other things that counted in her life. Women of her nature are of two kinds. One goes forth into the night after having given up all to follow the scarlet flower; the other draws back and waits for the first flush of day to wake them from their mad dream.

Matilde was of the latter class. She might be Isolde to Wagner's Tristan as long as she had the protecting background of her husband's hearth, but perhaps in her vivid imagination she did not relish the doors of the Green hill villa closed to her forever and the prospect of plunging into poverty and struggle with the man of genius. At the time of their parting Wagner describes Matilde as an "angel whose God had deserted her," but in her own heart she was probably devoutly glad that her husband had not.

Wagner's Wife Furiously Jealous.

Another obstacle had stood insistently in the way of Wagner's and Matilde's complete possession each of the other. That was Wagner's wife. Minna was furiously jealous. At the time of their marriage in 1836, twenty-one years before, she had been a promising actress of no small beauty. She was 27 and he was 23, and from the first their different temperaments and viewpoints clashed. Her utter materialism could not understand his impecunious idealism. She had the painful clearness of vision which often accompanies the inartistic soul. She had given up everything for him and in return been plunged in direst financial straits. Her "vicious habits," of which he was wont to complain to Matilde, were not unknown to him at the time he was urging her so fiercely to marry him, for even in those early years he had shown no hesitancy to add to her list of indiscretions and afterwards to insist on matrimony against her saner judgment.

Towards the end of the five years' friendship of Wagner and Matilde she grew as impatient as Wesendonk did, and finally, losing her temper completely, broke through all bonds and created repeated and turbulent scenes at the Green hill villa. She intercepted mail, broke in on certain clandestine meetings, and refused absolutely to tolerate the increasing closeness of the union. She left Wagner for a while, but returned in time to see him forcibly exiled by the firm but irate Wesendonk.

Thus came about the end of the most absorbing of all Wagner's many affairs and with it seemed to pass much of the storm and tumult of his emotional nature. He was 44 at the break and the terrible attraction of sex which he had always experienced in such exaggerated form grew less for him.

* *

Cosima Enters Composer's Life.

It was four years after that, when the vision of Matilde which had so filled his soul had grown faint with the passing of time, that Mme. Cosima von Bülow came into his life. Her entrance into his existence was peculiarly like a decree of fate, and the history of art has no more perfect record of the union of two souls than that written by their subsequent life together.

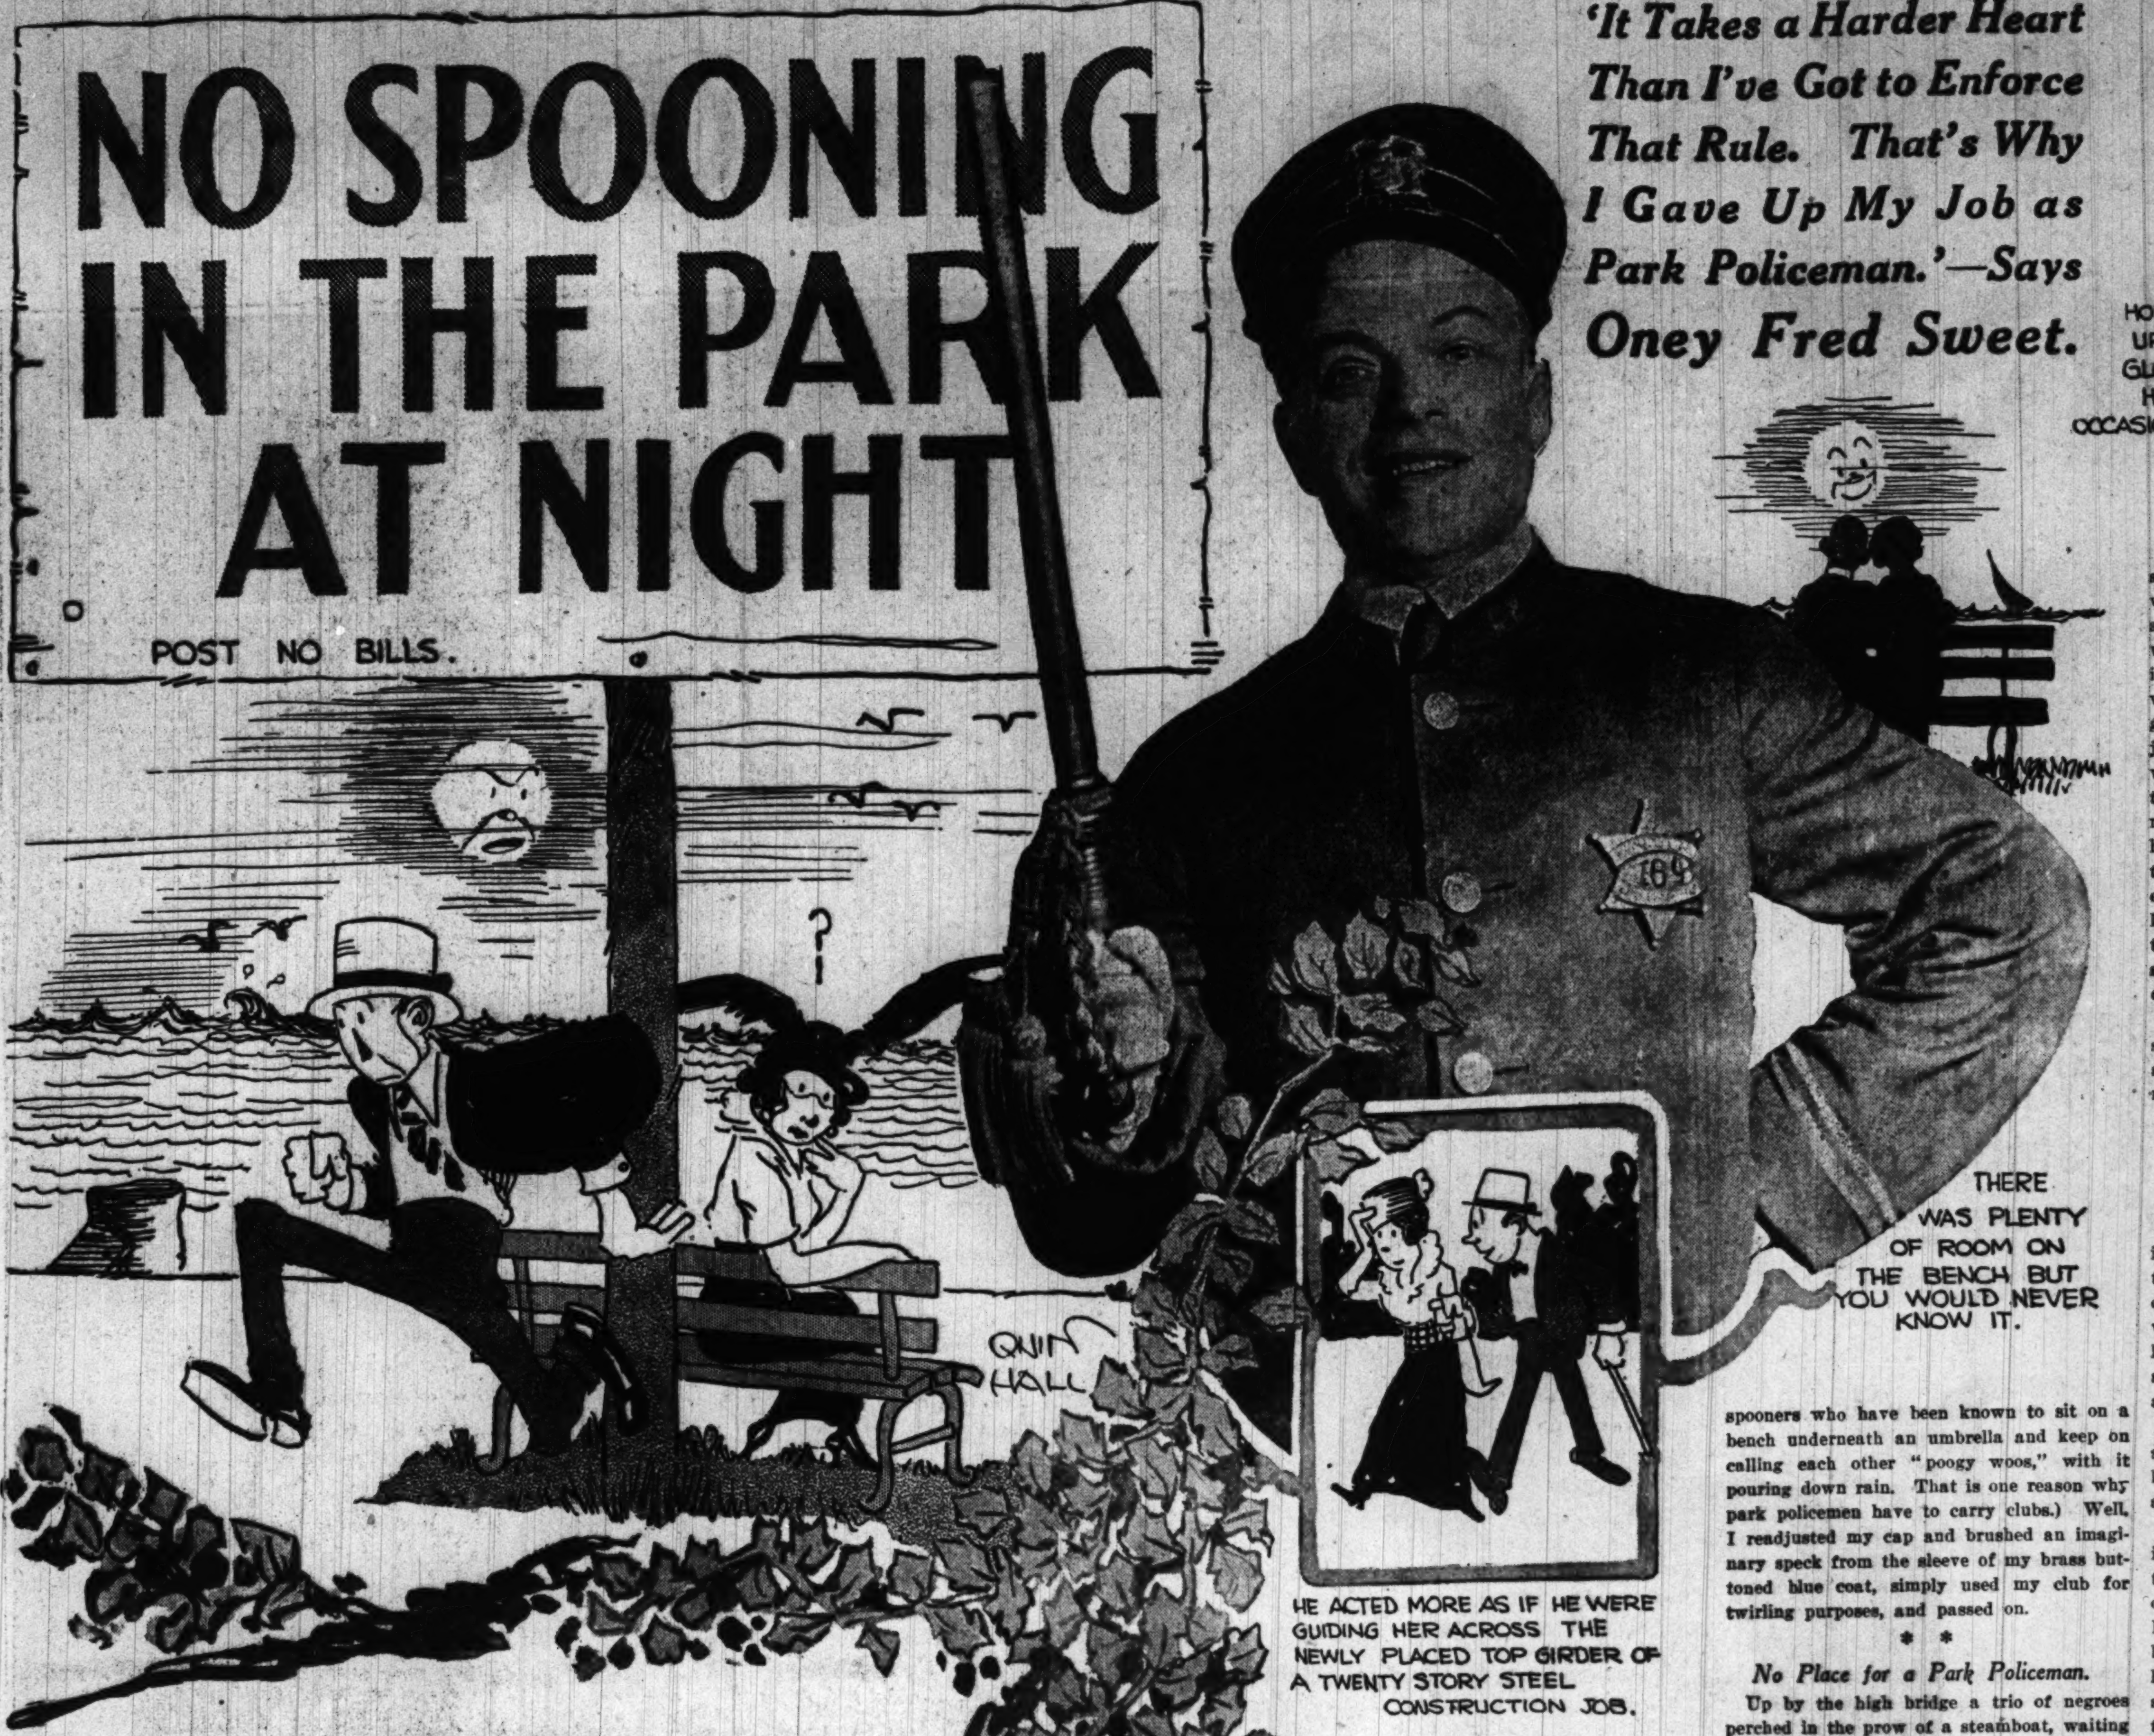
To be sure there were many obstacles in the way of any mutual possession when they first met. Wagner was still married, though he and Minna had drifted worlds apart. Cosima also was married. Von Bülow was an intimate friend of Wagner's and one of the most prominent pianists of the day. A period of nearly ten years elapsed, however, from the time of their first interest in each other to the year when Cosima was freed by a divorce from her husband and the two were married. Biographies which are recent and supposedly authoritative state that there were three children born to them in the interim between their acquaintance and their marriage. If the judgment of the courts is correct, however, there were only two born during that period.

Few men of genius have been accorded in their life the complete success which was Wagner's. He lived to witness his victory everywhere and to own all that he had struggled for so feverishly his whole life through. He finished and saw performed on the stage all of the great works he had planned and dreamed of. He even accomplished the miraculous and built in a tiny Bavarian town a theater which stands as a colossal monument to his power and to which people flock from all parts of the world, a generation and more after his death.

Now he rests under a simple stone not far from the theater which was the dream of his life and where his turbulent spirit still seems to brood, jealously guarded and tended by the incomparable, masterful, and faithful Cosima.

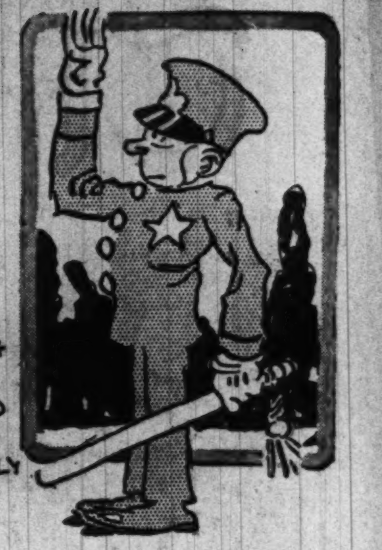
NO SPOONING IN THE PARK AT NIGHT

'It Takes a Harder Heart Than I've Got to Enforce That Rule. That's Why I Gave Up My Job as Park Policeman.'—Says Oney Fred Sweet.



THERE WAS PLENTY OF ROOM ON THE BENCH BUT YOU WOULD NEVER KNOW IT.

HE ACTED MORE AS IF HE WERE GUIDING HER ACROSS THE NEWLY PLACED TOP GIRDER OF A TWENTY STORY STEEL CONSTRUCTION JOB.



HOLDING UP A GLOVED HAND OCCASIONALLY

I T may look like only a few blocks from the street car line on across Lincoln park to the benches along the Lake Shore drive, but in reality the place where the waves splash is a million miles from brick and mortar, and jobs, and increased cost of living, and "psychological" business conditions.

Do you know I'm not sorry I didn't last at the park policeman job. The duties wouldn't bother me so far as telling folk how far it is to the baby zebra cage, answering questions about the monument, trying to make lost kids tell their names, or holding up a gloved hand occasionally as a warning to speeding autos on the oiled asphalt. But when the sun, first flickering through the labeled trees then casting long shadows across the close cut grass, has finally left nothing but a pink tint out above Chicago; when the crying babies have been taken home with the lunch baskets; when Lake Michigan has turned from a light blue to pale green; when the foliage of the trees has gradually lost its detail and around the benches beneath the lilac bushes it is all perfumery and shadowy and still; when you see a couple, neither one of them hearing the toot of an automobile horn smack in front of them, coming along to take one of the benches; and when a little later you see him leaning clear over on the bench he has captured to point out a distant light on the lake, leaving his arm up on the back of the bench when it isn't at all necessary for him to point any more—well, I'll tell you, on a moonlight summer's night, I wouldn't want to keep on being a Lincoln park policeman on the Lake Shore drive, obliged to butt in all the time and keep things clubbed to a platonic basis.

Band Music and Wild Rose Perfume.

Chicago is cut off from a Lake Shore drive bench by the soft strains of a band concert and the perfume from wild rose beds. The shadows of night hover around to cut off curious eyes, and the waves splash just loud enough to keep the soft spoken words a secret. The park may have sixty-five policemen—each one swearing that there is no such thing as spooning on his beat—but it also has 000 acres, and there are going to be many stolen kisses while the uniformed enemy of Cupid has his back turned, and between the times when the automobile lamp throws its disturbing glare.

Here is a girl whose genuine blonde hair has been given a 1914 twist, and beside her a youth with brushed back locks as black as her earrings. Should she trace back her ancestors she would find that her parents spent their lovemaking evenings where the North sea splashed, while his made love when it was moonlight on the Seine. But they are not tracing ancestry. They are alone together in Lincoln park, Chicago. That is what counts. Did they meet when he happened to pass her counter in the big store, or was it at his moving picture show? He still speaks a little broken and so does she, but they are saying little to each other, and that little both can fully understand.

There is plenty of room on the bench, but you would never know it.

Would you come in between them at such a time with a club—right while he is hinting about a bungalow "where the red, red roses grow?"

Just Loves to Look at Waves.

The lake is very dark blue now. Almost to the faint horizon the electric lights of a steamboat are seen gliding, and in the sky is a jagged trail of smoke. It is not a real young couple on the stone settee, and they are both so far behind the styles that neither of them wear straw hats coming down to the tops of their ears. It is not brilliant vaudeville repartee that passes between them. They are looking out at the water.

"I just love to look at waves," she comments. "I think it's just swell, don't you?"

"M-h-h-m," he answers.

He is a telephone repairer who met her one morning when he was up in the office where she was busy at a typewriter. You can tell that the glamour of "Yours of the 16th inst. at hand" and the caféteria lunches has died out for her fully six years back. She has known a lot of hot days and cold days and drizzly days and lonely days, but a summer evening, with the band playing and the moon shining on the waves and the breeze full of wild rose perfume, and a big tanned fellow with his arm up over the bench behind her—well—(you know you could come right up onto a couple like that and pull off an insane Fourth of July celebration and they wouldn't hear you. There have been park spooners who have been known to sit on a bench underneath an umbrella and keep on calling each other "poogy woos," with it pouring down rain. That is one reason why park policemen have to carry clubs.) Well, I readjusted my cap and brushed an imaginary speck from the sleeve of my brass buttoned blue coat, simply used my club for twirling purposes, and passed on.

No Place for a Park Policeman.

Up by the high bridge a trio of negroes perched in the prow of a steamboat, waiting for a crowd to take back downtown, were singing "Sail On, O, Tennessee Moon" to the accompaniment of stringed instruments. Every time the boat rocked with the waves the electric lights along the double decks danced in reflection on the waters.

They were sitting on the concrete wall—this couple. She had on a white straw hat with white feathers on it, and there was a ruffle on her skirt which she nervously pressed out from time to time.

"Don't you get kind of tired of it behind the cigar stand sometimes?" he was asking.

"I don't know," she stalled, again smoothing out the ruffle on her skirt.

A higher wave than usual splashed over the cement bench.

"I know I'm getting awfully tired of having no place to go to but the hotel when I come in off the road," he answered.

A bird flitted through the air, dipped down to the waves, and flitted on again.

I had seen the same couple earlier in the afternoon, and I might have known by the way he was then holding her by the arm, about what line of talk would take place later when the moon came up. I can't describe it exactly, but he had acted more as if he was guiding her across the newly placed top girder of a twenty story steel construction job instead of merely through the crowd that was watching the diving sea lions. And as the harmony of the cornets and the clarinets and the other tender toned instruments had wafted "Lucia di Lammermoor" through the foliage, making the sunshiny Sunday afternoon seem almost unreal, her moist eyes had looked right on through the tops of the trees to where the clouds hovering over Clark street had the very shapes and tints that they do on a stage curtain.

There was still that look in her eyes that said plainly enough that she didn't want to stand behind the cigar counter of a hotel the rest of her life.

It was no place for a park policeman.

Turn in Outfit with Shake of Head.

Down by the bridge where the lake runs into the lagoon I thought I was going to have the inclination to use my club at last and do my full duty as a park policeman. They were leaning over the iron bridge and he had his arm around the little woman, something scandalous. In fact I had my club poised as I sneaked up on them.

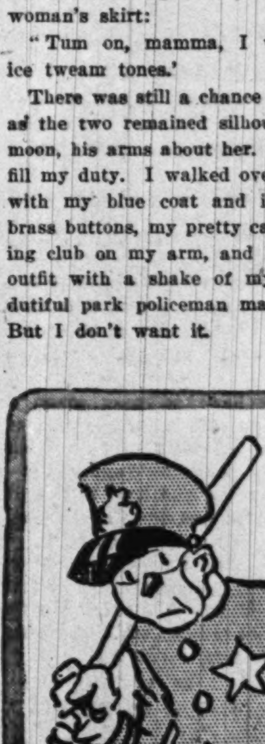
"It's been a long time, ain't it, honey, since we've been down along here?" he was half whispering in that low tone which is so aggravating to the eavesdropper on spooners.

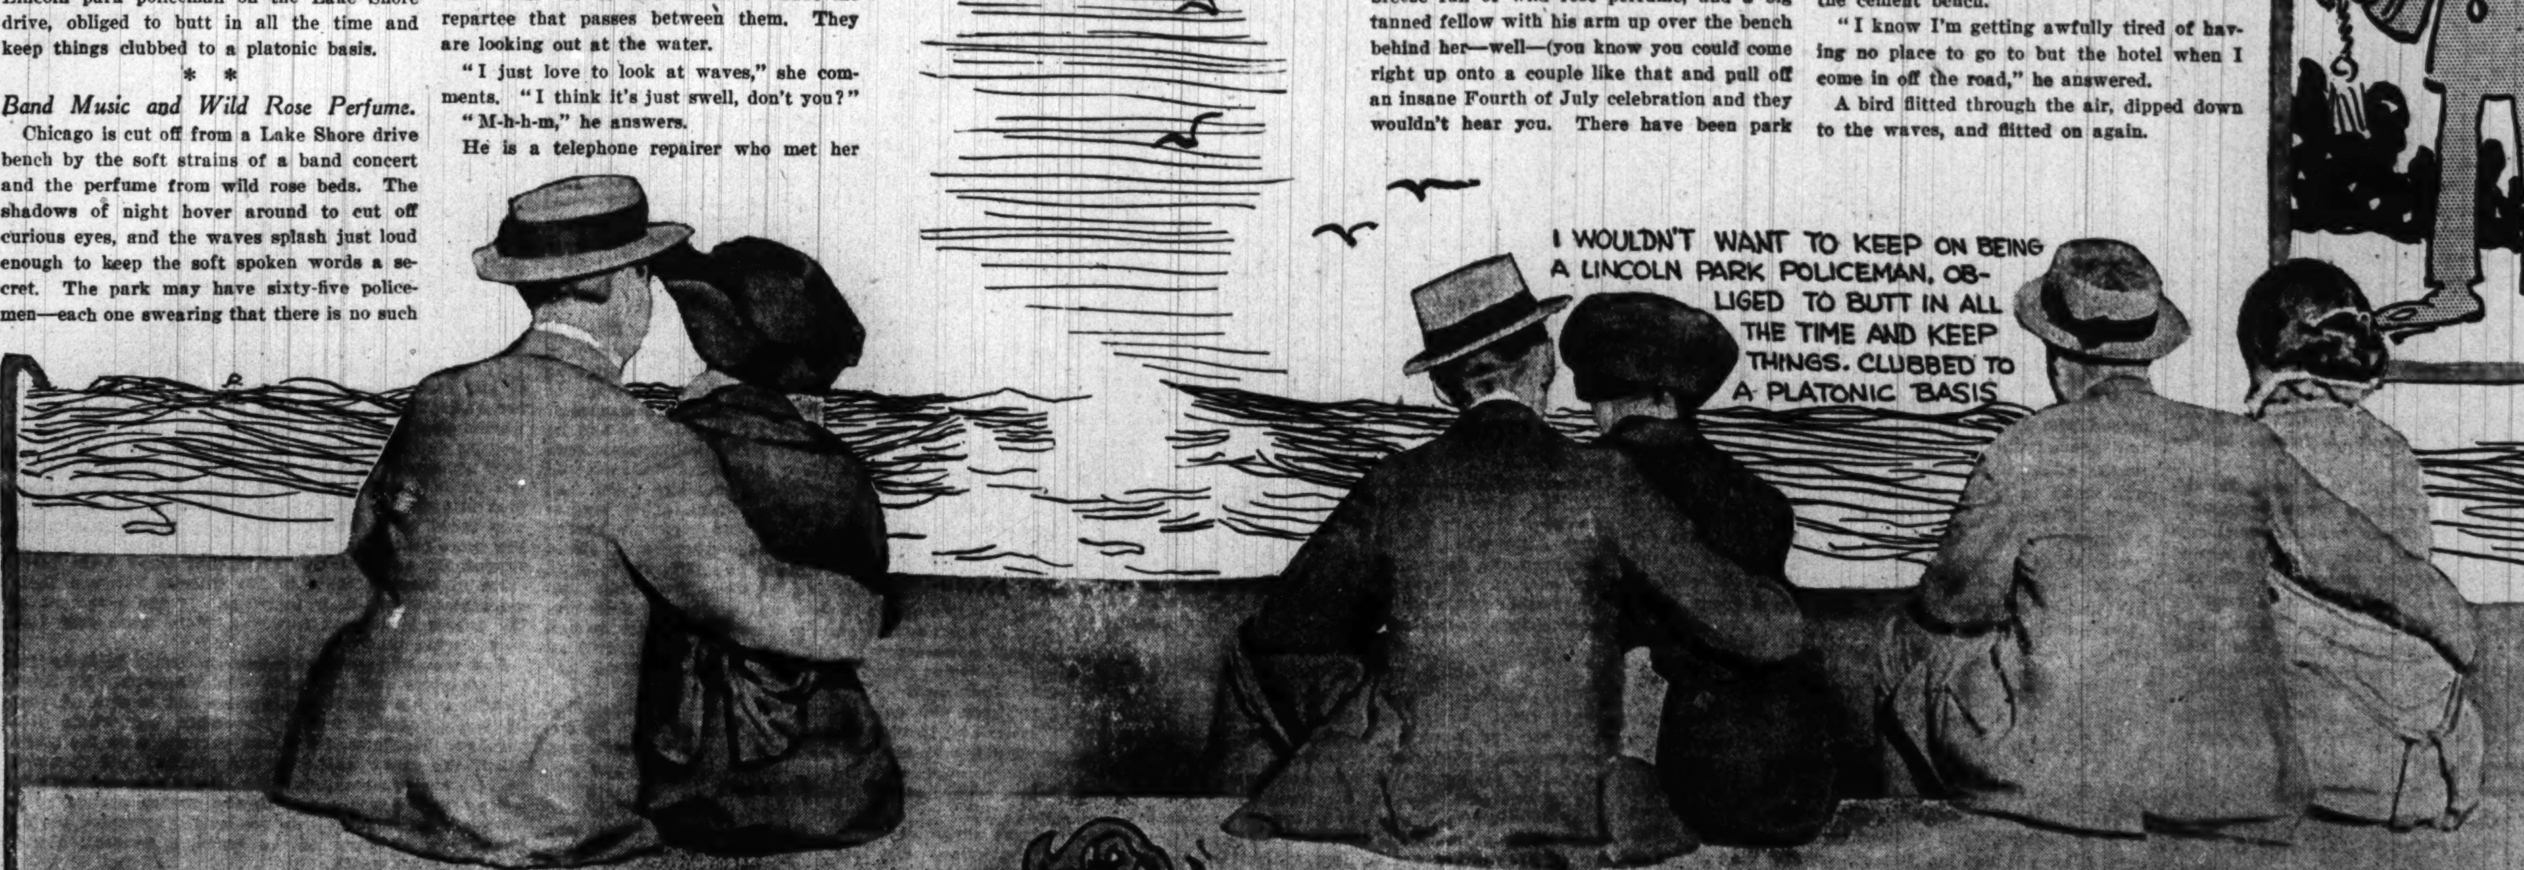
"Do you know," he went on, without waiting for her answer, "the moon coming up this way on the water makes me think again of when we used to first come out here and I didn't know you so very well. There hasn't been so much romance after all, has there, honey? It's been a pretty fierce fight for us some of the time, but do you know I feel toward you just as I did those first nights when we used to come out here and I was afraid to put my arm clear around you, like I've got it now. Hold still just a minute, I'm going to kiss you—not one of those kisses just because I think I have to, but one of those old kisses. . . . There!"

A fellow beat me to it on the interruption game. He wasn't more than 4 years old, but he was old enough to say as he tugged at the woman's skirt:

"Tum on, mamma, I want one of 'ose ice tweam tones.'

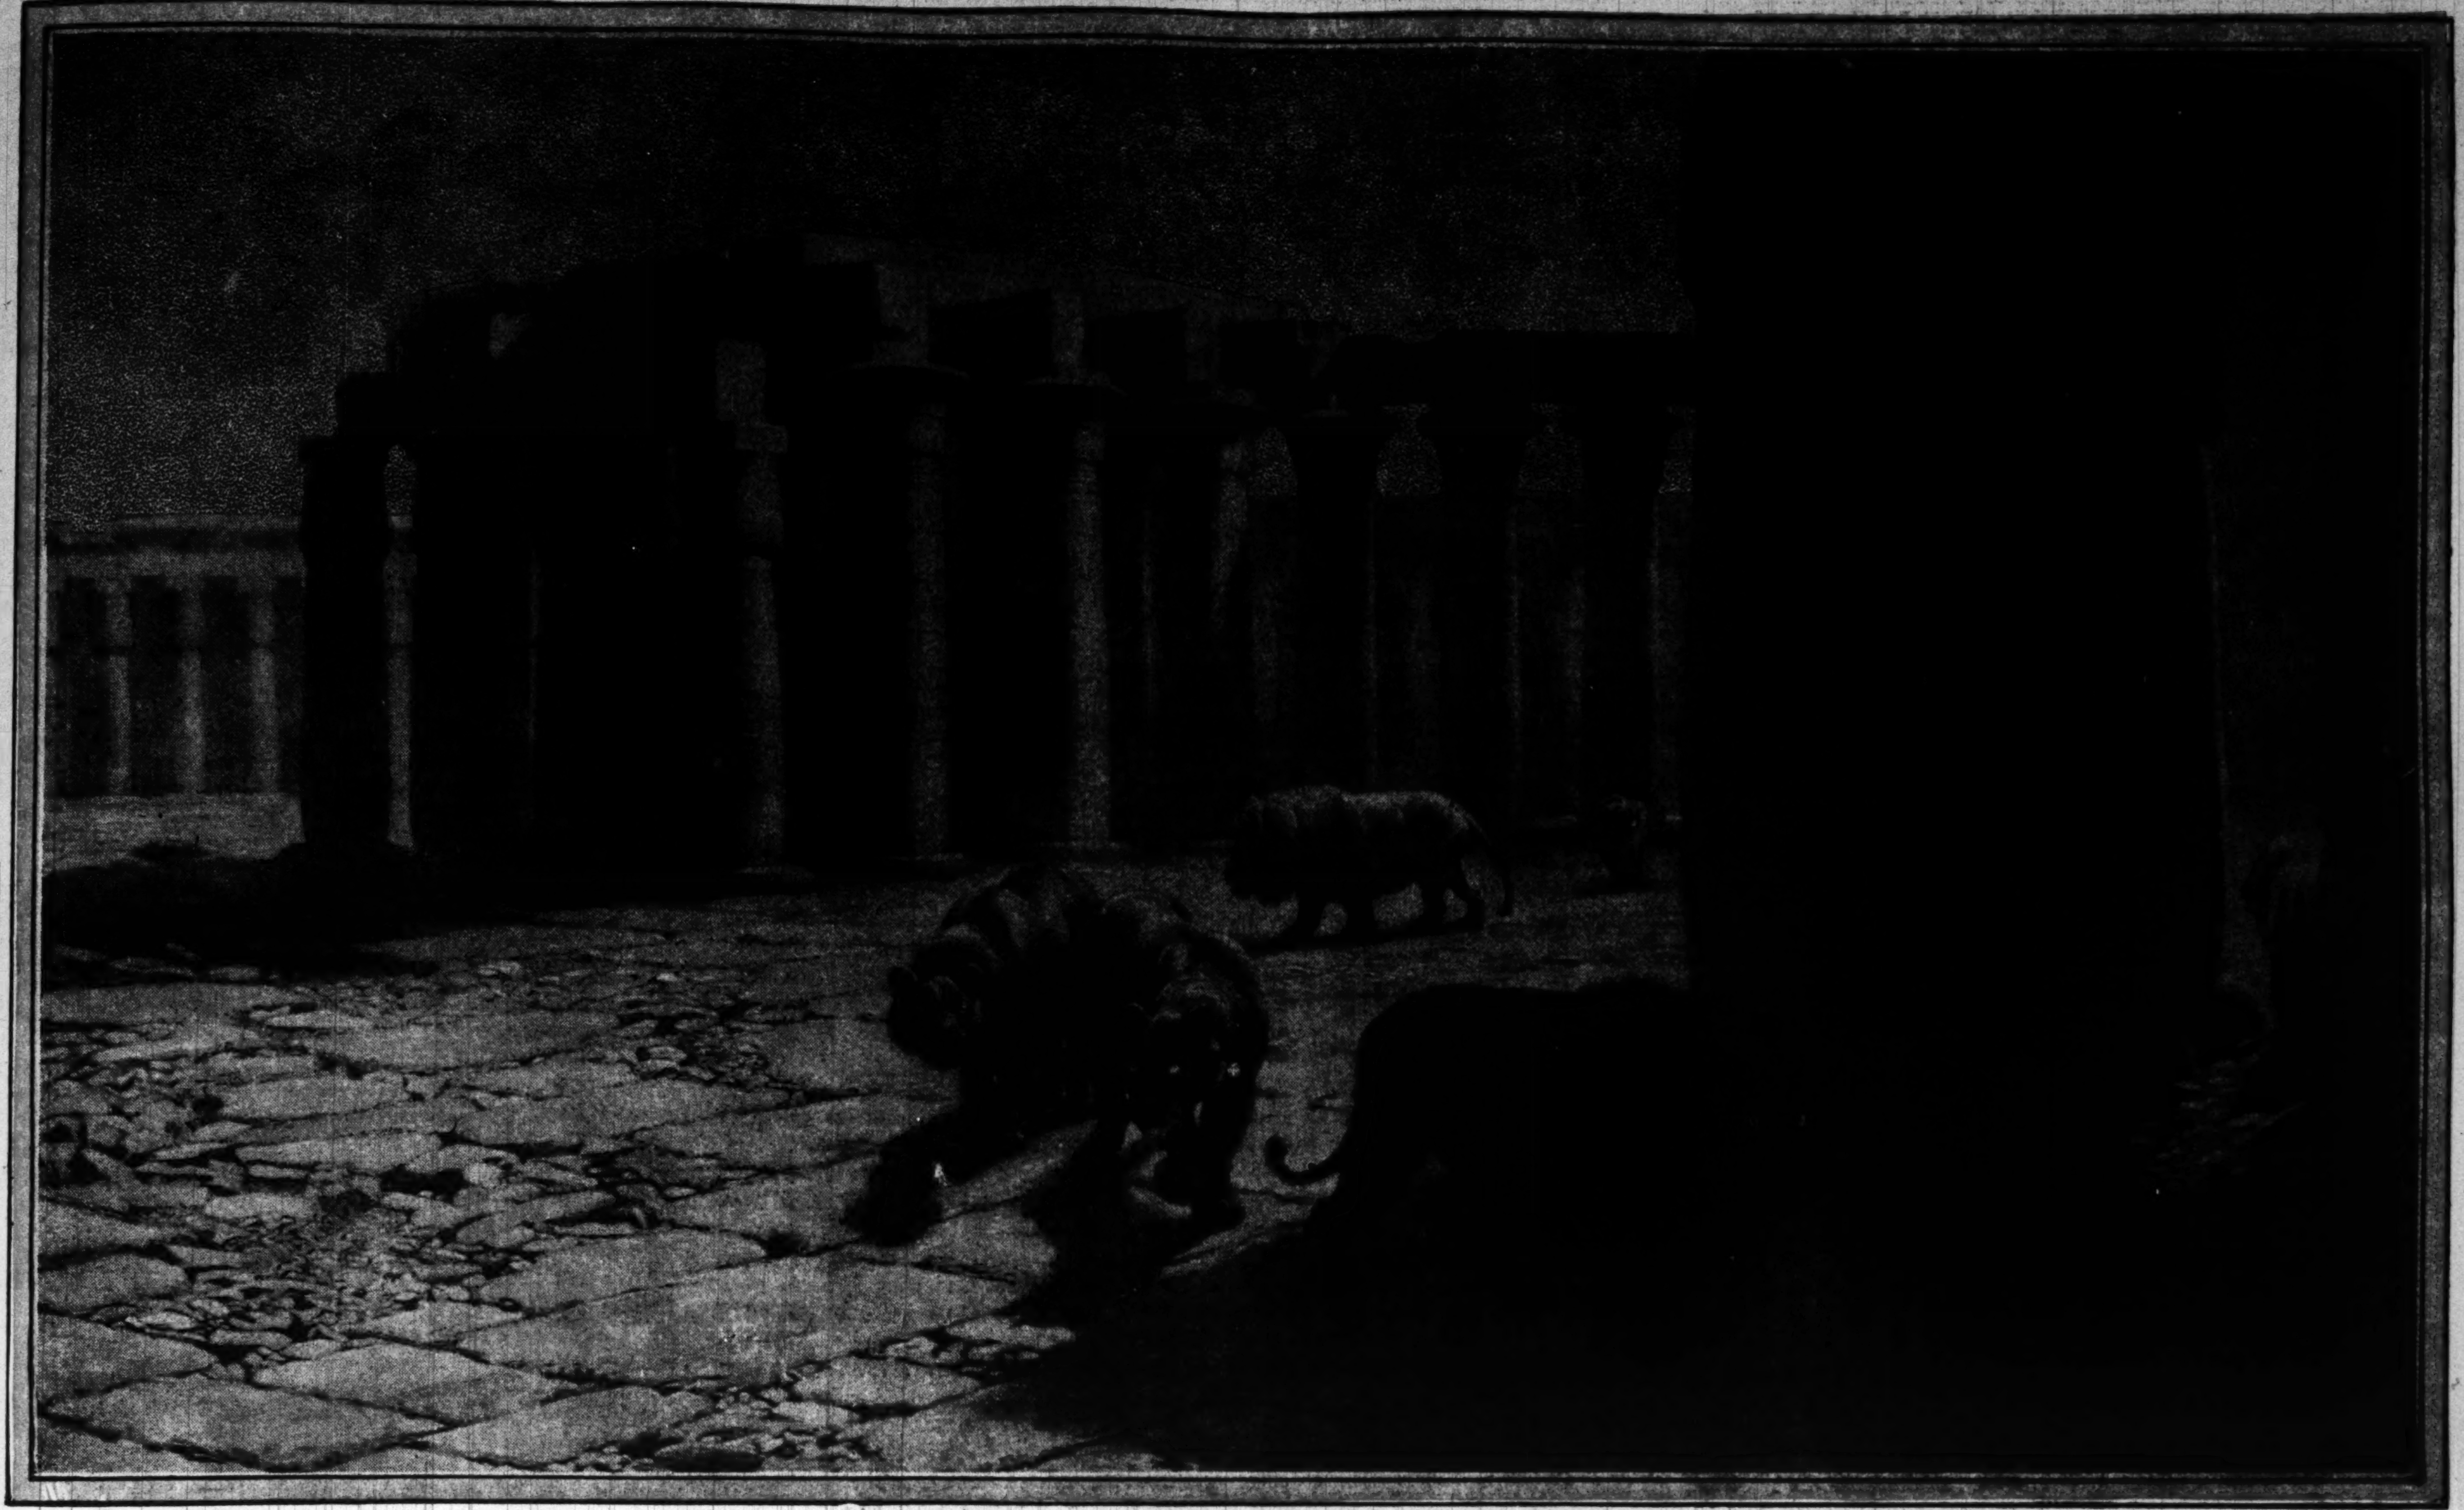
There was still a chance for me to butt in, as the two remained silhouetted against the moon, his arms about her. But I didn't fulfill my duty. I walked over to headquarters with my blue coat and its brass buttons, my pretty cap and my glistening club on my arm, and I turned over the outfit with a shake of my head. Being a dutiful park policeman may be a good job. But I don't want it.





I WOULDN'T WANT TO KEEP ON BEING A LINCOLN PARK POLICEMAN, OBLIGED TO BUTT IN ALL THE TIME AND KEEP THINGS CLUBBED TO A PLATONIC BASIS

"POMPOUS PALACES--- HAD BECOME BUT AS DENS FOR WILD BEASTS TO REVEL IN"



The Night Watch, By Briton Reviere

Today the lion and the lesser wild beasts stalk across the drifted earth that covers the greatest cities of the ancient world or wander through the tottering ruins of the glorious edifices that were to stand for ever as monuments to great, conquering races. Persepolis, the all-powerful, with whose strength no city could compete; Nineveh, the most warlike city in history, whose ruins indicate a city greater in extent than London; Babylon, the one-time metropolis of the world; Tyre, the greatest maritime power of the ancient world—all have fallen.

They say the lion and the lizard keep
The courts where Jamshyd gloried and drank deep.
—From the Rubaiyat of Omar Khayyam.

YOU have often seen the paintings—lions prowling at night among the ruins of dead cities. Where were these cities that once attracted multitudes of human beings within their gates? What were these cities like? How rich were they? How great? Why did they fall?

Persepolis, "where Jamshyd gloried and drank deep," stood in the Persian plain of Merdusht, about thirty-five miles northeast of Shiraz. Some historians say that to attempt any guess of the period when this city rose from the plains would be useless, but they are satisfied that in those old days Persepolis had a glory in which no existing city could compare. The ruins that were left—vast, solitary, mutilated pillars which have witnessed the lapse of countless generations—give us sufficient hint of the wonders of Jamshyd's throne, and the strange inscriptions tell us much of the people who dwelt there so long ago.

That there were gay times in the fortified palace which Jamshyd built on the platform, reached by a vast double flight of steps, perhaps the finest in the world, is indicated by the bas-reliefs—designs that do not display a religious procession but a train of men and boys bearing presents to the king.

Where Wine Was Discovered.

And it was beneath those tall white columns, standing up before the first streak of day in naked majesty, that, according to a tradition, wine was first discovered. The prince, it seems, was immoderately fond of grapes and desired to preserve some, which were placed in a large vessel and lodged in a vault for future use. When the vessel was opened the grapes had fermented. Their juice, in this state, was so acid that the king believed it must be poisonous. He had some vessels filled with it and "poison" written upon each; these were placed in his bedroom. It happened that one of his ladies was affected with nervous headaches. The pain distracted her so much that she desired death, and observing a vessel with the word "poison" written on it she took it and swallowed the contents. The wine, for such it had become, overpowered the woman, who fell into a sound sleep and awoke much refreshed. Delighted with the remedy, she repeated the dose so often that the monarch's "poison" was all drunk. He soon discovered this and forced the woman to confess what she had done. A quantity of wine was made and Jamshyd and all his court drank of the new beverage.

This discovered drink later in history was largely responsible for the loss of the palace, for, according to Diodorus, it was when Alexander's men, after conquering the city, were almost mad with drunkenness that the suggestion of an intoxicated courtesan, Thais, was taken up to set fire to the palace.

"It would be a matter of joy," the woman announced in gay tone, "if, masked as I am, and in order to end this festival nobly, I were permitted to burn this magnificent palace."

Her announcement was spread abroad and coming to the ears of the young men one cried out, "Come on, bring firebrands!"

Thereupon multitudes of firebrands were got together, and all the women that played on musical instruments which were at the feast were called for. The king, with songs, pipes, and flutes, led the way to this expedition, contrived and managed by this courtesan, who, next after the king, threw the first firebrand into the palace. This precedent was followed by the rest. Alexander soon repented the destructive deed and gave orders for extinguishing the flames. But he was too late and the palace was laid to ruins.

Assyria's Warlike Capital.

Then there was Nineveh, the most warlike city known to history, the site of which is marked by the modern town of Mosul. Opinions vary regarding the size of this ancient city, which was the capital of Assyria during the whole period of that nation's grandeur. William Burnet Wright explains how the kings of Assyria had a mania for building palaces. Each of the monarchs built one for himself, located it a few miles from the palace of his predecessor, fortified and made it his capital. A new city grew up around each royal residence, and when the suburbs of these several cities touched each other they formed a vast metropolis, covering a space larger than London.

And Nineveh was as rich as it was vast. The shops were furnished with all the appliances of luxury which the world could supply. The men wore embroidered mantles and carried canes topped with delicate carvings in ivory, agate, or emerald.

The palace of Sennacherib stood upon an enormous artificial mound which covered a hundred acres. It has been estimated that the labor of 20,000 men for six years was required to raise the mound alone, and an inscription of Sennacherib boasts that he employed captives from Chaldea in rebuilding the palace upon it.

The palace itself was the largest, excepting only the great structure at Karnak, known to have been built by man. The magnificent gateways, approached by flights of marble steps, were flanked with towers and guarded by the perpetually recurring winged bulls and lions. The glory of the palace was in the majestic halls it contained. These were of unknown height and varied in length between one and two hundred feet. Their floors were of marble inlaid with metal arabesques.

Captive Kings Draw Chariot.

Not many years before the fall of Nineveh a military pageant moved through its streets. The army had returned from a successful campaign in the east. The king visited the temple to give thanks in the presence of all his army. "We can conceive the sight," says Wright. "The soldiers marched with scarlet shields and glittering spears. The splendid war chariots, the terror of the old world, the artillery of ancient warfare, appeared in line. They were of iron, richly embossed, and gorgeous with dashes of vermilion. Each bore a nobleman armed with bow and quiver and protected by a huge shield held before him. The charioteer stood behind and guided the steeds by long leathern reins.

At last, when every nation from Egypt and Lydia to Persia had been outraged by the warriors of Nineveh, the inevitable end came. A coalition was formed against the country. For more than two years the city resisted. Then occurred an unprecedented flood in the Tigris. The enemy still pressed the siege. The river wall of the palace was undermined and fell. Nineveh was taken. The king fired his own palace and perished in the flames.

Centuries later, when Alexander fought the battle of Arbela within sight of the mounds of Nineveh, he saw no suggestion of a city there. Nine centuries after that the battle which prepared western Asia to become Mohammedan was fought upon the site of Nineveh, and neither of the contending armies knew they were treading above the streets of a buried metropolis. A millennium later Niebuhr, in charge of an expedition sent to explore the ruins of Nineveh, passed over its site without a suspicion that he had reached it.

All Roads Led to Babylon.

Babylon was old before Nineveh was born. Inscriptions have identified it as the Babel of Genesis and record a tradition of the tower builded there which varies little from that contained in the Bible. During the whole period of Ninevite supremacy Babylon ranked as an important city. As the source of science, literature, and especially religion, she held precedence over Nineveh.

It was here that Nebuchadnezzar reigned, and he left Babylon the metropolis of the world. "Thither," says Wright, "Egypt sent for sun dials and water clocks. Thence the women of the orient received the fashions, as Christendom follows the fashions set by Paris. From Babylon the Greeks received the tables on which their science was based, and Lydia the lutes on which she learned at last to excel her teacher.

"To Babylon Egypt sent her finest gold and her choicest ivory, to Tyre her most gorgeous dyes, to India her largest pearls, to Arabia her choicest spices, to Media her agates and emeralds, which nowhere else could be so finely cut. The entire vintage of Helbon was reserved for the court of Babylon, as that of Champagne was monopolized by Napoleon. Thither Greece sent her most beautiful slaves, for in Babylon a dancing girl might be sold for the price of a year's pay to a thousand soldiers. The great Babylonian banking house of the Egibi, whose checks and receipts in clay still exist in great numbers, occupied for five generations at Babylon the place filled in Europe by the Rothschilds since Waterloo."

But excess of luxury soon sapped the strength of Babylon's manhood. Attracted by its wealth, the Medes took possession of the city and its influence rapidly declined.

* *

Tyre's Pride Her Ruin.

Various are the opinions concerning the origin of Tyre and the date when it was founded. According to Herodotus the city was founded about the year 2763 before the Christian era. Before the captivity of the Jews in Babylon Tyre was the greatest maritime city in the world, its situation—where the eastern Mediterranean washed the shores of Phoenicia—and its industry having raised it to the sovereignty of the sea. From the extreme parts of India, Persia and Arabia to the western coast, from Ethiopia and Egypt on the south, to Scythia on the north, all nations contributed to the increase of its power, splendor, and wealth. Everything that was useful, and all that was curious, magnificent and precious was there to be sold. Every article of commerce was brought to its markets. Tyre was known, indeed, as the city of merchants.

Tyre was besieged by Nebuchadnezzar in the twenty-first year of his reign, Irhobel being its king. After seven years he made himself master of it, not without his troops suffering incredible hardships; insomuch that Ezekiel had predicted, "Every head was made bald and every head was peeled." Previous, however, to the taking of it a multitude of its inhabitants quitted the city and took up their abode, with the greatest part of their effects, in the neighboring island, half a mile from the shore, and in that spot they laid the foundation of a new city. When, therefore, Nebuchadnezzar took possession of the town he found little in it to reward him for the trouble, danger, and expense he had been to during the siege, which lasted thirteen years. He razed the city to the foundations and it was afterwards known only as a village by the name of Palae-Tyrus. The new Tyre rose to greater power than the former one.

Prophet Foretells Second Fall.

The new town, nevertheless, was not remitted of misfortune, for the inhabitants were made slaves of, compelled to admit a foreign yoke for the space of seventy years. After the expiration of that time they were restored, according to the prophecy of Isaiah, to the possession of their ancient privileges, with the liberty of having a king of their own, and that liberty they enjoyed until the time of Alexander.

At that period Tyre had again become an exceedingly large city, and because of the vast commerce she carried on with all nations she was called "Queen of the Sea." She boasted of having first invented navigation and taught mankind the art of braving the waves and wind. She had risen from the desolation into which she had fallen, but with prosperity came pride and vainglory, luxury and voluptuousness. Another prophet, therefore, foretold to her a second ruin.

Tyre, it appears, had profited nothing from the first lesson. She was careless of the threat that another destruction was announced against her. Defended by strong fortifications and surrounded on all sides by the sea, she feared nothing, neither God nor man. Isaiah, therefore, brings to her recollection the ruin that had befallen them in the days of Nebuchadnezzar and the destruction which afterwards had fallen on Babylon itself. "The inhabitants had raised pompous palaces to make their names immortal, but all these fortifications had become but as dens for wild beasts to revel in." This fall was to come from Macedon.

Tyrians Sold into Slavery.

Alexander besieged Tyre seven months, during which time he erected vast mounds of earth, plied it with his engines, and invested it on the side next the sea with two hundred galleys. When the Tyrians saw this fleet they were astonished, because it greatly exceeded what they had any reason to expect.

According to Plutarch the siege terminated in the following manner: Alexander had permitted his main body to rest themselves after some great fatigues they had undergone and ordered only some small parties to keep the Tyrians in play. In the meantime Alexander's principal soothsayer asserted that the city would be taken that month. As the day happened to be the last of the month this prediction was received with great ridicule. It was then that Alexander ordered that the day should not be called the thirtieth but the twenty-eighth of the month. At the same time he called out his forces by sound of trumpet and made a much more vigorous assault than he had at first intended.

The attack was violent and those who were left in the camp quitted it to have a share in it and to support their fellow soldiers, insomuch that the Tyrians were forced to give in and the city was taken that very day, seven thousand being slain.

The king, with many of the principal men, took refuge in the temple of Hercules. The lives and liberties of these were spared, but all others taken, to the number of thirteen thousand, were sold to slavery for the benefit of the conquering army. The city was burned to the ground.

The throne of nations fallen; obscured in dust
Even yet majestical. The solemn scene

READ THE CONDITIONS.

THE SUNDAY TRIBUNE prints today another installment of "The Million Dollar Mystery," a mystery story for the solution of which a prize of $10,000 will be given by the Thanhouser Film corporation. The story will run twenty-two consecutive weeks in THE SUNDAY TRIBUNE. As each chapter appears in THE TRIBUNE a two reel film corresponding with it may be seen in the various moving picture theaters. By this arrangement with the Thanhouser Film corporation it will be possible for TRIBUNE readers both to read the story and see the moving picture of it as it progresses from week to week. The first film was released on June 22. Each week another will be released until Monday, Nov. 16. The last chapter of the story will appear in THE TRIBUNE on Sunday, Nov. 22.

CONDITIONS GOVERNING THE CONTEST.

The prize of $10,000 will be won by the man, woman, or child who writes the most acceptable solution of the mystery, from which the last two reels of motion picture drama will be made and the last two chapters of the story written by Harold MacGrath.

Solutions may be sent to the Thanhouser Film corporation, either at Chicago or New York, any time up to midnight, Jan. 14. They must be received not later than that date. This allows four weeks after the first appearance of the last film releases and three weeks after the last chapter is published in THE SUNDAY TRIBUNE in which to submit solutions. The Chicago address of the Thanhouser company is 166 West Washington street and the New York City address is 71 West Twenty-third street.

A board of three judges will determine which of the many solutions received is the most acceptable.

The judges are to be Harold MacGrath, Lloyd Lonergan, author of the scenario, and Miss Mae Tinee of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE.

The judgment of this board will be absolute and final. Nothing of a literary nature will be considered in the decision nor given any preference in the selection of the winner of the $10,000 prize. The last two reels, which will give the most acceptable solution to the mystery, will be presented in the theaters having this feature as soon as it is possible to produce same. The story corresponding to these motion pictures will appear in this newspaper coincidentally, or as soon after the appearance of the pictures as practicable. With the last two reels will be shown the pictures of the winner, his or her home, and other interesting features.

Solutions to the mystery must not be more than 100 words long. Here are some questions to be kept in mind in connection with the mystery as an aid to a solution:

No. 1—What becomes of the millionaire?

No. 2—What becomes of the $1,000,000?

No. 3—Whom does Florence marry?

No. 4—What becomes of the Russian countess?

Nobody connected either directly or indirectly with "The Million Dollar Mystery" will be considered as a contestant.

SYNOPSIS OF PREVIOUS CHAPTERS—

Stanley Hargreave, millionaire, having joined what he believed to be a great socialist movement, finds that in reality he has been trapped by the Black Hundred. After a miraculous escape from the den of the brilliant thieves he lives the life of a recluse for eighteen years. One night, surrendering to a restless spirit of rebellion, Hargreave enters a Broadway restaurant and there comes face to face with the Black Hundred's leader, Braine.

After the meeting, during which neither man recognizes the other, Hargreave hurries to his magnificent Riverdale home and lays plans for making his escape from the country. He writes a letter to the girls' school in New Jersey where eighteen years before he had mysteriously left on the doorstep of the institution his tiny baby daughter—named "Florence Gray" by the note attached to the handle—and arranges that she be sent to him at once. He also pays a visit to the hangar of a daredevil aviator.

Braine and members of his band surround Hargreave's home at night, but as they enter the house the watchers outside see a balloon leave the roof. The safe is found empty—the million which Hargreave was known to have drawn that day gone. Then one of the men outside announced that he had punctured the balloon and sent it to the bottom of the ocean.

The next day Florence arrives from the girls' school and is greeted by the butler, Jones, whom Hargreave has taken into full confidence. She is later visited by Countess Olga, Braine's companion, who claims to be a relative. Two bogus detectives also call, but they find themselves thwarted by Norton, a newspaper man, who happens to be on the scene at the right moment.

Braine hits upon a scheme to lure Florence from her home. He tosses a note into her room, signing it "Father," and asks that the girl come to him. Florence steals away to learn that she has walked into a trap, but she throws a lighted lamp to the floor and makes her escape during the confusion.

CHAPTER V.

THE PROBLEM OF THE SEALED BOX.

"GONE!"

Jones kept saying to himself that he must strive to be calm, to think, think. Despite all his warnings, the warnings of Norton, she had tricked them and run away. It was maddening. He wanted to rave, tear his hair, break things. He tramped the hall. It would be wasting time to send for the police. They would only putter about fruitlessly. The Black Hundred knew how to arrange these abductions.

How had they succeeded in doing it? No one had entered the house that day without his being present. There had been no telephone call he had not heard the gist of, nor any letters he had not first glanced over. How had they done it? Suddenly into his mind flashed the remembrance of the candlelight under Florence's door the night before. In a dozen bounds he was in her room, searching drawers, paper boxes, baskets. He found nothing. He returned in despair to Susan, who, during all this turmoil, had sat as if frozen in her chair.

"Speak!" he cried. "For God's sake, say something, think something! Those devils are likely to torture her, hurt her!" He leaned against the wall, his head on his arm.

When he turned again he was calm. He walked with bent head toward the door, opened it and stood upon the threshold for a space. Across the street a shadow stirred, but Jones did not see it. His gaze was attracted by something which shone dimly white on the walk just beyond the steps. He ran to it. A crumpled letter, unaddressed. He carried it back to the house, smoothed it out and read its contents. Florence in her haste had dropped the letter.

"Here!" he cried, holding out an automatic. "If any one comes in that you don't know, shoot! Don't ask questions, shoot!"

"I'm afraid!" she breathed with difficulty.

"Afraid?" he roared at her. He put the weapon in her hand. It slipped and thudded to the floor. He stooped for it and slammed it into her lap. "You love your life and honor. You'll know how to shoot when the time comes. Now, attend to me. If I'm not back here by 10 o'clock, turn this note over to the police. If you can't do that, then God help us all!" And with that he ran from the house.

Susan eyed the revolver with growing terror. For what had she left the peace and quiet of Miss Farlow's: assassination, robbery, thieves, and kidnapers? She wanted to shriek, but her throat was as dry as paper. Gingerly she touched the pistol. The cold steel sent a thrill of fear over her. He hadn't told her how to shoot it!

Two blocks down the street, up an alley, was the garage wherein Hargreave had been wont to keep his car. Toward this Jones ran with the speed of a track athlete. There might be half a dozen taxicabs about, but he would not run the risk of engaging any one of them. The Black Hundred was capable of anticipating his every movement.

The shadow across the street stood undecided. At length he concluded to give Jones ten minutes in which to return. If he did not return within that time, the watcher would go up to the drug store and telephone for instructions.

But Jones did not come back.

"Where's Howard?" he demanded.

"Hello, Jones; what's up?"

"Howard, get that car out at once."

"Out she comes. Wait till I give her radiator a bucket of water. Gee!" whispered Howard, whom Hargreave often used as his chauffeur, "get on to his nibs! First time I ever saw him awake. I wonder what's doing? You never know what's back of those mummy-faced headwaiters. . . . All right, Jones!"

THAT NIGHT THERE WAS A MEETING OF THE ORGANIZATION CALLED THE BLACK HUNDRED.

The chauffeur jumped into the car and Jones took the seat beside him.

"Where to?"

"Number 78 . . ." and the rest of it trailed away, smothered in the violent thunder of the big six's engines.

During the car's flight several policemen hailed it without success. Down this street, up that, round this corner, fifty miles an hour; and all the while Jones shouted: "Faster, faster!"

Within twelve minutes from the time it left the garage, the car stopped opposite to No. 78 Grove street, and Jones got out.

"Wait here, Howard. If several men come rushing out, or I don't appear within ten minutes, fire your gun a couple of times for the police. I don't want them if we can manage without. They'd only bungle."

"All right, Mr. Jones," said the chauffeur. He had, in the past quarter of an hour, acquired a deep and lasting regard for the butler chap. He was a regular fellow, for all his brass buttons.

As Jones reached the curb, Florence came forth as if on invisible wings. Jones caught her by the arm. She flung him aside with a strength he had not dreamed existed in her slim body.

"Florence, I am Jones!"

She stopped, recognized him, and without a word ran across the street to the automobile and climbed into the tonneau. Jones followed immediately.

"Home!"

The car shot up the dimly lighted street, shone palely for a second under the corner lamp, and vanished.

"Ah, child, child!" groaned the man at her side, all the tenseness gone from his body. He was Jones again.

Still she did not speak but stared ahead with unseeing eyes.

No further reproach fell from the butler's lips. It was enough that God had guided him to her at the appointed moment assured that never again would she into any trap. Poor child! What said to her, done to her? How, name, had she escaped from them let anybody escape? Presently she come normal, and then she would tell

"What did they do to you?"

"He said he was my father. . . put his arms around me. . . . knew!"

"Knew what?"

"That he lied. I can't explain."

"Don't try."

Suddenly she laid her head butler's shoulder and cried. It was to hear youth weep in this fashion. put his arm about her, patted her, to console her.

"Horrible!" she murmured violent hiccoughs. "I was wrong, Forgive me!"

Unconsciously the arm sustaining her closer.

"Never mind," he consoled. "Tell what has happened. Go about as usual. let even Susan know. Whatever your father did was for your sake. He you to be happy, without a care in the

They found Susan still seated in the the automatic in her lap. She had in all this time!

Braine paced the apartment of the Perigoff from the living room to the and back, fully twenty times. From the Olga watched him nervously. He was

IT'S SOME STUNT! MAKING A BALLOO

THERE was a lot of excitement around the Thanhouser studio at New Rochelle, N. Y. Leo Stevens, the aeronaut, had just announced that at last the big bulb was filled with gas and that the ascension could take place that afternoon—the ascension, you know, that figures in "The Million Dollar Mystery" picture.

For three days we'd been waiting for that old balloon to get filled. After the Thanhouser company had built its own gas plant, there was some trouble or other about getting the right kind of a hose. So everything had taken longer than anybody had anticipated and Mr. Hansel, the director, had gotten to the point that, whenever he saw any one coming, he would cover his ears and run, for the first thing anybody said to him was:

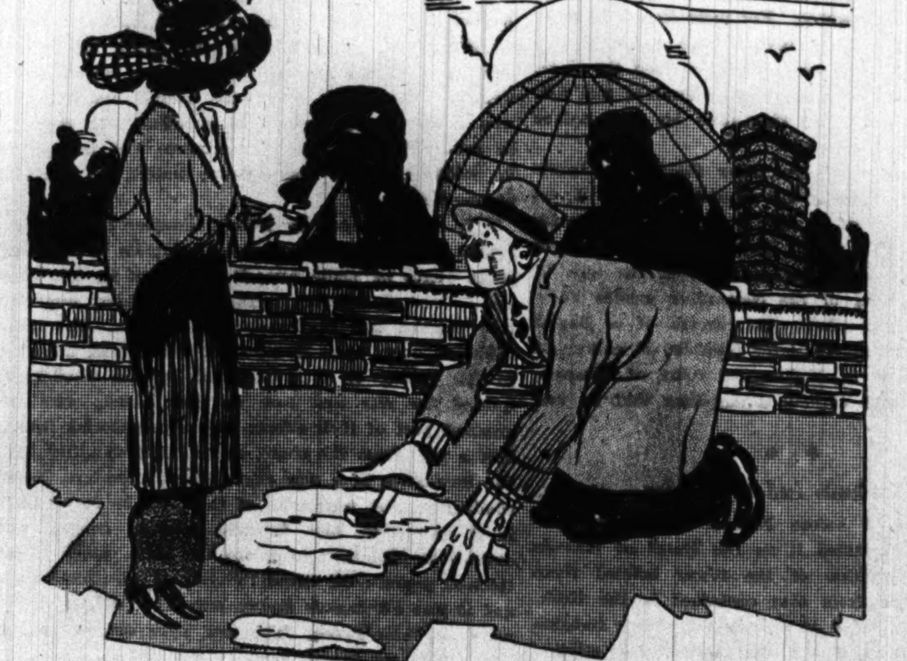
"When is the balloon going up?"

But the glad day arrived. A crowd of us were over in the studio watching a tragedy when suddenly Mr. Hansel burst in the door. Proceedings stopped. We all called:

"When——" And he shouted:

"Now!"

Whereat there was a howl and everybody not in the picture tore out of the door and into the machines, and over we went to the House of Mystery, where, painfully, one by one, we went up the scuttle and emerged on the roof, where we found a handsome actor in a wild state of excitement and expectation—for he it was, you know, who was to be carried away.



"Say, Miss Tinee, did you ever try sailing match boxes? No!"

We had all been chattering and gabbering to beat the band, but the minute we saw him it was like a funeral. For, it flashed across us all of a sudden, what a risk he was to take. He had his makeup on and he was stooping by a puddle of water—it had been raining—sailing match boxes. We stood and watched him silently for a minute. Then somebody—I think it was Fan Bourke—pulled himself together and said loudly and trying-to-be cheerfully: "'Low, boy, gee, isn't it great—hooray!"

The gentleman crouching by the puddle looked up. Seeing us, he stood up.

"Why, hello, folks!" he said. "Going to really come off, isn't it?"

They all chortled gleefully, but I sidled up to him and slipped my hand through his arm.

"Honestly, aren't you scared to death?" I wanted to know. He patted my hand.

"Not a bit!" he assured me. "Say, Miss Tinee, did you ever try sailing match boxes? No? Well, come on—I'll show you how. It's great sport. You see you stick this part up for the sail—there! Then you give it a push—understand? Then you sort of wiggle the water and it goes any way you want it. Get the combination?"

"Uh huh," I said, my eyes never leaving his carefully put on face. "Say, listen, I want to ask you something." He bent down toward me.

"You listen to me," he whispered. "Let's play with the match boxes until the big diddings dids, see? It'll help? The picture has to be taken, little girl. Help me to make it a good picture, will you?"

I smiled back at him, but I think it must have been a funny kind of a smile.

"Which way do you wiggle it to make it go south?" I asked, stooping. And he stooped, too, and we played with the match boxes for a long, long time.

Now, you see, if they had been going up from the ground, it would have been paratively easy. But the balloonist once he had started, had to stop roof and pick off the actor. That what he called a —— of a job! hadda do it. Funny what you when you gotta, isn't it?

There was a yell from terra firma all peered over. The big bag, filled with its allotted measure of air, had unloosened and was rising toward in the basket attached was a man was swearing bloody murder at the erty hands who, in some way or were not making good at the ropes.

Slowly it rose. Slowly it came us. (You have no notion how big a looks when it isn't away up in the The actor drew his hand slowly over and smiled at me. I smiled back. tore to the railing and watched the glanced about cautiously. On the corner he saw a policeman swinging his night stick. Otherwise the street was deserted. Braine proceeded jauntily down the street.

And yet, from the darkened doors of the house across the way, the figure of a man emerged and stood contemplating the windows of the Perigoff apartment. Suddenly the lights went out. The watcher made no effort to follow Braine. The knowledge he was after did not necessitate any such procedure.

Of course, Florence read the "personal." She took the newspaper at once to Jones, who smiled grimly.

"You see, I trust you."

"And so long as you continue to trust me no harm will befall you. You were left in my care by your father. I am to guard you at the expense of my life. Last night's affair was a miracle. The next time you will not find it so easy to escape."

Nor did she.

"There will be no next time," gravely. "But I am going to ask you a direct question. Is my father alive?"

The butler's brow puckered. "I have promised to say nothing, one way or the other."

She laughed.

"Why do you laugh?"

"I laugh because if he were dead there would be no earthly reason for your not saying so at once. But I hate money, the name of it, the sound of it, the sight of it. It is at the bottom of all wars and crimes. I despise it!"

"The root of all evil. Yet it performs many noble deeds. But never mind the money. Let us give our attention to this personal. Doubtless it originated in the same mind which conceived the letter. Your father would never have inserted such a personal. What! Give his enemies a chance to learn his secret? No. On the other hand I want you to show this personal to all you meet today, Susan, the reporter, to everybody. Talk about it. Say that you wonder what you shall do. Trust no one with your real thoughts."

"Not even you, Mr. Jones," thought the girl as she nodded.

"And tell them that you showed it to me and that I appeared worried."

That night there was a meeting of the organization called the Black Hundred. Braine asked if any one knew what the Hargreave butler looked like.

"I had a glimpse of him the other night; but being unprepared, I might not recognize him again."

Vroon described Jones minutely. Braine could almost see the portrait.

"Vroon, that memory of yours is worth a lot of money," was his only comment.

"I hope it will be worth more soon."

"I believe I'll be able to recognize Mr. Jones if I see him. Who is he and what is he?"

"He has been with Hargreave for fourteen years. There was a homicidal case in which Jones was active. Hargreave saved him. He is faithful and uncommunicative. Money will not touch him. If he does know where that million is, hot irons could not make him own up to it. The only way is to watch him, follow him, wait for the moment when he'll grow careless. No man is always on his mettle; he lets up sooner or later."

"He is being watched, as you know."

Vroon nodded approvingly. "The captain of the tramp steamer Orient, by the way, was seen with a roll of money. He was in one of the water front saloons, bragging how he had hoodwinked some one."

"Did he say where he'd got the cash?" asked Braine.

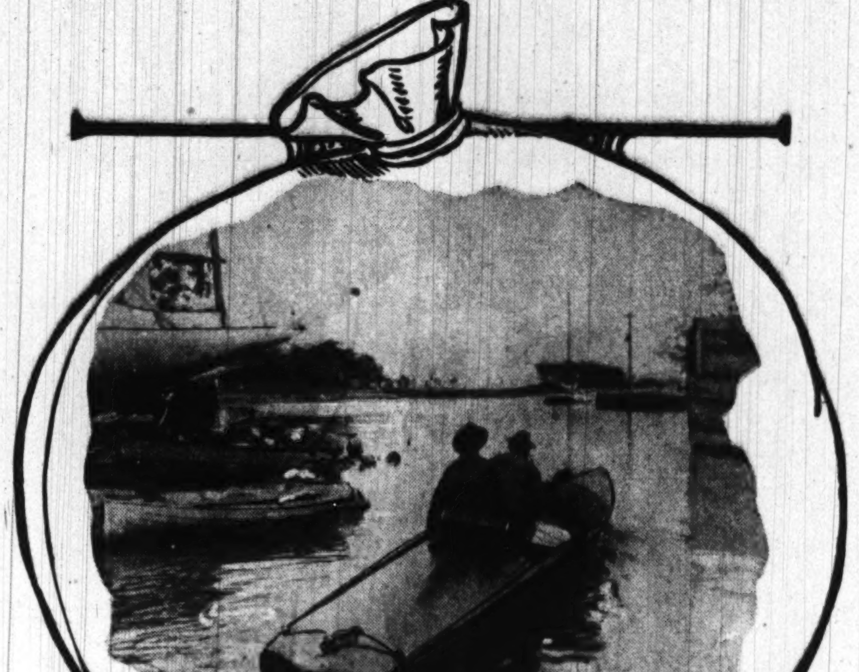
"They tried to pump him on that, but he shut up. Well, we have agreed that Felton shall watch from the street and Orloff from the window. Orloff will whistle if he sees Jones removing anything from any of the rooms. The rest will be left to Felton."

"And, Felton, my friend," said Braine softly—he always spoke softly when he was in a deadly humor—"Felton, you slept on duty the other night. Hargreave stole up, consulted Jones, and got away after knocking me down. The next failure will mean short shrift. Be warned!"

"I saw only you, sir. So help me. I was not asleep. I saw you run down the street after the taxicab. I did not see any one else."

Braine shrugged. "Remember what I said."

Felton bowed respectfully and made his exit. He wished in his soul that he might some day catch the master mind free of his eternal mask. It was an iron hand which ruled them and there were friends of his (Felton's) who had mysteriously vanished after a brief period of rebellion. The boss was a swell; probably belonged to clubs and society which he adroitly pilfered. The organization always had money. Whenever there was a desperate job to be undertaken, Vroon simply poured out the money necessary to promote it. Whenever Braine and Vroon became engaged in earnest conversation they talked Slav.



THERE FOLLOWED A THRILLING CHASE

Braine was never called by name here; the boss, simply that.

Well, 10 per cent of a million was a hundred thousand. This would be equally divided between the second ten of the Black Hundred. Another 10 per cent would go to eighty members; the balance would be divided between Vroon and the boss. But his soul rebelled at being ordered about like so much dirt under another man's foot. He would take his ten thousand and make the grand getaway.

The next afternoon the countess called upon Florence. Nothing was said about the adventure, and this fact created a vague unrest in the scheming woman's mind. She realized that she must play her cards more carefully than ever. Not the least distrust must be permitted to enter the child's head. Once that happened good-by to the wonderful emeralds. Was it that she really craved the stone? Was it not rather a venom acquired from the knowledge that this child's mother had won what she herself with all her cleverness, was not sure of—Braine's love? Did he really care for her or was she only the catspaw to pluck his hot chestnuts from the fire?

When Florence showed her the "personal," her vague doubts became instantly dissipated. The child would not have shown her the newspaper had there been any distrust on her part.

"My child, your father is alive, then?" animatedly.

"We don't know," sadly.

"Why, I should say that this proves it."

"On the contrary, it proves nothing of the sort, since I have yet to discover a treasure in this house. I have hunted in every nook, drawer; I've searched for panels, looked in trunks for false bottoms. Nothing, nothing! Ah, if I could only find it!"

"And what would you do with it?"

"Take it at once to some bank and offer the whole of it for the safe return of my father, every penny of it. I don't know what to do, which way to turn," tears gathering in her eyes and they were genuine tears, too. "There are millions in stocks and bonds and I cannot touch a penny of it because the legal documents have not been found. I can't even prove that I am his daughter, except for half an old bracelet, and my father's lawyers say that that would not hold in any court."

"You were born in St. Petersburg, my dear. Have the embassy there look up the birth registers."

"That would not put me into possession. Nothing but the return of my father will avail me. And there's a horrible thought always of my not being his real daughter."

"There's no doubt in my mind. I have only to recall Katrina's face to know whose child you are. But what will you live on?" Here was a far greater mixup than she had calculated upon. Supposing after all it was only a resemblance, that the child was not Hargreave's, a substitute just to blind the Black Hundred? To keep them away from the true daughter? Her mind grew bewildered over such possibilities. The single and only way to settle all doubts was to make this child a prisoner. If she was Hargreave's true daughter he would come out of his hiding.

She heard Florence answering her question: "There is a sum of ten or twelve thousand in the Riverdale bank, under the control of my father's butler. After that is gone, I don't know what will happen to us, Susan and me."

"The door of Miss Farlow's will always be open to you, Florence," replied Susan, with love in her eyes.

This interesting conversation was interrupted by the advent of Norton. He was always dropping in during the late afternoon hours. Florence liked him for two reasons. One was that Jones trusted him to a certain extent and the other was that . . . that she liked him. She finished this sentence in her heart defiantly.

Today he brought her a box of beautiful roses, and at the sight of them the countess smiled faintly. Set the wind in that quarter? She could have laughed. Here was her revenge against this meddler who took no particular notice of her while Florence was in the room. She would encourage him, poor grubbing newspaper writer, with his beggarly pittance! What chance had he of marrying this girl with millions within reach of her hand?

The peculiar thing about this was that Norton was entertaining the same thought at the same time: what earthly chance had he?

In the second story window of the house over the way there was a worried man. But when his glasses brought in range the true contents of the box he laughed sardonically.

"This watching is getting my goat. I smell a rat every time I see a shadow." He wiped the lenses of his opera glasses and proceeded to roll a cigaret.

When the countess and Norton went away Jones stole quietly up to Florence's room and threw up the curtain. Two round points of light flashed from the watcher's window, but the saturnine smile on Jones' lips was not observed. He went to the door, opened it cautiously, a hand to his ear. Then he closed the door, turned back the rug, and removed a section of the flooring. Out of this cavity he raised a box. There was lettering on the lid; in fact, the name of its owner, Stanley Hargreave. Jones replaced the flooring, tucked the box under his arm, and made his exit.

The man lounging in the shadow heard a faint whistle. It was the signal agreed upon. The man Felton ran across the street and boldly rang the bell. It was only then that Florence missed the ever present butler. She hesitated, then sent Susan to the door.

"I must see Mr. Jones upon vitally important business."

"He has gone out," said Susan, and very sensibly closed the door before Felton's foot succeeded in getting inside.

It was time to act. He ran around to the rear. The ladder convinced him that Jones had tricked him. He was wild with rage. He was over the wall in an instant. Away down the back street his eye discovered his man in full flight. He gave chase. As he came to the corner he was nearly knocked over by a man coming the other way.

"Who are you bumping into?" growled Felton.

"Not so fast, Felton!"

"Who the devil are you?"

The stranger made a sign which Felton instantly recognized.

"Quick! What has happened?"

"Jones has the million and is making his getaway. See him hiking toward the water front?"

The two men began to run.

There followed a thrilling chase. Jones engaged a motorboat and it was speeding seaward when the two pursuers arrived. They were not laggard. There was another boat and they made for it.

"A hundred if you overtake that boat," said Felton's strange companion.

Felton eyed him thoughtfully. There was something familiar about that voice.

Great plumes of water shot up into the air. It did not prove a short race by any means. It took half an hour for the pursuer to overhaul the pursued.

"Is that Jones?"

"Yes." Felton fired his revolver into the air in hopes of terrifying Jones' engineer; but there was five hundred dangling before that individual's eyes.

"Let them get a little nearer," shouted the butler.

The engineer let down the speed a notch. The other boat crept up within twenty yards. Jones sought a perfect range. He would have to find this spot again.

"Surrender!" yelled Felton.

In reply Jones raised the precious box and deliberately dropped it into the sea. Then he turned his automatic upon his pursuers and succeeded in setting their boat afire.

All this within the space of an hour. During dinner that night (there was now a cook) Jones walked about the dining table, rubbing his hands together from time to time.

"Jones," said Florence, "why do you rub your hands like that?"

"Was I rubbing my hands, Miss Florence?" he asked innocently.

just going to eat my supper. We landed in a field in Brookville—with never a mishap. It was great! Come over to the studio tomorrow and I'll tell you about the trip."

And he did, next day in his dressing room while he was making up. You never saw anybody so enthusiastic in your life.

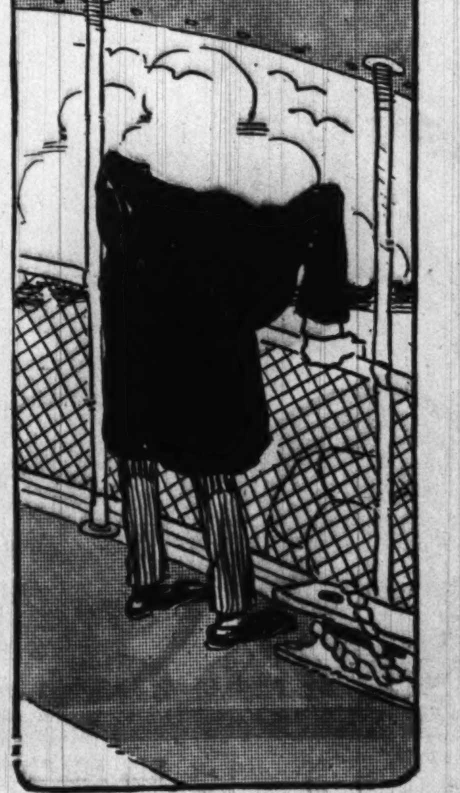
Well, that was all about that part of the balloon stunt. But another picture had to be taken of its landing. In the story it falls in the ocean, you know—so, in the picture, it would have to.

On Sunday then, Mr. Stevens, Mr. Hansel, several men, the photographer, and myself set sail in a gasoline launch for the middle of the sound, towing behind us a big, collapsed balloon on a pontoon. There had been a heavy sea that morning, but in the afternoon it had calmed down and there was only a heavy swell to tell the story.

As we got out farther and farther, our little boat rocked and heaved. I swallowed and blinked and told myself there was nothing to this seasick business. Why should one be sick at sea any more than on land? Nonsense! Just then I looked at the photographer. He was looking walleyed at nothing in particular and he was the most beautiful shade of jealous green you ever saw in your life. Woozily my eyes traveled to the face of Mr. Stevens. Then I looked away hastily, for with a muttered exclamation he made for the side of the boat and leaned over. The photographer saw him and quickly followed suit.

I said to Mr. Hansel: "It—it's a nice, cool, cloudy, bracing day, isn't it?" To which he replied cheerily: "You bet. There's nothing like sea air for making a person feel fine. You're a good sailor, aren't you?"

Somehow that cured me. I drew a deep breath, shut my eyes for a moment, and came to.



With a muttered exclamation Mr. Stevens made for the side of the boat and leaned over.

"Yes," I told him, "I never get the least bit sick." And after that I didn't, either.

Well, it was a long, trying afternoon, for once out the balloon had to be inflated by means of an air pump; cast adrift from the launch on the pontoon and we had to circle round and round it getting pictures. It was trying because the aeronaut was so sick that he had to stop work ever so often, and the photographer was so sick he'd be right in the midst of his grinding when he would have to tear away from the camera. By the time he'd get back we would be out of range and we'd have to turn around and go back and try it over again. But everybody was game, and at last the director gave the word. The balloon was attached to the launch, the air let out it, and we made for land again.

Coming back they let me steer the boat. I told them I never had before, but nobody believed me until just as we rounded into the channel I ran m into a mudbank. Nobody doubted me then, and while nobody swore everybody wanted to. I slunk back into a corner and kept vurry unpromiscuous hile they pulled and tugged, and finally in desperation hailed a passing launch which towed us in. A most ignominious return!

It only took you several minutes to see all the balloon pictures there were, but when you did I hope you appreciated properly the amount of work, thought, and agony that went into just one little part of the making of "The Million Dollar Mystery."

"OUR LADY OF THE LEOPARD-SKIN," VISCOUNTESS CURZON.

Viscount Curzon, only son of Lord Howe, recently made his wife, Viscountess Curzon, a gift of a most magnificent leopard skin, which so delighted her that she laughingly admits she "prays for cold days" in order that she may be able to wear it. So often is her prayer answered and so much does she wear the beautiful pelt that she is called among her friends "Our lady of the leopard-skin." Since she was a mere girl, the viscountess has played a notable part in English society circles. As Miss Mary Curzon, only daughter of the late colonel, the Hon. Montagu Curzon, she was considered a beauty, and after her marriage she was the chosen Queen of Beauty for the "Shakspeare's England" tournament. She married her cousin in 1907. Her husband is a cousin of Viscount Curzon of Kedleston who was the husband of Mary Leiter of Chicago.

No need to summon a policeman on Brighton Beach, however, for beach tango parties are smiled upon by the law and the courts, and bathing-suit tango parties are "the thing" of the hour. "THE MAN BEHIND"

George E. A. Hallett who will accompany Porte

When the America, Lieutenant Cyril Porte's flying boat, starts on its trip across the Atlantic Ocean, there will sit in the pilot house with the aviator a man who, though unknown and unsung, braves the same dangers, will meet the same fate or win the same victory as Lieutenant Porte. Like Porte he has thought and dreamed of one day conquering the air. Like Porte he has worked with hands and brain on the airship of his thoughts and dreams which has found a body in the America. When, like Porte and with Porte, he makes the ascent to do or die as the gods of the air may decree, he will leave, like Porte, loved ones behind who are proud but sad and desperately afraid. So, when the crowds cheer Rodman Wanamaker, the man who has financed the aerial expedition, and Porte, the man who has built the ship, here's a hope they won't forget the man behind, George E. A. HERE'S A REAL, DYED-IN-THE-WOOL, SECOND GENERATION COLLEGE ROMANCE, for—

Miss Isabel Vincent, daughter of the former dean of the Chicago university, George E. Vincent, is to become the bride of Paul V. Harper, of Chicago, whose father, William R. Harper, was president of the Chicago university at the time Vincent was dean and was his dearest friend. President Harper was the man to whom Rockefeller gave the vast amounts of money. The two young people were introduced by their fathers one day on the college campus and a warm friendship sprang up between them. Later Dean Vincent became president of the University of Minnesota. Then friendship discovered itself, by separation, to be romance—and now, on August twenty-ninth, Miss Vincent will become Mrs. Harper.

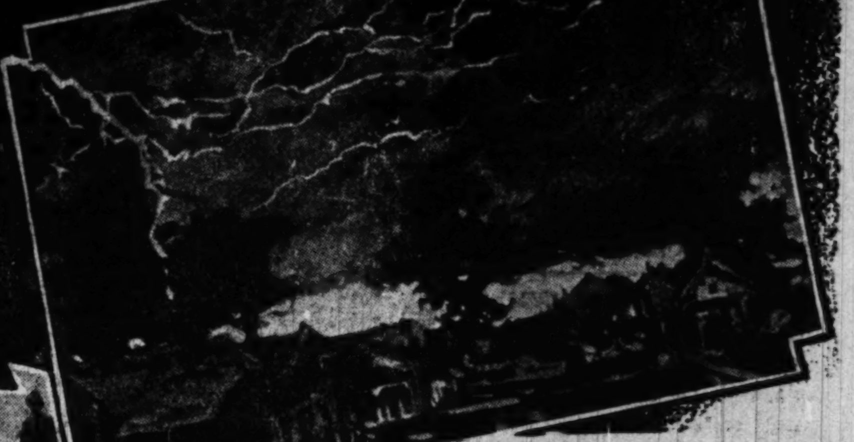
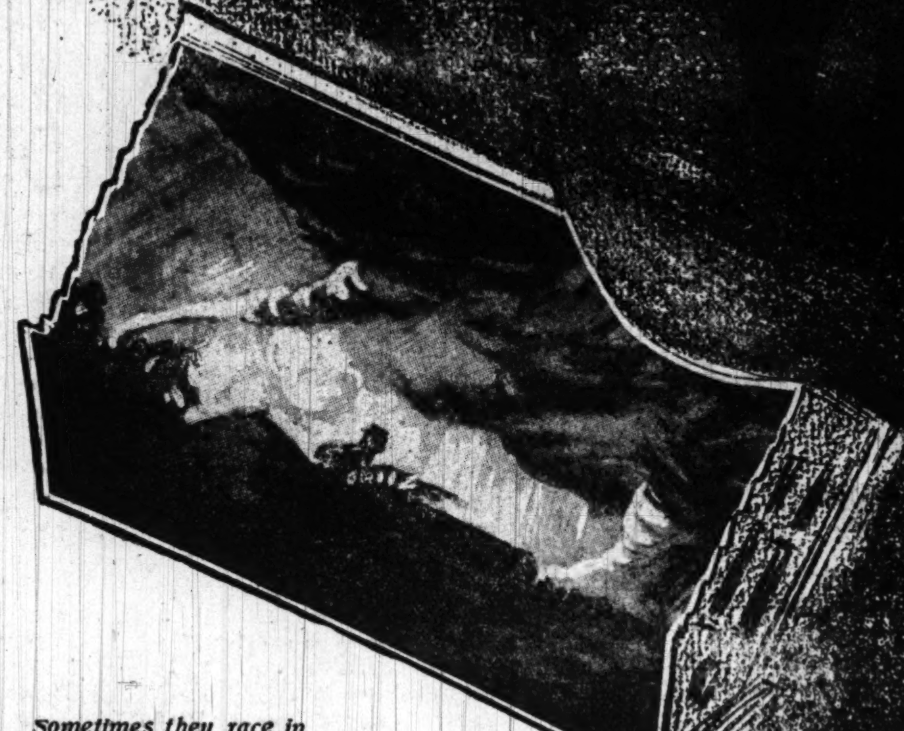
CYCLONES

THIS IS THE SEASON FOR THEM



The center of the storm often is said to be filled with electricity and brilliant electrical display precedes the formation of the whirling cloud.



Sometimes they race in pairs, five have been seen at one time—this photograph was taken by lightning.

BEFORE the Omaha and St. Louis cyclones the people of each of these cities thought their homes were immune because of their locations. Cyclones might strike other cities, but nature had favored theirs. Chicago people have the same idea about their location. The lake protects them, they think. It will act the part of a benevolent "shooer" and shoo the destructive winds away. But apparently there is little foundation for this belief. Not only does it appear possible that a cyclone could hit Chicago, but a cyclone has.

On May 6, 1876, a funnel shaped cloud came bounding out of the southwest, and like a huge jumping jack leaped across the city. There were intervening spaces where no damage was done, but property worth $230,000 was destroyed.

What are commonly called cyclones aren't cyclones at all—they are tornadoes. A cyclone is a storm that spreads over a large area, not the violent, local, whirling, funnel shaped wind cloud. The tornado—or to use the more popular term cyclone—is a freakish thing. One of the most definite statements that can be made about cyclones is that one never knows what they will do. The impishness of these instruments of death is one of their salient characteristics. A cyclone will tear out the wall of a house, leaving only the support under the window without breaking the glass. It will destroy a barn, pick up a horse, carry him a thousand feet and set him down unharmed with part of his manger still tied to his halter. It will carry a house many yards and carefully deposit it over a dry cistern in which the family have taken refuge, thus imprisoning them. And it has a perfect mania for tearing the feathers off chickens.

Took Only the Heavy Things.

In the St. Louis cyclone the outer walls of a house were blown away and the roof was destroyed, but light pictures were left hanging on the walls, the lamps were left on the tables, and the lace shades were not disarranged. A bed and mattress were carried from a Missouri avenue house and dropped in the center of Lafayette park. Hay seemed to be a pet of this storm, for in a number of livery stables everything was carried off but the hay—in one case a number of heavy carriages were blown away, but the hay was not touched. In a house in Arkansas avenue the glass stopper in a decanter was broken off, but the bottle was not hurt. Black mud covered the walls of the houses in that street, although no such mud could be found anywhere in the neighborhood. In South Broadway the freakish wind tore off the front wall of a house, leaving exposed a sign which read "Good Luck."

After a Minnesota storm a man appeared on the highway attired in a chicken coop. The coop had been blown over his head in such a way that his arms were pinioned to his sides and he was unable to remove his "bonnet."

One of the most astonishing cyclone experiences ever related is that of Henry Collins. He is said to have been standing in a saloon when the "twister" came rushing into St. Louis. He had a glass of whisky in his hand when the saloon was hit, and although he was lifted by the wind, whirled heels over head, and turned three complete "cartwheels," half of the whisky remained in the glass after the performance. This he immediately drank, as he had broken his shoulder during his aerial acrobatics.

* *

Tremendous Wind Velocity.

A cyclone is freakish, but its pranks enable scientists to gather certain facts about it. First of all, the velocity of the wind can be calculated to a certain extent. The whirling speed of the cyclone is tremendous. The average velocity within the vortex of 600 such storms was found to be 392 miles an hour, the minimum being 270 and the maximum 800.

At Mount Carmel, Ill., on June 4, 1877, a cyclone drove a brick through the weather boarding, lath, and plastering of a house, across two rooms—a distance of twenty-seven feet—and lodged it in a rear wall without breaking even a corner of the brick. So great was its velocity that the laths were cut smoothly, without cracking the adjoining plaster.

A college professor decided to find the velocity necessary to perform the cyclone's well rehearsed joke of plucking the feathers from chickens. He loaded a six pounder with five ounces of powder and shot a dead chicken into the air, as if in the funnel of a cyclone. The velocity thus produced was 341 miles an hour and blew the chicken all to pieces, and from his experiments he decided that a storm moving at a speed but slightly less than this would play the cyclone's best known prank.

After the Rochester, Minn., storm a board was found driven into the ground, and it was estimated that the velocity necessary to perform this feat was 682 miles an hour. Straws also were found driven into the bark of trees. A mechanical air blast was devised which would give a velocity of from 135 to 160 miles an hour, but the straws thus shot entered the target only a tenth of an inch.

* *

Usually Cover Small Area.

Besides the more or less accurate estimate of the velocity, there are certain facts known about cyclones. In the northern hemisphere they whirl from right to left, contrary to the way the hands of a clock move; in the southern hemisphere they whirl from left to right. They generally move to the northeast.

Cyclones are nearly always funnel shaped, although sometimes they may resemble an hour glass. The Shelbyville, Tenn., storm was said to have had two wings and to have looked like a large, sinister bird. These coalesced and came to the ground with great fury.

These storms are most frequent in April, June, July, August, and September. Their usual time for coming on the stage is the late afternoon. They generally start from the battleground of two opposing wind currents. If you know that a warm south wind, and at a higher level a cooler northwest or west wind, is headed your way; if the day is warm and sultry with an oppressive heat that has no special characteristic, that is unlike the heat from the sun's rays, then begin to look for the nearest cyclone cellar. When the storm comes nearer you probably will see as terrifying a sight as ever meets the eyes of man. Because of its menacing, deadly appearance, it probably is more awe inspiring than a tidal wave or even a volcano in eruption.

The Elkhart, Ind., storm is described as having an upper stratum of air greatly agitated and in a lower stratum ash colored clouds, which flew in all directions, converging to a common center. This storm left a sulphurous smell in its wake, as if his infernal majesty himself had been out for a walk. A cyclone in Egbert county, Ga., was basket shaped and appeared to be filled with fire; its roaring was heard for miles.

A Wind That Fed the Hungry.

The sense of humor of the storm god is so grim that we can seldom appreciate it; but man contributes his little to the lighter side of these tragedy producing whirlwinds. One hot afternoon 4 o'clock tea was being served—without the tea or the "eats"—by a number of tramps who were resting on their laurels under a tree some distance from a Minnesota town. At the same time a "twister" was busy in the town four miles away, knocking over houses, tearing up railroad track, and demolishing a freight car consigned to a general store. A few seconds later the tramps were astonished to see it literally rain hams, bacon, canned peas, and other necessary ingredients for a properly conducted hobo spread.

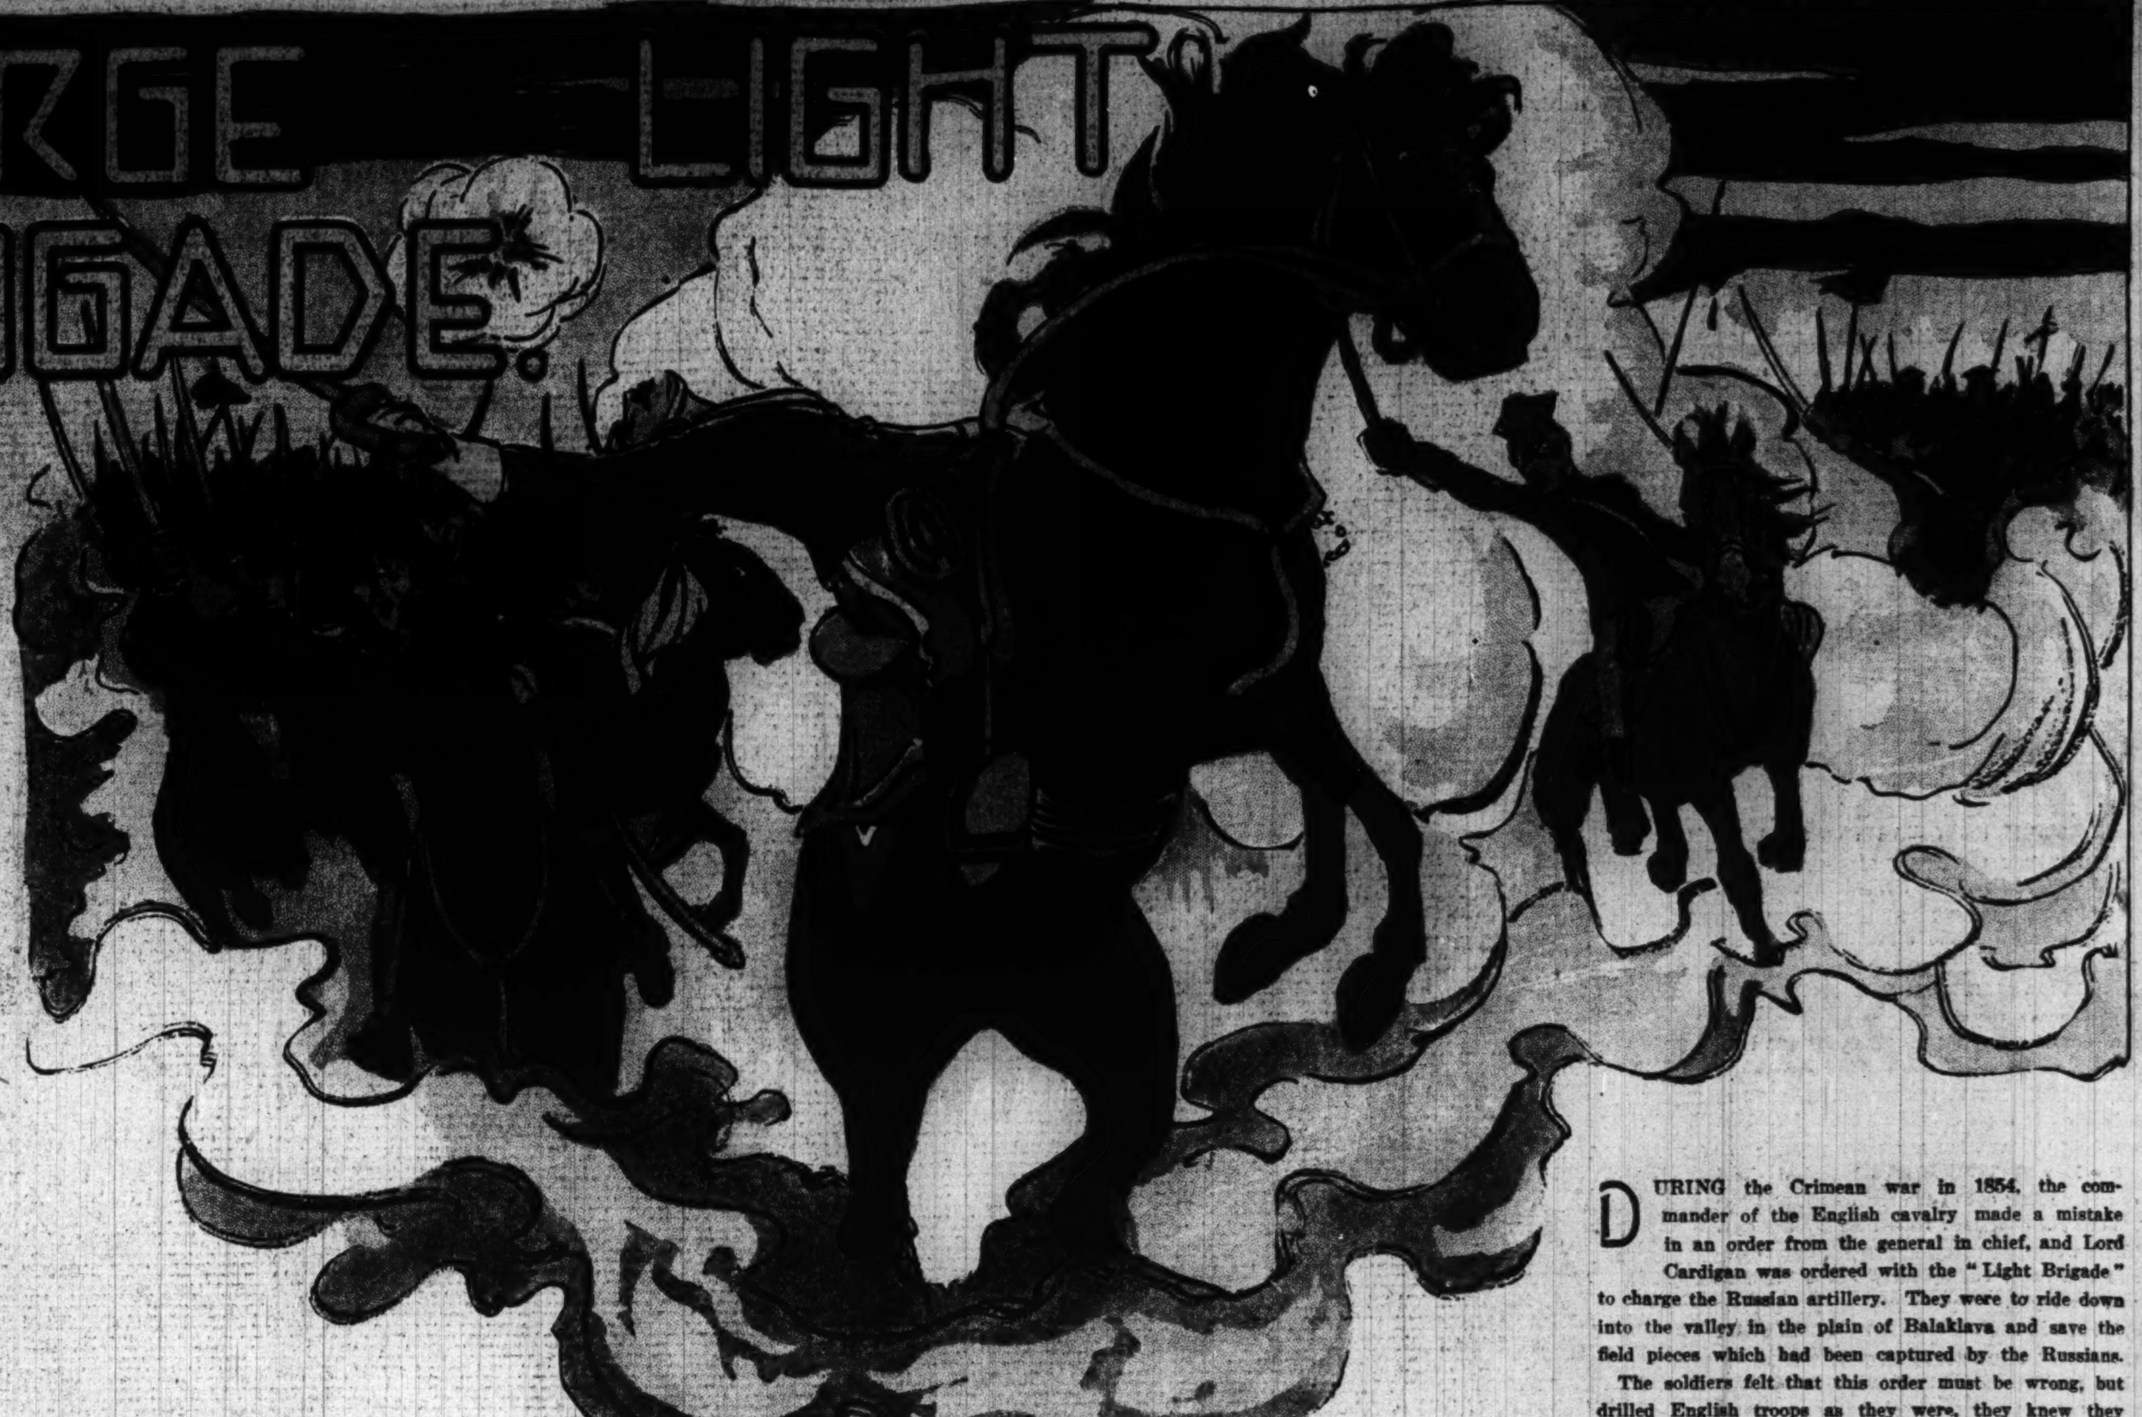
During the St. Louis storm a paperhanger named Stewart, left his job of decorating and ran for the cellar. There he flopped down on his back, although there were several inches of water in the cellar, and managed to heave two heavy stones upon his chest to keep the wind from blowing him away. Despite the pleading and ridicule of his friends, he remained in that position until some time after the storm had passed.

When the cyclone visited Sauk Rapids, Minn., an old farmer was unable to find a place of safety at its approach. Terrified, he seized a broom and ran to the back door, brandished his trusty weapon at the roaring storm, and yelled, "Shoo!" And it shooed.

T CHARGE LIGHT BRIGADE.

BY ALFRED TENNYSON

TOLD BY GEORGENE FAULKNER THE STORY LADY.



Dear Miss Faulkner:
Will you please put in "The Sunday Tribune" about some soldiers. How are you? Your loving friend,
LUCILLE BALLARD, 826 Reba place, Evanston, Ill.

[BALAKLAVA, OCT. 25, 1852.]

Half a league, half a league,
Half a league onward,
All in the valley of Death
Rode the six hundred.
"Forward, the Light Brigade!
Charge for the guns!" he said:
Into the valley of Death
Rode the six hundred.

"Forward, the Light Brigade!"
Was there a man dismayed?
Not though the soldier knew
Some one had blundered:
Theirs not to make reply,
Theirs not to reason why,
Theirs but to do and die:
Into the valley of Death
Rode the six hundred.

Cannon to right of them,
Cannon to left of them,
Cannon in front of them
Volleyed and thundered;
Stormed at with shot and shell,
Boldly they rode and well,
Into the jaws of Death,
Into the mouth of Hell
Rode the six hundred.

Flashed all their sabres bare,
Flashed as they turned in air
Sabring the gunners there,
Charging an army, while
All the world wondered:
Plunged in the battery-smoke
Right through the line they broke;
Cossack and Russian
Reeled from the sabre-stroke,
Shattered and sundered,
Then they rode back, but not,
Not the six hundred.

Cannon to right of them,
Cannon to left of them,
Cannon behind them
Volleyed and thundered;
Stormed at with shot and shell,
While horse and hero fell,
They that had fought so well
Came through the jaws of Death,
Back from the mouth of Hell,
All that was left of them,

When can their glory fade?
O the wild charge they made!
All the world wondered.
Honor the charge they made!
Honor the Light Brigade,
Noble six hundred!

Alfred Tennyson [1809-1892].

DURING the Crimean war in 1854, the commander of the English cavalry made a mistake in an order from the general in chief, and Lord Cardigan was ordered with the "Light Brigade" to charge the Russian artillery. They were to ride down into the valley in the plain of Balaklava and save the field pieces which had been captured by the Russians.

The soldiers felt that this order must be wrong, but drilled English troops as they were, they knew they must obey and not question the why or wherefore of any commander. Although they knew they were riding into a death trap, with a strong battery in front of them and one on either side, the Light Brigade fought fearlessly. Forcing their way past the cannon in front they routed the cavalry of the enemy.

When they marched into the Valley of Death, the Light Brigade numbered 670 horsemen, and of that number only 198 returned. In twenty-five minutes two-thirds of the soldiers were killed or wounded.

Lord Tennyson has told us this story of heroism in his famous poem called "The Charge of the Light Brigade."

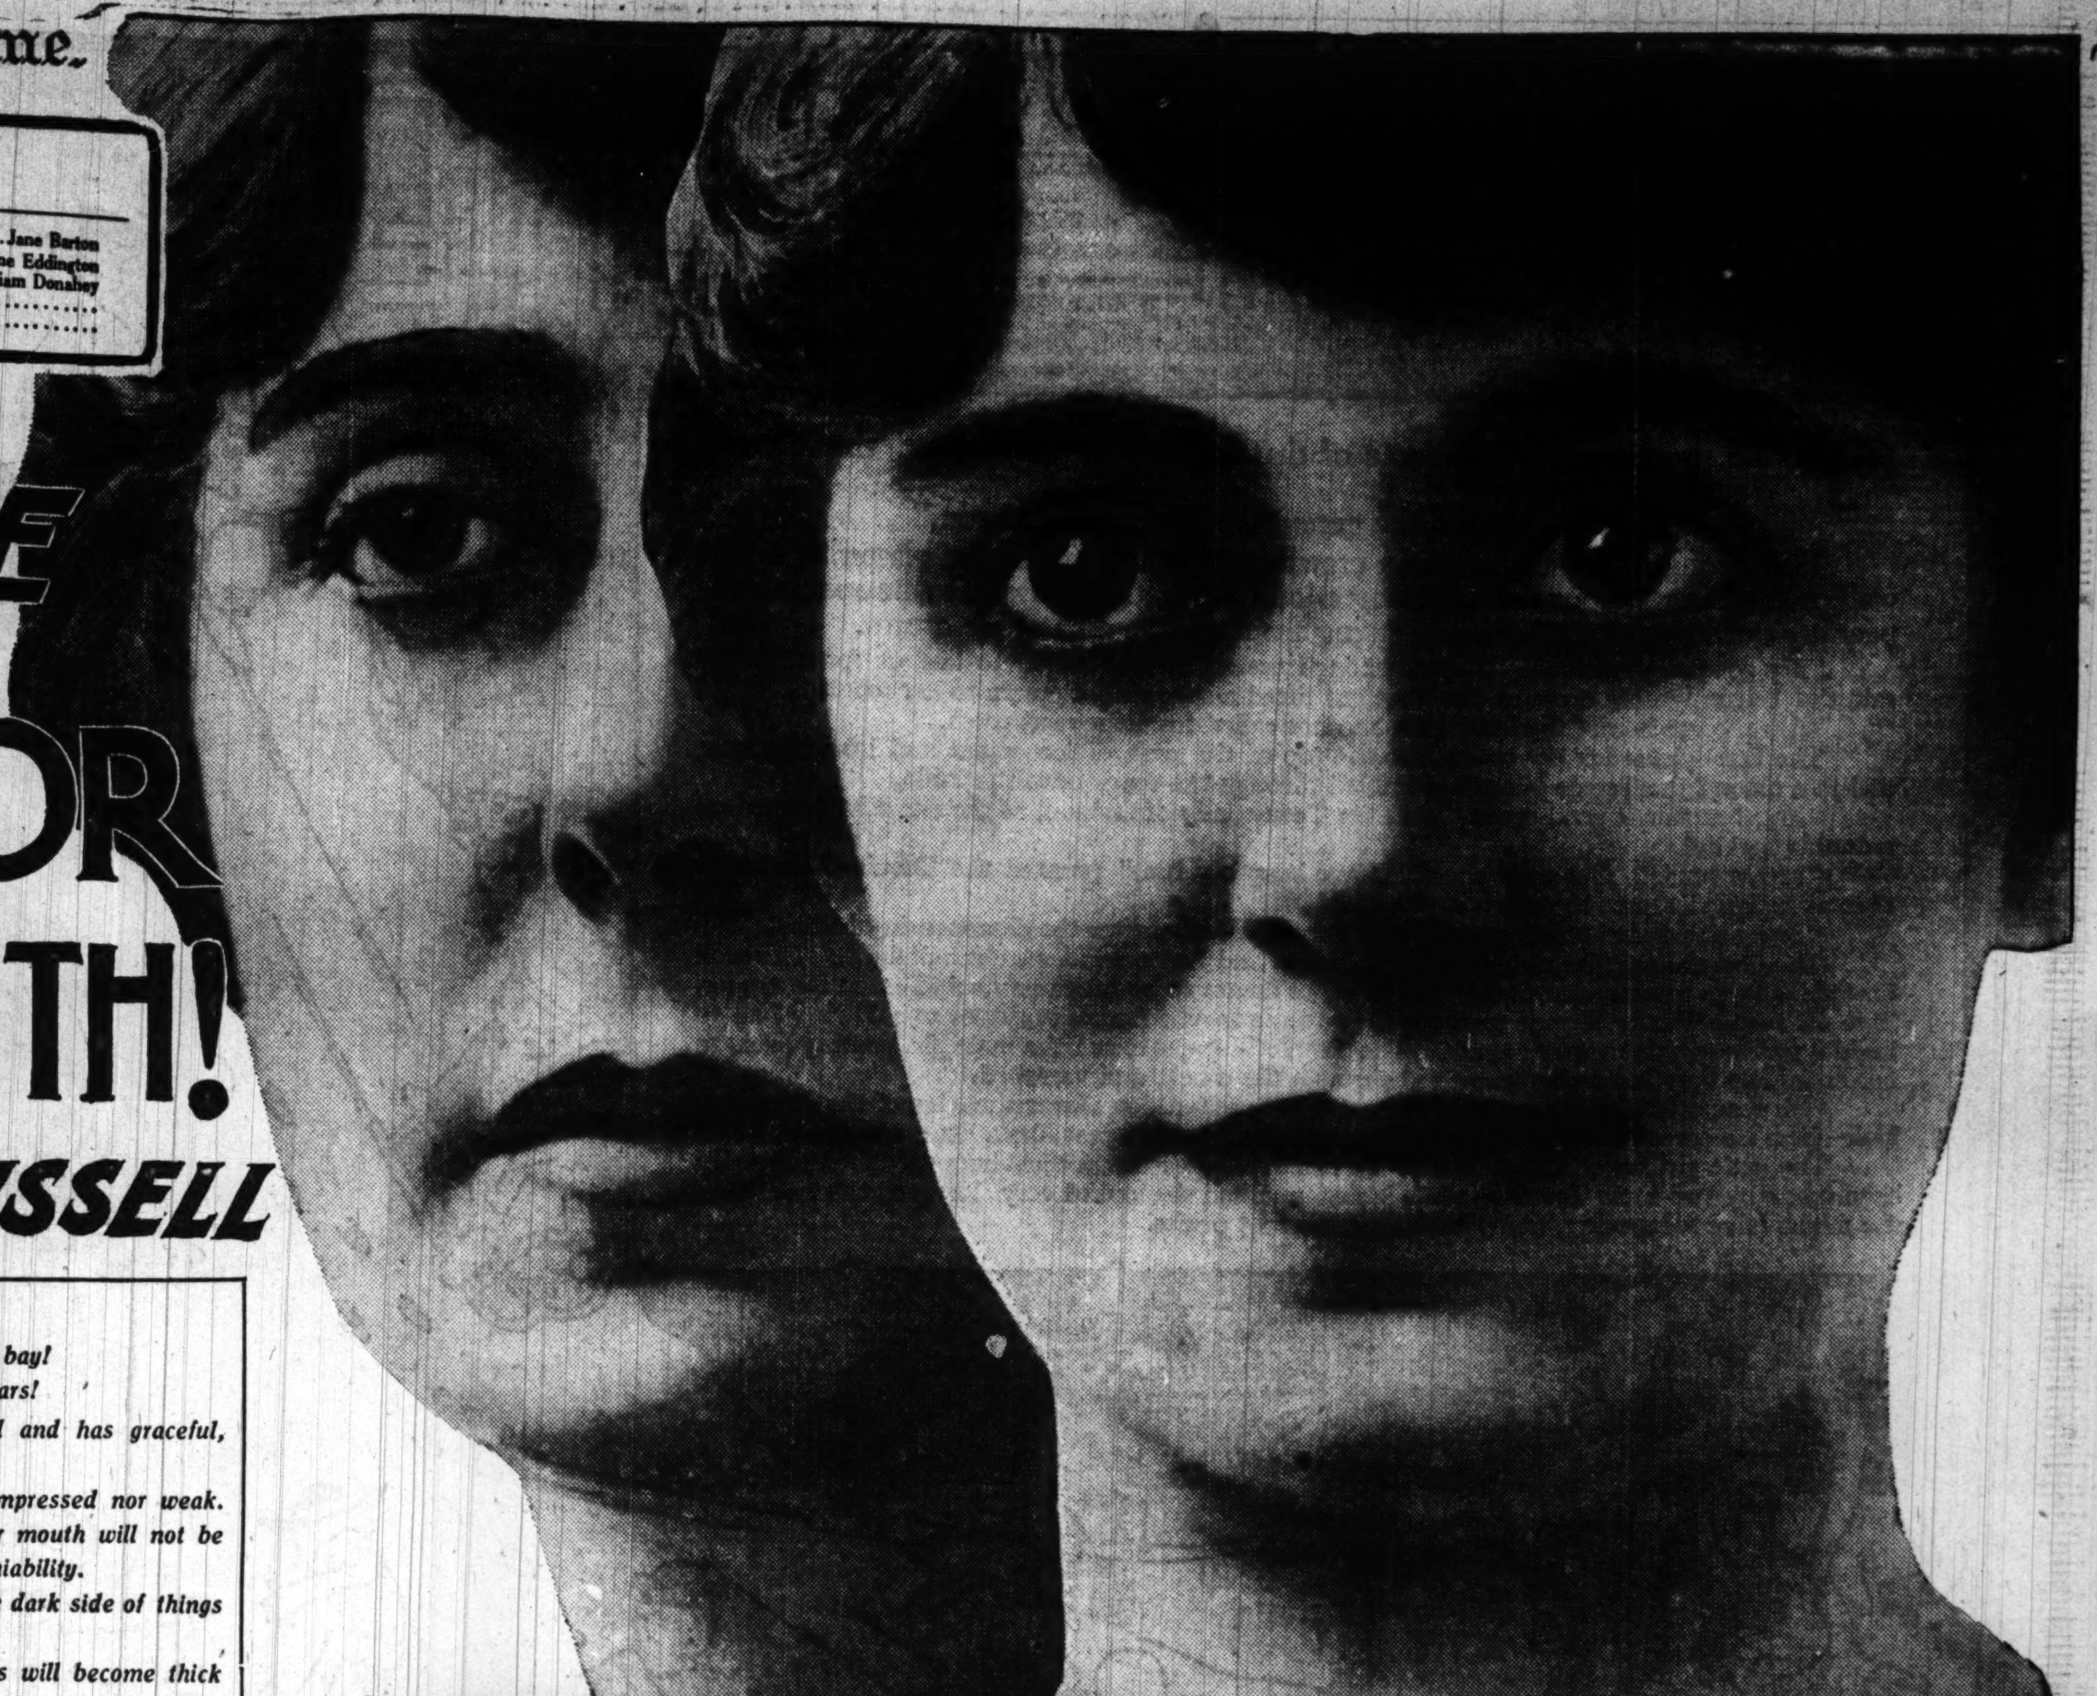
YOU ARE THE SCULPTOR OF YOUR MOUTH!

says LILLIAN RUSSELL



Keep the corners of your mouth turned up!

With a smiling mouth you keep Father Time at bay!

Though ideally perfect in shape and color, your mouth will not be beautiful without an expression of frankness and amiability.

Ill temper, discontent and always looking on the dark side of things result in aging lines about your mouth.

Don't breathe through your mouth or your lips will become thick and coarse.

Hold your lips firmly and cultivate decision of character. Decisive people never have thick lips.

Don't bite your lips to make them red. This makes the lips thick and dry and they become chapped and colorless and lose their delicate curves.

Don't pout. Habitual pouting enlarges and coarsens the under lip.

Grotesque contortions will make a comely mouth ridiculous.

Twisting the mouth, the scornful upward curl of one corner, pursing the lips, grinding of the jaws, thrusting the tongue about in unnatural postures, and wetting the lips are habits that mar and displease.

Lillian Russell's articles appear every day in The Daily Tribune.

[Copyright: 1914: By Lillian Russell.]

YOU are the sculptor of your mouth. The color of your eyes and the shape of your nose you must accept as "circumstances over which you have no control," but the beauty of your mouth is under your individual control. Your thoughts and emotions make or mar its beauty.

A beautiful mouth is neither large nor small, and has a graceful, firm outline. Beautiful lips are neither thick nor thin, nor compressed, nor weak. But even if ideally perfect in shape, they would not achieve beauty without an expression of frankness and amiability. Frankness, amiability, and contentment give your mouth its greatest charm.

No artificial tint ever added beauty to this feature.

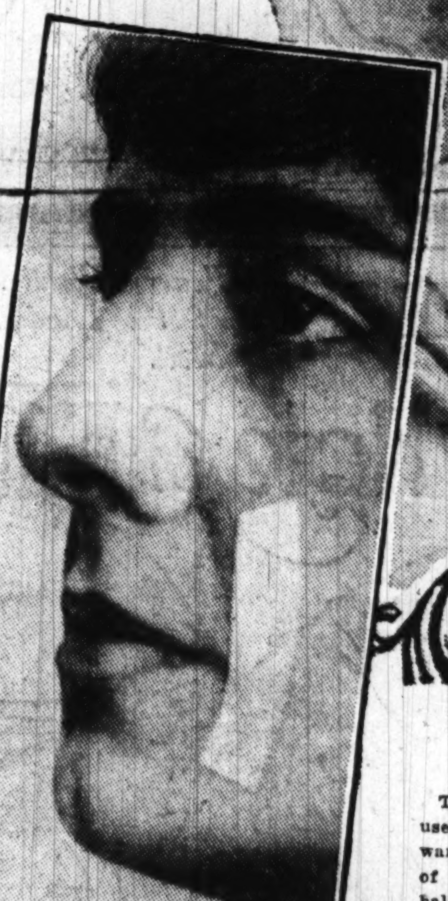
Your eyes have not the gift of smiling to nearly such a degree as your mouth possesses. To prove this, you may take a picture of a face with a sad expression and paste over the depressed lines of the smiling lips. You will find the entire expression of the face changed at once, although the eyes themselves have not been altered.

You can keep Father Time at bay with a smiling mouth, and you can add unnecessary years with a drooping mouth. If you don't believe this, stand in front of your mirror with the muscles of the corners of your mouth turned down. The expression of your whole face is old, unhappy, and ugly. Then smile without showing the teeth. Presto! Don't you look years younger and far more attractive?

Few women realize what a wonderful effect mind and temperament have upon their personal appearance, or that one of the greatest factors in remaining young is the habit of always looking on the bright side of things and cultivating a capacity for enjoying everything in life, small pleasures as well as great. Some people possess this capacity naturally, but any one can make an attempt to cultivate it.

The aging lines about your mouth are purely a matter of habit. You allow the muscles around your mouth to sag through indulging in discontent and ill temper.

Every one can feel, without consulting the mirror, when the mouth is drooping; and then is the time to correct the downward curve of the muscles.



Adhesive plaster to remedy drooping lines.

Don't bite your lips or you'll coarsen and thicken them.

To remove the aging lines about the mouth, use adhesive plaster. Curve the lips upward in a smile. Then damp and fix a piece of adhesive plaster, cut in the shape of a half moon, on either side of the mouth. Leave them in this position for several hours, if worn during the day; or they can be applied at night and left on till next morning, whichever is most convenient.

Have you contracted the habit of keeping your mouth wide open? If so, overcome it as soon as you can. The lips of the mouth breather become coarse and thick, and a stupid, heavy expression is given to the whole face. In fact, nothing short of a deformity of the whole face results from habitual mouth breathing. Hold the lips firmly and cultivate decision of character. You never see a decisive person with thick lips.

Melt one ounce of cold cream in a double boiler, using no more heat than is required to keep the mass in a fluid state. Add one gram of tannin in powder and one gram of chopped alkanet root and let it steep for five hours. Strain through cheesecloth into a jar and stir until cool. Rub into the lips night and morning.

The habit that so many girls have of biting their lips to make them red thickens them and dries them so that they become chapped and colorless and lose their delicate curves.

The formula for a dainty cream to use on dry and cracked lips is: Almond oil, one-eighth pound; white wax, one-half ounce; spermaceti, one-half ounce; oil of bitter almonds, one-twelfth dram; oil of geranium, one-eighth dram. These ingredients are to be well mixed, and the cream may be applied whenever the lips require it.

If you want to make your mouth beautiful, don't fall into the error of assuming a continuous grin. Muscles always kept on the stretch finally lose their original contour, and distortion and wrinkles result. The constant giggling to which many young girls are thoughtlessly given is an enemy to beautiful facial expression. Habitual pouting enlarges and coarsens the under lip.

You can make a comely mouth ridiculous by grotesque contortions. If you doubt this, go through a crowded thoroughfare in a shopping district some morning with the deliberate purpose to study facial expression. Almost every other woman you meet will be an object lesson to you of what not to do.

Twisting the mouth is one of the most common tricks. Sometimes it is a scornful upward curl of one corner involving the nose. Again it is a pursing of the lips as if to whistle. Sometimes it is a grinding of the jaws that screws all one side of the face out of shape. Thrusting the tongue about in unnatural postures is another common habit. Constantly wetting the lips with the tongue is an unpleasant sight. You will see one woman going along with her lips hanging open; another, with the lower lip thrust forward; another will be chewing her lips; another will have her lips screwed up to one side; and so on. A little will power is all that is necessary to overcome these habits.

If your general health is good, your lips will naturally be a good color. If the circulation is poor, the lips will be purple. If your digestion is bad, your lips will be white. If your whole system lacks tone and vigor, your lips will be lacking in color. Therefore, instead of resorting to carmine to improve the color of the lips, build up your constitution by all the means that make for health.

Cold sores are disfiguring to the mouth. If you will use camphor the minute a cold sore is discovered, first wetting the spot with camphor and then adding the powdered subnitrate of bismuth, so that the cold sore will be covered with a paste, it may scatter it. In any event, it will lessen its size. Wetting cold sores with peroxide also will check them. Cold sores eat into the skin, and may leave scars that will remain permanently.

Cigaret smoking, a growing vice among women, helps to destroy the beauty of the mouth. The pressure of the lips about the cigaret, the drawing in and exhaling the smoke, when indulged in habitually, changes the form of the mouth and gives rise to wrinkles around the lips.

ANSWERS TO INQUIRIES.

MARY: Cocoa butter is excellent for developing the bust, but I am afraid it would not do the legs much good. If you wish to develop your legs you must develop the muscles and this can only be done by exercise. Walking, running, jumping; in fact, any exercise involving the muscles of the legs will develop them. Tennis is an excellent game for developing thin legs. If you will send me a stamped, addressed envelope I shall send you full instructions on developing the bust.

LOUISE: Buttermilk or lemon juice is a good bleach for removing tan. Bathe the face in buttermilk twice daily. Allow it to dry on the skin. I am sure this will help you. However, if your skin is tanned and turned deeply it will take a stronger bleach to remove it. If you will send me a stamped, addressed envelope I shall send you a formula for a bleach for tan, also a treatment for pimples.

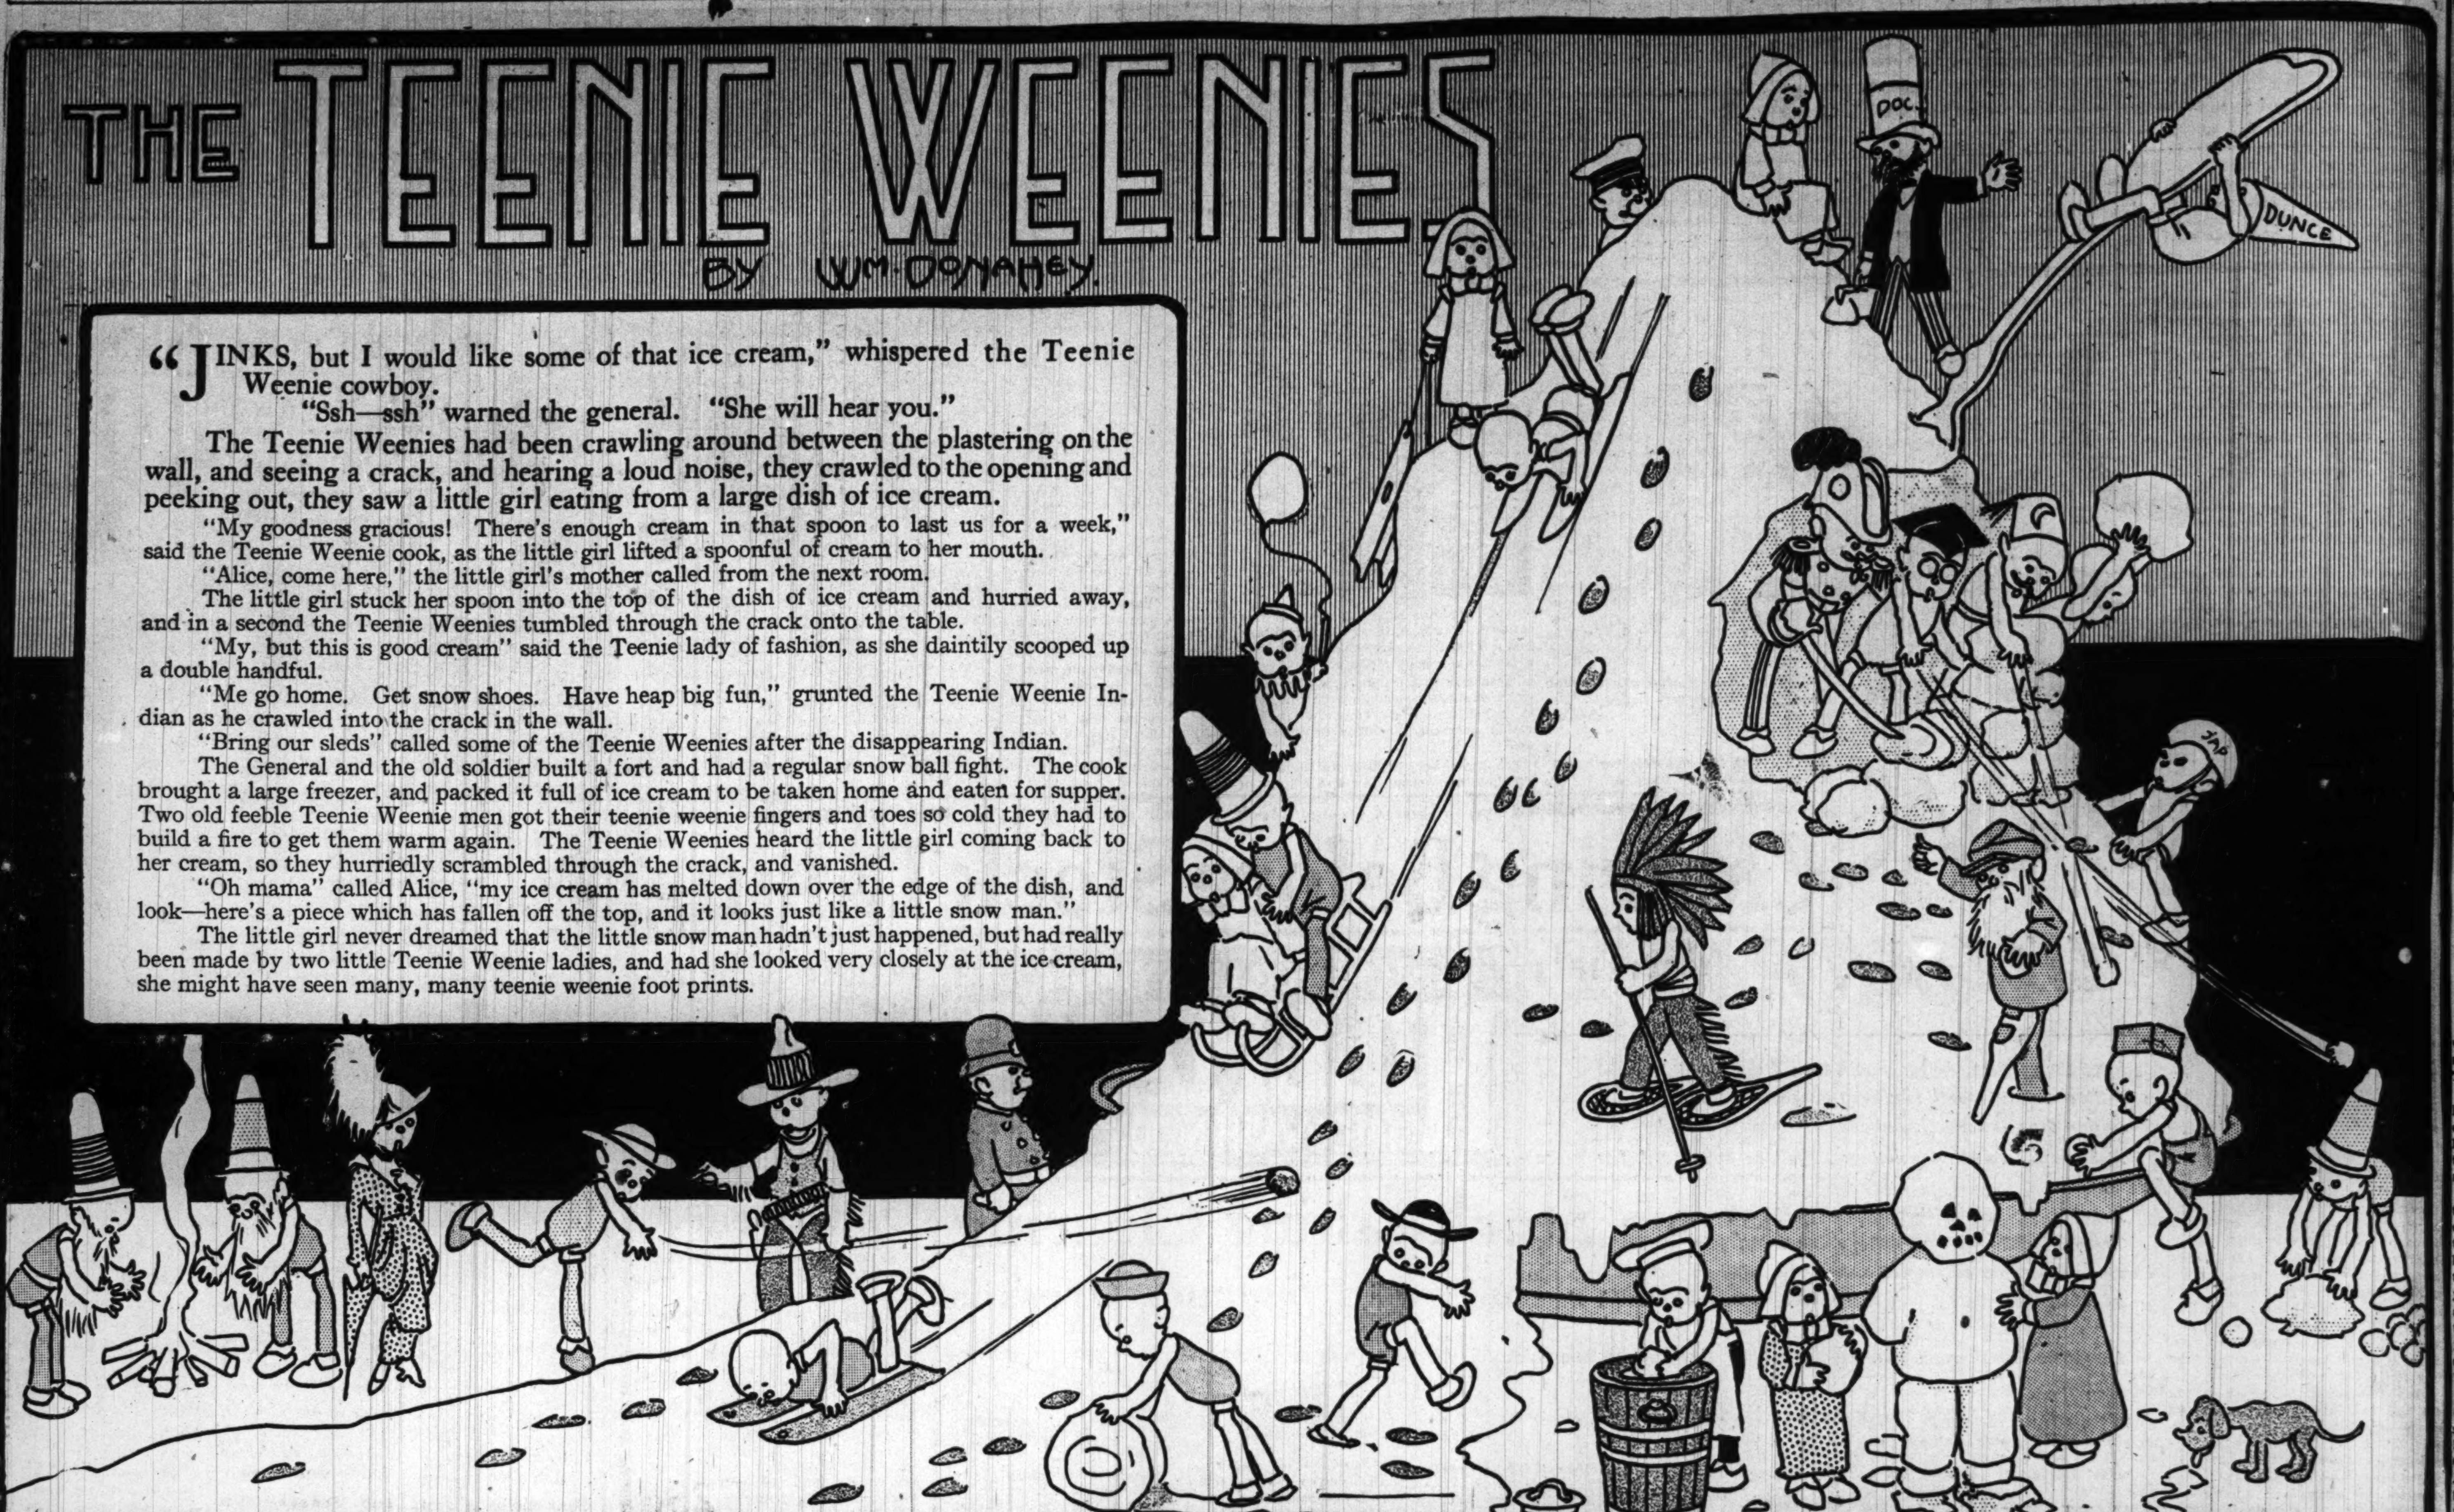
ALMA: I am sorry I cannot help you. Your trouble is internal and I cannot give advice on internal disorders. I am sure hay fever can be cured. It always affects the eyes, causes sneezing, etc., but I am sure a good physician can help you if you consult one.

THE TEENIE WEENIES

BY WM. DONAHEY.



"JINKS, but I would like some of that ice cream," whispered the Teenie Weenie cowboy.

"Ssh—ssh" warned the general. "She will hear you."

The Teenie Weenies had been crawling around between the plastering on the wall, and seeing a crack, and hearing a loud noise, they crawled to the opening and peeking out, they saw a little girl eating from a large dish of ice cream.

"My goodness gracious! There's enough cream in that spoon to last us for a week," said the Teenie Weenie cook, as the little girl lifted a spoonful of cream to her mouth.

"Alice, come here," the little girl's mother called from the next room.

The little girl stuck her spoon into the top of the dish of ice cream and hurried away, and in a second the Teenie Weenies tumbled through the crack onto the table.

"My, but this is good cream" said the Teenie lady of fashion, as she daintily scooped up a double handful.

"Me go home. Get snow shoes. Have heap big fun," grunted the Teenie Weenie Indian as he crawled into the crack in the wall.

"Bring our sleds" called some of the Teenie Weenies after the disappearing Indian.

The General and the old soldier built a fort and had a regular snow ball fight. The cook brought a large freezer, and packed it full of ice cream to be taken home and eaten for supper. Two old feeble Teenie Weenie men got their teenie weenie fingers and toes so cold they had to build a fire to get them warm again. The Teenie Weenies heard the little girl coming back to her cream, so they hurriedly scrambled through the crack, and vanished.

"Oh mama" called Alice, "my ice cream has melted down over the edge of the dish, and look—here's a piece which has fallen off the top, and it looks just like a little snow man."

The little girl never dreamed that the little snow man hadn't just happened, but had really been made by two little Teenie Weenies ladies, and had she looked very closely at the ice cream, she might have seen many, many teenie weenie foot prints.

The World's Best Fashion Pictures

Sash Corsage New Note for Fall

PARIS.—[Special Correspondence.]—With all the avalanche of criticism that is being hurled against the fashions of today there is one thing that they cannot be accused of and that is of being hackneyed. Dame Fashion imposes no dictatorial orders on us; she offers an almost infinite variety of modes and then tells us to choose that kind which is most becoming to our own individual style.

Everywhere that one sees women congregated in gay attire the prim 1880 toilette appears side by side with the negligent robe classique. Or, again, there is the classical Juno outline, accentuating the charm of the lamppost figure along with that made by the 1830 hoop skirt.

For instance, the 1880 frock, with its limp though molded corsage fashioned down the front with crochet covered buttons, offers real novelty to eyes satiated by the nebulous vagueness of the chiffon blouse. Yet the charm of the thin and delicate sheath has not waned and we find in the alliance of fine sleeves through the arms can be seen and a bodice of substantial silk a graceful admixture of the two styles.

Pure white tulle sleeves braceleted with grape green crêpe at the wrists appear in conjunction with a corsage of the darkest marine blue taffetas which is continued below the waist in the old fashioned princess manner, and there met by a swathed belt of the same silk. Below the sash falls a long tunic of plaited grape green crêpe, and below again is seen a taffeta skirt.

Taffetas and crêpe, chiffon and tulle, how indefatigably they have played their parts in the season's repértoire! Now arrives the moment for fresh surprises which shall tide us over the weeks that are to come before the early autumn novelties are announced.

Fine velvet, as fragile as chiffon, trimmed with fur, though it can only be regarded as a sensation, has been seen. Dull black crêpe de chine, too, is being brought forward, with trimmings to match in the form of trails of flowers and foliage standing out from the somber background and marking the outline of the shoulders.

Resting at the base of a narrow collar band, which bordered the décolletage of a black crêpe frock, I observed the other day this fancy for repoussé blossoms, and marked it as a new and effective resource.

The collar I mean is the quaintest possible travesty of the low neck band of the primmest days of dress and is now just the finish of an open corsage that would have shocked the sedate wearer of that neat band dreadfully had she been asked to accept it in her time for a day time toilette.

The little picturesque hanging cape, which falls from many a frock for open air wear, would have disconcerted her seriously also. We have every right to feel happy in the fact that we have learned to appreciate individuality and no longer follow like sheep the dictates of a few stereotyped designers, but choose the best ideas of many.

Upon recent hot days a complete manifestation of independence has been made by the parasols carried, which vary in shape and size, from the bead hemmed Chinese design to the plate or disc shape, covered with tightly stretched taffetas, which is quite small and has a hinged stick, so that it can be folded up and tucked under the arm to be carried like a parcel when not required.

The crinoline outline seems to have come to stay. The model I have sketched was created by the Parisian dressmaker who has been openly advocating a crinoline revival. It is admittedly a style of summer dress, which is capable of looking delightful or absurd, according to the figure of the wearer and the manner in which it is worn. Indeed, there are more pitfalls surrounding a dress of this order than a hooped skirt of the real 1830 type.

The model is in itself quite lovely. The quaint flounced skirt is made of fine, white washing net and each flounce is scalloped and worked over in washing silk, with buttonhole stitch.

Then the corsage, which also forms a sash, is in Egyptian blue charmeuse. This corsage is arranged in kimono fashion and the soft folds hang over the folded sash which molds the hips. The long ends of the sash are tied at the back in a loose bow. The manner in which the folds of charmeuse are arranged over the hips recalls the 1880 fashions, but at that time loose corsages were practically unknown, at least "loose" in the kimono sense.

The crinoline outline is seen here in this white net skirt. The deep blue sash corsage is tied at the back in a large bow.

White moire hat lined with navy blue.

Black velvet hat encircled with white wings.

Doris Blake Says:

"A little humbugging now and then is relished by most married men."

Articles by Doris Blake and her replies to letters appear every day in "The Daily Tribune."

"I DO so object to the humbugging wife," a friend complained to me recently. "You know," she continued, "the sort of woman who winds her arms artistically round her husband's neck and lifts her face to be kissed."

I could not agree with my complaining friend because I think there is quite a lot to be said in favor of the "humbugging" wife. Nowadays we get so few of them. Most men love that kind of thing—in moderation, of course. Watch the pleased face of the husband whose wife treats him thus.

"You great big clever thing," her every action seems to say. And there is no doubt about it that this kind of wife does get her own way.

More often than not the "sweet little woman" is a most capable person when her husband is not there to see her.

I know one woman who simply toils all day to have everything nice and dainty when her husband comes home in the evening. She makes pastry and polishes and mends all day; but he always sees her dainty and "helpless" when he comes home, and never doubts that the maid of all work is a most efficient being.

Well, wives like this do keep a sort of romance going about the place, at any rate more than the woman whose sole joy in life seems to be extracting pity from her lord and master for all the hard work she has been obliged to do during his absence.

After all, that kind of thing is really no more humbugging than the behavior of the woman who carefully conceals all sentiment under the cloak of good fellowship and "pal" attitude toward her husband.

Most men are sentimental, and deep down in their hearts they still hold that woman is a kind of doll, very pretty and very dear, but still something to be kissed and not taken seriously.

The clever woman knows this, and who is to say that she is not a greater general than her sister who cries "Votes for women!" and crushes in her path the flowers of chivalry and romance that every man secretly cherishes?

Taking an Escort's Arm.

"Dear Miss Blake: At the suggestion of a friend, I come to you with my perplexity. At any time is it proper for a lady to take her escort's arm in public places? LACE."

It is provincial for the young woman to take her escort's arm in public places. At a large dinner, however, or at a formal dance a young man offers his arm to a young woman and she takes it. You are undoubtedly asking the question of whether or not it is proper to walk arm in arm in the street. It is not. Sometimes late at night, if the young woman is overcome by fear, she may accept a young man's arm, but those occasions are so rare they are almost negligible.

Love Letters

He Only Writes Once a Day.

This week's best love letter from a woman to a man is the following, submitted by Miss Mary C. Davis, 64 West Thirty-eighth street, New York:

"Lad I Love: I've just mailed a long, long letter to you, so I haven't the slightest excuse in the world for writing this. I just got loving you so much that I had to go out to the drug store and buy a stamp to tell you so.

"Your letter came in the first mail this morning [and yet my landlady wonders why I have suddenly taken to getting up so early] and I didn't get it learned by heart until nearly noon. Since then I have been awfully lonesome. I just kept going to the head of the stairs and looking over the banisters to the hall table on the first floor, to see if there just might be another letter from you, even when I had made a regular New Year's vow not to look again.

"I know you're awfully busy at the office, and that those morning letters are, oh, very long and dear, for man letters. But a day is such a wide time. One letter won't nearly stretch across it and you have to sleep so far until morning comes and brings you a letter. I think there ought to be a special postal system for love letters, anyhow. Think of the years that have been put in altogether by all the young people of the nation in waiting for love letters. Distances are such unpleasant things to have happen. Especially when you're in love.

"I got such a dear letter from your mother, and now I'm afraid to answer it so much depends on it—oh, I've planned every kind of letter. How can I bring her round? One can't say baldly: 'Woman, like me!' I do so want her to think I'm apt to be a suitable wife. How does one go about it to look like a suitable wife on note paper? Oh, this is a perplexing world.

"And I live you very much! I probably couldn't be hired to say it if you were here in the room, but distances are such convenient things. Especially when one is in love.

"My little alarm clock is looking so reproachfully at me. Wait a minute—there. I've turned its face to the wall. Now I can sit here and dream of you as long as I like.

"Good night, dear heart. Kiss my little [illegible] good night, the way you used to do. [illegible] Shut your eyes so that I can [illegible] you better. Whisper—so. I love you, [illegible] I live you—all—there—is.

Storming Outside and In.

MacRae D. Campbell, 5626 Blackstone avenue, says this letter was written by a young civil engineer, engaged on a contract in this tropical wilds, to his sweetheart in New York:

"Dear Little Far Away Girl:

"It is storming outside tonight. The thunder crashes and roars in rage; the lightning rips a zigzagging bayonet through the angry, ink black sky, and flashes its menace to a frightened jungle; the wind goes shrieking past my little palm thatched cabin, and the tall cocoanut trees bend low in terror as it hurries by, and whisper of their fear when it is gone; the rain pour down in torrents.

"And it is storming inside tonight—in my heart, burdened with the loneliness of two long years, that cries out in rebellion against the seven months that must yet elapse before my work here is finished and I can return to New York—and you.

"If you could know what the thought of you has meant to me in this place—how I have dreamed of you, worked for you, prayed to you—kept you constantly in my mind, that I might not go mad from sheer loneliness. And I have tried to live up to you, dear! Even in trivial things I have striven to maintain a standard, and it is no easy matter to keep entirely civilized in a tropical wilderness. Can you guess what I did just now, before I sat down to write this letter? I shaved, cut my hair as well as I could with rusty old shears, and donned a clean shirt. I always do that before I write to you, and your photograph smiles down at me as though it understands why.

"I have nothing new to write you, little girl—nothing to tell you of but my love that grows and grows until I wonder that for other lovers and their love there is room upon the earth. Do you suppose that there is any limit to love—that it can ever stop growing? I can't believe it. Each day I know that I love you with all my heart and soul, and I say to myself, 'It would be impossible to love her more than I do.' And yet each day brings with it the knowledge that my love for you has grown stronger and truer and better. Perhaps it is because every day adds just that much more to my capacity for loving.

"The mail boat sails in the morning. It is now 12 o'clock and I must rise at dawn and saddle a horse to take this to the docks, for I would not trust it to another for fear it might miss the boat. No ship bringing mail from the States has ever failed to have a letter in the dear handwriting I know so well, and none carrying mail for the States shall put out of here without taking with it a message to you of my love.

"O, little girl, how I love you, love you, love you! How I long for you, dear! The pessimistic side of me keeps moaning, 'Seven long, dreary months more! Seven whole months!' But the optimistic side of me is chanting, 'Only seven months more! And you've stood it two whole twelve month years, you know. Only seven months more! Cheer up!' But always, whether I'm seeing the doughnut of the hole, a glad little voice 'way down in my heart is singing the sweetest, most beautiful song in the whole world—such a wonderful little song, dear; I couldn't feel really miserable while I'm listening to it if I tried. It's a very little song, but it rhymes with heaven, and it makes of even a jungle an almost beautiful, livable place. Do you want to know how it goes, dear?

"'She loves me, too!
She loves me!
Little girl loves me!'

"Isn't it a beautiful song, dear? I could move mountains to its accompaniment.

"Good night, little girl—dear, dear little girl.

YOUR JERRY."

Would You Marry Your Mate Again?

Yes, to the End of Time.

"Dear Mis Blake: Would I marry my wife again? Yes, just as eagerly and with as much happiness as I did ten years ago. It is true she is not the same as she was then, but, for that matter, neither am I. The bloom of girlhood has vanished from her cheeks; the pearly gleam of her teeth has been marred with the glint of gold, and, although the dentist has done good work, he has failed to improve the natural beauty of her mouth; the cares of the household have had a marked effect upon her, and the youthful elasticity of her body, its graceful carriage and old time charm have not gone unmarred through the long years of household drudgery; the bearing of children has been hard upon her. The years have not dealt as kindly with her as I should have liked, but our hearts are still in accord. She is still my sweetheart, and her smile is as radiant, her voice as tender, and her kiss as sweet as in the days when first I wooed her.

"It seems that when beauty fades to the physical eye the mental vision becomes keener and detects beauties of character that were not noticed before. The wealth of a good woman is like a mine and the deeper we delve the richer is the ore we find. The passing from girlhood to motherhood and on to a more mature womanhood has been so gradual that its changes were unnoticed until I stopped to consider the question of remarriage. The years, however, have not altered her character, except to make it better, as wine is mellowed by age.

> "The Tribune" will pay $5 for the best letter on the following subject: "Would I Marry My Husband Again?" or "Would I Marry My Wife Again?" Why or why not? Letters from unmarried persons will not be considered. Your name will be withheld from publication if you wish it. Write on one side of paper only. Send letters at once to Doris Blake, Snuday Tribune, Chicago.

"Yes, I would marry her again. But I would do so with a deeper realization of the responsibilities assumed. The little acts of unkindness that at times have been done unconsciously and the impatient, unkind words that have occasionally slipped out in a thoughtless moment would be vigilantly guarded against. The trials that we have borne together would be borne by me alone, and I would look upon them in a different light—as opportunities in which to be worthy of her.

"Not for all the world would I throw off the past and exchange it for ten years to be lived anew and conditioned upon being spent without her. By all her goodness, sweetness, tenderness, fidelity, and love, as well as by her five healthy, charming children, to whom she has given her former strength and beauty, I swear I would marry her again, and yet again, to the end of time. A. C."

Keeping Expenses Down.

A GOOD office manager gives much thought to devising ways and means of reducing the running expenses of his office, and few employés realize how much they can help him economize. It is only in little things that we can help, of course, but it is the little things that make the aggregate expense a cause of worry to our employers.

Office stationery is a big item on the expense sheet and we destroy dozens of sheets of letter heads and second sheets a day without giving it a single thought.

There are many girls who say they cannot write with anything but a full length of pencil and after it is sharpened a few times it is thrown away as useless. These discarded pencils might be used for several weeks by other people who are less particular, but the careless stenographer or clerk throws them into the waste basket without thinking.

I have often noticed that some girls go out to lunch and leave the light over their desks burning. A girl who would do this probably would never dream of leaving a room in her own home without turning out the light, but there is some one at home to remind her, and because her employer does not preach economy it does not occur to her that she is careless and extravagant.

Then there is the girl who uses the office telephone for all her personal calls. Besides wasting time her calls are often an expense to the firm if it has a busy switchboard.

Typewriters that are not properly oiled and cleaned regularly are bound to get out of order and repair men have to be called in to adjust them. It would take just a few minutes every morning to keep a machine in good condition.

These are little things, it is true, but if every employé remembered that she owed it to her firm to be careful of them it would decrease the office expense materially.

Employers keep a closer watch on office supplies than we suspect and I know of one girl who lost her position because of her unnecessary extravagance, though the real reason for her dismissal was not explained to her.

An office girl writes:

"Dear Miss King: My business life has been varied and for the most part very pleasant. In speaking of my own case I am sure it is in common with that of many other girls in large cities.

"I have come to the time where I must stop and choose between going on as I have for the past years, living a life of utter selfishness outside my business, doing nothing for any one that it does not exactly suit me to do because of the fact that my days are full of work, office work, pounding typewriter keys, hence the excuse of being too tired in the evening to do other than as I please, which is often to lie down and rest oblivious to duties both social and otherwise, which are near me.

"The other alternative is that of going back to my home, where I have a mother who has wanted me for years to come back to her, but not until I felt I would be contented to live there as simply as my surroundings would require.

"Along with this necessity of making a choice there is also the longing to settle down. I have no regret for the years that are past. I have had a good time, but I feel it is 'up to me' to get out and allow one of the younger stenographers coming on to have my desk.

"However, do not imagine that I am anticipating going home to spend my time in idleness the rest of my life. I can neither afford nor do I wish to. There are many things I can do at home and my typewriter will serve me in doing some of the work, which at first may not bring in much return, but will after a few years be something to count on.

There are probably many working women who feel, as you do, that they would like to leave the business world while they are still young enough to enjoy things, but I do not agree with you that it is "up to" the older women to get out to make way for the younger girls. The woman who has given her employer many of the best years of her life surely deserves anything he can give her in the way of a good position and large salary. There are many positions that an older woman can fill much better than a younger one and if she enjoys her work there seems to be no reason why she should give way to a younger girl.

Most girls who work feel at times they would like to get away from business and do other things, but I think as a rule this feeling comes only when they are tired and nervous, and if they were obliged to leave work they would do so with regret.

However, for a girl in your position there is but one thing for you to do. Your mother needs you and both you and your mother would be happier if you were together.

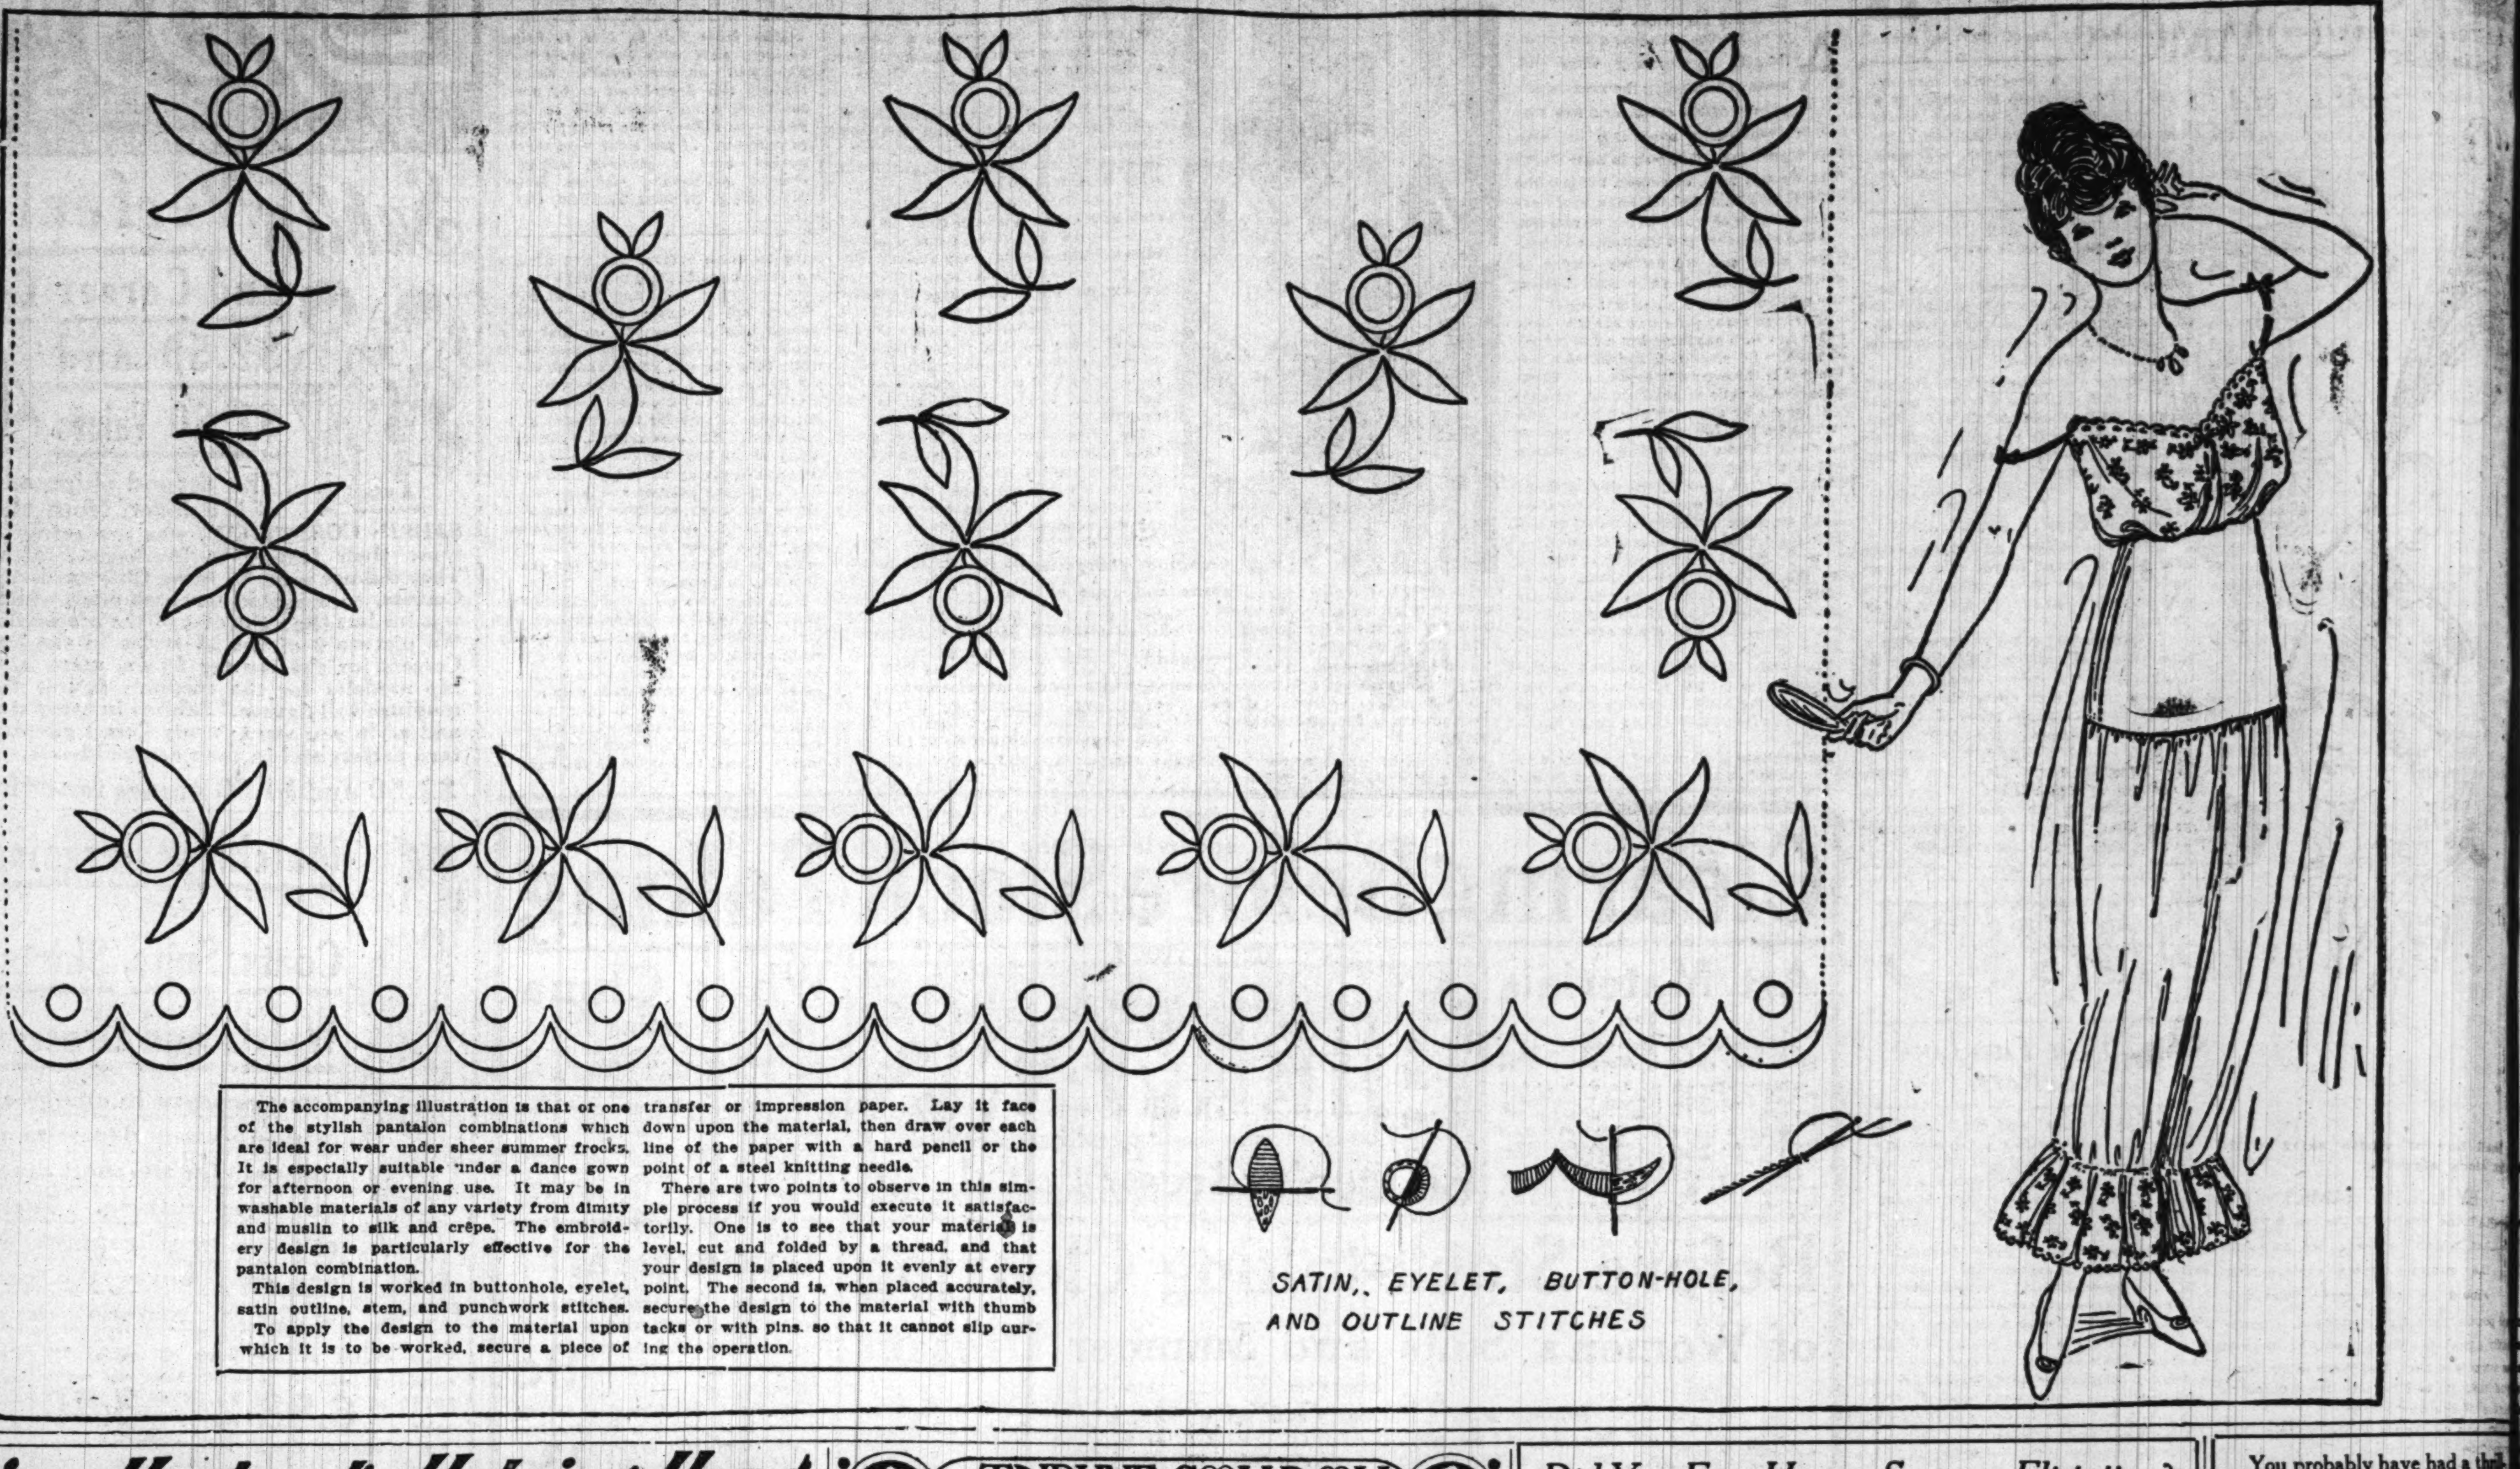
Embroidery Design for Sheer Combination Suit.



SATIN, EYELET, BUTTON-HOLE, AND OUTLINE STITCHES

The accompanying illustration is that of one of the stylish pantalon combinations which are ideal for wear under sheer summer frocks. It is especially suitable under a dance gown for afternoon or evening use. It may be in washable materials of any variety from dimity and muslin to silk and crêpe. The embroidery design is particularly effective for the pantalon combination.

This design is worked in buttonhole, eyelet, satin outline, stem, and punchwork stitches.

To apply the design to the material upon which it is to be worked, secure a piece of transfer or impression paper. Lay it face down upon the material, then draw over each line of the paper with a hard pencil or the point of a steel knitting needle.

There are two points to observe in this simple process if you would execute it satisfactorily. One is to see that your material is level, cut and folded by a thread, and that your design is placed upon it evenly at every point. The second is, when placed accurately, secure the design to the material with thumb tacks or with pins, so that it cannot slip during the operation.

Marion Harland's Helping Hand

By Marion Harland

Marion Harland's Helping Hand Corner appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

"As an owner of a back yard flock of poultry, I am interested in having them tolerated within the city limits. It seems that the serious objection to them is caused by the crowing of roosters, an intolerable nuisance, and in my opinion neighbors are justified in objecting to such noise. There is no good reason for keeping roosters in a small flock of poultry, for they are needed for but a short period in spring to fertilize eggs for hatching, and the rest of the year are an unnecessary nuisance. There are several shops in any big city where orders are taken for almost any variety of hatching eggs at a reasonable figure, so that it is not necessary to keep males over winter for that purpose. It has been demonstrated over and over again at the state experiment stations that hens lay more eggs when males are absent from the pen. With grain costing $2 a bag there is not enough profit in keeping poultry in the city to allow me to harbor a single unproductive fowl, and a rooster can easily eat as much grain as two hens would devour. My hens, I find, since killing off roosters, are more tame and friendly, and the neighbors seem as much interested in the welfare of our pretty flock of hens and pullets as do we. And there is no noise. MRS. H. S. H."

When I asked a few weeks ago for suggestions as to how the owners of flocks of poultry managed to stand the noise they made I had no idea that so practical and excellent a reply would come to my half humorous inquiry. I am grateful for this letter and for the ideas it gives, and I believe it will be helpful to others who wish to keep poultry in town and who yet grudge the big amount of food consumed by roosters as well as the noise they make.

Some Helpful Hints.

"I should like instructions as to the best way of removing cream spots in which dust has settled from an English baby buggy of dark green imitation leather. I inclose a few hints that may be helpful. You can use such of them as you like. A toy iron makes the work of ironing baby sleeves, yokes, caps, etc., much easier. Irons heated over a gas burner require less flame if covered while heating with an old pan. As I have no high stool to sit on while preparing vegetables, etc., I use baby's high chair as a substitute. Rust spots can be removed by simply putting a few spoonfuls of borax on the spot and making a bag of the cloth by tying it around the borax, so that this must boil out through the rust spot. Blood spots can be removed more easily if saturated with coal oil before washing. Salt put on freshly spilled ink will absorb the ink if more clean salt is put on as fast as the other becomes discolored. "MRS. H. L."

We are all much obliged for these suggestions, especially that with regard to the rust spots. My own method of removing these has been to moisten the spot with lemon juice, strew thickly with salt, and put in the hot sun. When the lemon juice dries more lemon and salt should be put on and the process repeated until the spot disappears. The plan given by the correspondent involves less time and work. I may add apropos of her use of salt for taking out freshly spilled ink that milk will take ink out of wash goods and that fresh ink can often be removed from the carpet by rubbing up at once with blotting paper, using a fresh piece as one becomes soaked and rubbing the spot vigorously until dry. I wish I could give exact instructions for removing the spots from the baby carriage, but the best method which occurs to me is to wash the stains well with a soft cloth dipped in hot suds and then to dry. Repeat the process several times. If the hot water and soap dull the luster of the leather, go over the places with another cloth dipped in a little olive oil or good furniture polish.

Dependent Upon Her Work.

"What may a poor girl who isn't strong and lives in a secluded country district several miles from any railway do to pay for a course of study through the mails? Please tell if you know of any healthful village or community where a poor girl who is dependent upon her work and has had some experience in teaching may get a position to teach in a subscription or public school during the summer months. Do you know the names of any syndicates? COUNTRY MAID.

Part of this question I must refer to our constituency. Perhaps some one among them may tell us of some such place as you describe or may be able to give you a suggestion for ways by which you may earn money to pay for the course of study you wish to take. So far as my experience and knowledge of positions of teachers in public schools go, such posts are held either by graduates of normal schools or by those who have had a similar course of training, and cannot be secured except by those who have had special instruction. It is another matter with teaching a private school, but for a situation like this private influence must generally be exerted. As to the methods by which you may support yourself while pursuing the study course, I am afraid I must have more information as to your powers before I can give a helpful answer. You do not say if you have any abilities in the line of music or photography or needle work or domestic accomplishments which might aid you in earning money, so that it is hard to lay down a course you might follow. I shall hope for further information along this line which may enable the Cornerites as well as myself to be of service to you. One thing more, do you mean newspaper or magazine syndicates by the last question in your letter, or do you refer to syndicates in other lines? I fear you think my replies very unsatisfactory, but if you will consider the matter, I am sure you will see how hard it is to reply to you with the limited knowledge I have gained from your letter. I have your address on file and shall be happy to give it to any one who thinks he or she can be of service to you.

To Keep Squirrels Out of Trees.

"Here is a suggestion which may help some one: To keep squirrels and cats out of trees cut a strip of sheet tin or of galvanized iron a foot wide and the shape of a Dutch collar. Fasten it around the tree too high for the animals to jump over, having the flaring edge of the collar down. Rats are kept off ships by slipping funnels over the ropes in this way when the boats are fastened at the pier. "MRS. W."

Thank you both for the recipe and for the suggestion about the trees. At my own place in the country my heart has been wrung again and again by finding that nests have been robbed of their young by the invading cats. There has seemed no way to prevent their climbing the trees in which the birds had built. I am not sure that your method of prevention would serve to exclude the squirrels, since these are able to make flying leaps from the branches of one tree to the other, and I fancy the "Dutch collar" would prove effectual only on trees which stand alone or at a sufficient distance from a building to render it unlikely that the squirrels could spring from the roof or the top of adjoining trees into the branches they wish to reach.

Offers an Ear Trumpet.

"I have an ear trumpet to offer to some one who needs it and will be glad to send it to any address you may give me. "MRS. H. A. W."

Printing your offer on this page is sure to bring a prompt application for the ear trumpet and I shall pass the request on to you at once. Thank you for your personal letter and explanation. Such accidents may happen to us all and I can readily understand how it occurred. Your gift will do as much good now as it would have done earlier.

Are You Afraid of Thirteen?

Many people who won't admit that they are superstitious in any other way have a decidedly uneasy feeling when there are thirteen present at the table. Have you this feeling? Would you sit down to a table where thirteen persons were to be present? Have you ever done so, and, if so, what happened?

"The Tribune" will pay $1 for each letter published on this subject. Address Editor of the Thirteen Contest, "Sunday Tribune," Chicago.

The Engineer Was Killed.

On Christmas day of 1911 my husband and I entertained at a family Christmas dinner. After we all were seated at the table, it was remarked that there were just thirteen of us, and we laughed and joked about it. On Nov. 13, 1912, my husband, a locomotive engineer, was oiling his engine, No. 513, when another engine, No. 138, was backed into his and he was instantly killed. MRS. R. L.

Thirteen Days Later.

Last year a friend of mine was 13 years old on March 13, 1913. She gave a dinner party for thirteen guests. In just exactly thirteen days from her birthday this friend fell from a second story window and landed on a cement walk below. She was injured so fatally that she did not recover. L. M. E.

The Russian Superstition.

In a certain part of Russia the peasants are very superstitious in regard to a child's thirteenth birthday. It is said that if, no matter what for, they are outdoors on their birthday, they are sure to die within the year.

Two years ago, when I still lived in Russia, a little girl was invited to spend her thirteenth birthday at her grandma's house. She went there the day before, leaving a sister afflicted with piththeria at her own home.

On the afternoon of her birthday a summons came for her to go home immediately, as her sister was dying. She was afraid, but her love for her sister was greater than her superstitious fears, so she want.

The sister, however, did not die. The child whose birthday it was caught the disease and died two weeks later. B. K.

"Eat, Drink, and Be Merry."

I sat down one time to a table of thirteen. There was no accident about this occurrence because one of the guests present previously discovered that he would be the thirteenth if he sat down, and refused. Another guest present arose and offered him his place, saying that he was not afraid to be the thirteenth to sit down.

After the rest were seated this tempter of fate sat down and picked up his place card. It read, "Eat, drink, and be merry, for tomorrow you die!"

He was killed the next day in a street car accident. L. B.

The TRIBUNE COOK BOOK

EDITED BY JANE EDDINGTON

Jane Eddington's articles are printed every day in "The Daily Tribune."

At this season of the year the cooking editor is likely to receive inquiries concerning the mango. These inquiries vary from year to year, for, whereas there used to come requests for mango pickle recipes, now the question comes, "what is the mango and what is its use?"

The mango is a tropical fruit with a large seed. When it is ripe it is sweet, but is likely to suggest turpentine. When it is green it is sometimes cooked plain or stewed, when it resembles apple sauce, according to all reports, but the most general use made of the green mango during the last 300 years has been to pickle it.

In pickling the green mango the seed is taken out, the space filled with a highly spiced mixture tied or sewed in, and the whole preserved in a prepared vinegar. This pickle originated in India, where the fruit seems first to have grown, and that country is the home of the chutney and other highly spiced mixtures. In the chutney and in pickle the mango has been introduced to the whole civilized world.

Now, with the advent of cold storage, the ripe mango is being introduced to the world outside the tropics, and has been in our own markets at this season. At present it is grown in many tropical lands and islands, including some of our own possessions. We buy it and eat it out of hand, but this is about all the use we are likely to make of it at present prices.

One must read far and wide to find recipes for mango pickles and sometimes the information obtained is no more definite than "Stuff them with horseradish," etc. Neither the professional cooks nor the cooks of the schools give recipes for this relish, yet several scores of recipes may be found in special collections made by groups of housewives or by epicures.

After long search not one recipe has been found which tells why green peppers, green melons, cucumbers, and peaches, when stuffed and pickled, are called mangoes or pickled mangoes. If one may hazard a guess, these originated because the East Indian pickle, made in the home of spices, was long considered one of the most rare of relishes, as real Indian chutney is today, and hence arose imitations of it in temperate climates, using materials at hand.

And let it be said that these materials should be of the best, the spices of the freshest obtainable, the vinegar of the highest grade, and the mustard seed a more negligible quantity than it is.

The commercial mango pickle, which has shared with dill pickles and pickled limes the favor of generations of school children, to their harm, has usually been a stuffed green pepper, tied up with a great deal of string and almost oozing mustard seed. As pickles mostly have a negative food value, the best that can be made are none too good.

For those who would like to know something about the history and use of this fruit there are now several pieces of literature obtainable. One is a government bulletin, No. 12 of the bureau of plant industry of the Hawaiian station. This tells how to eat the fruit, etc.

In one of the English food dictionaries it says: "Of all the tropical fruit, the mango is considered the most agreeable to Europeans. It is like a short thick cucumber in form. The stone is thick, and the pulp melts in the mouth with a cooling sweetness. There are many sorts of mangoes. They are mostly used for chutneys and similar compounds. Mango relish, mango chutney, and mango pickles may all be bought at first class grocery stores. Each mango, before pickling, is opened and stuffed with capers and chillies and all are useful adjuncts to hashes and stews, broiled and grilled fish, as well as to cold meat."

The government bulletin tells a great deal about the varieties of what it says has been called the "king of fruits" and one deserving a high rank, although there have been bestowed upon it "many damaging epithets." It says that there are 500 varieties in India, and forty distinct forms in Hawaii. It claims that it has high food value, and has been the important part of the sustenance of the natives of India in its season. And though the Indian cook has made the products mentioned, beside preserves, jelly, and marmalade from the fruit, either fresh or green, its possibilities are quite boundless and hardly developed as yet.

From all accounts one may judge that the mango has been to the tropics what the apple is to the temperate zone. What it will be to the people of the temperate zone is yet to be seen. On June 14 last a single mango was purchased in one of our fruit stores for 15 cents, and the following observations noted down: Blossom end like apple. Deep yellowish pink skin. Clingstone with a vengeance, with long hairy fibers attached to it. The nearer the stone the nearer the taste was like spruce or juniper pitch. A semimelon or squash odor. Its own peculiar sweetness.

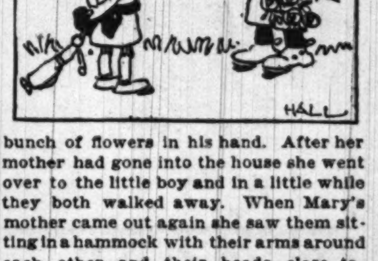
Did You Ever Have a Summer Flirtation?

Mary Got a Bouquet.



Little Mary, aged 4, had just arrived at a summer resort when she saw a little boy a trifle older than herself with a large bunch of flowers in his hand. After her mother had gone into the house she went over to the little boy and in a little while they both walked away. When Mary's mother came out again she saw them sitting in a hammock with their arms around each other and their heads close together while the little boy's flowers lay in Mary's lap. B. C.

Now They're "Courtin'."

While on the beach last summer I struck up a flirtation with a girl "who belonged to one of the first families of Chicago." I myself boasted of being a millionaire's son (I am a clerk, working for $12 per week). We parted and I saw no more of her until one day when I dropped into a "short order" house and she appeared in a cap and apron. However, when we found ourselves on an equal footing, our old affection returned, and we are now "courting." J. C.

Where He "Fell Down."

Three years ago I was spending the month at one of the northern lakes with my aunt, who was well acquainted with most of the guests, and introduced me to a splendid young machinist. I knew him to be the brother of a prominent young judge and of a good family, but understood he was a self-made man and that he had accumulated quite a little property.

Everything went merrily as the proverbial wedding bell and he made my visit delightful, with boating, dancing, and motoring, naming his new motorboat for me, going before sunrise for water lilies, in fact playing the devoted at every opportunity.

I began to think I liked him pretty well and was sorry when my visit was over. But alas! love's young dream had a sudden awakening and for a while it seemed like a nightmare, for when I had been home only two days I received a letter from him and such a letter! Not one-half the words were correctly spelled and the writing was hardly legible. He actually asked me to "marrie" him, called me his "swethart," and told me he had missed me at the last "picknick."

I did not receive an answer to my reply declining the honor, but married the other fellow. L. R.

You probably have had a thrilling or a humorous encounter with a real or imagined burglar. Probably you can remember that time when you awoke to feel the "cold steel of the revolver" pressing against your neck or the time you almost ended the career of sister Susan, the somnambulist, by a blow of an Indian club which luckily hit the chandelier instead. For every letter either exciting or funny that is published the Tribune will pay $1. Address Editor of the Burglar Contest, The Sunday Tribune, Chicago.

FALL HATS OF MANY STYLES.

mall hat of white satin with gh black aigrette.

Medium sized hat of black taffeta with softly rolling brim.

Close fitting black velvet toque with white paradise placed vertically to give the new broad effect.

One of the new, excessively broad black velvet hats, trimmed with white ostrich.

White satin hat with broad black velvet band. Ostrich feather, which has returned to favor, trims it.

BY LOUISE JAMES.

HAT the vogue for the black velvet hat, which has extended over into the summer from last spring, should be still further developed d popularized this coming fall seems rdly possible. That it will be more or worn is a fact, but there is no likeli- od that it will be any distinguishing ature of the new styles.

lks are to figure more widely than retofore in the millinery world. A silk that matches in shade and material suit that it is worn with is to be cidedly modish. Strong contrasts will t be encouraged, nor striking combina- ns of colors. We have had too much that already, and the reaction against is already in full swing. Primarily, wever, hats are growing large. Not h, but wide. Feathers and fantasies not stretch up the way they did a few eks ago. They dart sideways, across e brims. Everything is being done to phasize the width.

f course it will be some time before this plete change of hat silhouette will be cted. There will be women who will g to the small, sidewise perched hat the upstanding aigrette, and refuse wear any other kind, especially those en who have achieved a smart coif- , just as there will be women who will rly refute the idea of tight fitting ques and declare that as long as the shines and the winds give them breath they will never take part in the encouragement of such atrocities.

But the large hat and the tight basque are hardly synonymous, though, according to prevalent opinion, they are both here to stay. The large hat is becoming to the average woman. In June there was a decided effort made to bring it into general use during the summer months. But the effort was only partially successful. So we see it being repeated now with increased vim and determination on the part of the couturiers and designers.

Felt in all the pastel shades is to be stylish in the early fall months, just as it has been stylish for the last ten weeks. One exquisite model I saw lately was of flesh pink felt, laced with ivory satin and then trimmed with an irregular wreath of diminutive rosebuds. Felt and straw have been more or less of a unique combination this summer, and so apparently felt and silk and felt and satin are to succeed it during the approaching weeks.

It seems as though there were to be an even greater variety than ever in hats this fall. There are two types of the large ones which so far are standing out rather prominently. One of them is the large sailor shape, of either velvet or silk, with tiny little curling feathers caught about the brim. The other is the hat with the crown of some substantial material, such as silk or satin, and the brim stiffly wired and transparent.

There is no suggestion so far that transparency is not going to be one of the distinctive fall fashion features of a certain type of hat. Sometimes this brim is edged with beads, and again it is merely trimmed with a delicate wreath of flowers.

It would be wrong, however, to give out the impression that small hats are entirely out of style; they are not. They are perhaps more weird than before, more eccentric, more sharply turned up at various startling angles. There is a hint of the empire about them, too, or a bit of an exaggeration of the directoire. They have brims which take a sudden upward sweep and then end at last in a tiny point which is just the point of a tiny feather, or again they go all the way around in a brim without any crown at all.

It is to be doubted if the crownless hats last over into the fall, except for those women who never step out except in their machines. Crownless hats are so utterly impractical, nothing more, in fact, than an attractive headdress, and for winter wear, except in closed conveyances, they are an absolute menace to the health.

With the tendency toward broad brims comes an accompanying tendency to sparse trimming. Nor are they so bizarre when the hat is broad as when the hat is small and chic.

JANE BARTON The Home Dressmaker

Sewing for the Small Daughter.

HILDREN have a trying habit of running through their clothes in midseason. You may have planned their summer wardrobe generous- but by midsummer are horrified to find are short of clothes. Nothing re- ns but to make more. Often dress- kers are off on their vacations and you y be too far from the stores to get he bargain" dresses that abound. en country stores, however, afford e pretty materials, so the wisest plan to make the needed garments and make em as simply as possible.

If a child has run through the waists her dresses and the skirts are still mparatively good make use of them. This can be done in several ways.

First, rip the skirt from the waist, ather the top, and adjust it to an inch ide band. For this band cut a two and quarter inch strip of the material on e straight, or if you have none, make of white muslin. Arrange the gath- s with the greater part of the fullness t the back, or if the skirt is wide enough ut in shallow lengthwise plaits. Should our previous skirt have been gored to s blouse it may just as easily be arranged a band. It will doubtless be necessary o lengthen the skirt when finished, so rip ut the hem carefully and turn up to roper length after the skirt is rehung.

It is not good for the growing girl to ave tight waist bands, so to prevent slip- ping work at least five vertical button- holes in the skirt band, one in the center front, one at each side, and two at the center back in such position that both will go on one button and keep the placket lat. The buttons to correspond are ewed to the underwaist. This is simpler and cooler than sewing the skirt to its tted lawn or muslin underwaist.

To wear with several skirts one of the new middy blouses is both smart and easily made. For a 9 year old girl one will need about a yard and a quarter of thirty-six inch material. This may be white linen, kindergarten cloth, galatea, or even one of the cotton crepes, though these are more practical—not needing ironing—than stylish.

Get a pattern for a raglan sleeve middy s it marks this year's vintage. The only eams are one under each arm and those olding the sleeves that meet it. Make hese seams in a flat fell; that is, lay the louse flat on the table and arrange the leeve on top, according to notches. Baste osely, baste the under arm seam, try n, making any alteration, though if you et your proper number of pattern there eed be little change. Open the under rm seams and putting the blouse on the able again turn in the edges of the raglan eams, first those on the right side, then the wrong. Stitch on the machine, un- ss you are working away from one, when e seams may be run by hand and neatly briar stitched in mercerized cotton to cover the line of sewing.

Cut the neck in a shallow V in front and rounding a little below the base of the throat in the back and finish with a three-quarter inch facing—finished. The easiest way to make this facing is to lay your piece of material on the blouse and cut the shape of the neck opening. Cut a piece about an inch and an eighth deep to permit seams. Do not stretch the neck in joining this facing. Pin into position with right side to right side, baste, sew the narrow seam, remove bastings, turn, and crease or baste along the edge. Turn in a shallow seam on the opposite edge of the facing and stitch by machine or briar stitch to match the sleeve seams.

Cut a five inch opening down the center front and face back with straight strips an inch and a quarter wide. Punch four eyelets through these double thicknesses on each side with a coarse stiletto, overcast, then work in eyelet stitch—which is nothing more than over and over, putting the stitches close together. This eyelet work may be done in white, though if the seams are briar stitched in color use the eyelets in the same. By the way, always set the color of your mercerized cotton by putting the skeins in strong salt water. An easy way to do it is to have a tumbler of cold water to which has been added a flat tablespoonful of salt and put a skein or two to each tumbler.

It makes for easy handling to do most of the trimming before the underarm seams are finally sewed. The sleeve ends just above the elbow are loose and may be cut straight on the bottom or can be shorter at the back of the arm and cut with a rounding slash. Face the bottom with a two inch facing and make a similar facing or hem on the bottom of the blouse. The underarm seam may be left open the depth of the facing or a little more. Finish the seam by sewing in a plain seam, then turning to one side, cutting the under part away and stitching the edge—if a machine stitch is used. Otherwise sew the plain seam and turn in the edges neatly and run by hand. Set a patch pocket three and a half inches wide by four long at a point on the left side of the chest. This should have the top on a line with the third eyelet. Turn in the edges and stitch or briar stitch to the blouse.

As the neck is rather plain untrimmed follow the outline at the back and to an inch or so beyond the raglan seams and cut a band two inches wide ending in a point at each side. Stitch on the edge and again a half inch within. Stitch the facings on sleeves and bottom in the same way, or the facing may be set on right side like a band.

If your middy blouse is to be worn with several skirts these bands may be white briar stitched in white or a color and worn with a soft colored silk tie to match the various skirts. Lace through the eyelets and tie in a bow at base of neck opening. If to wear with a particular skirt instead of the facings use bands of the material on bottom, neck, and sleeves. Stitch on edge and again a half inch in either edge.

Another treatment of a worn waist is to rip the skirt as before, but instead of gathering it to a band, turn down the edges, fit it in to the waist line, stitch the top to an inside belt, and work four buttonholes through the skirt and belt in front and four at the back to wear the skirt as the high waist line ones of the grown-ups. Short waisted effects are as stylish as the long waists.

Now make a simple raglan blouse of thin white material, lawn, dotted swiss, or dimity. Cut this in a shallow V in front and close around the base of the throat at the back. Face back fronts and fasten with buttons and buttonholes. Set the buttons on the lower part of the blouse to correspond with those on the skirt. These buttons may be big pearl ones from three-quarters to an inch in diameter and form part of the trimming.

From the worn blouse it is generally possible to get a little turndown collar and turned up cuffs to trim the thin blouse. If you do not like the entirely plain blouse make it with an inch and a half box plait set its own width either side of the front opening. Have similar plaits at the back. These are put in before cutting out the blouse.

If only the sleeves are worn cut out the sleeves and cut the material into large loose armholes; also cut away the fronts and back to within three inches of the belt and make an oblong or broad V opening. Stitch on the edges, having faced, and again one-half within and use as a jumper with separate guimpes. If you have extra material but not enough to make an entire waist set the skirt to a band and cut a separate jumper of the material. These are effective if made with five inch tabs four inches wide to fall over the skirt at the under arm seams. This jumper may be cut all in one or the tabs may be added to the bottom.

A charming little frock simple to make can be developed in white Paris muslin or dotted swiss. Make it in one piece with kimono sleeves just to turn the elbow. Finish with neat French seams and to form a short waist line work eyelets in ovals an inch long, two to a group, and each group an inch and a half or two inches apart. The easiest way to work these ovals is to draw them narrow, then cut a lengthwise slit and turn under edges with the needle—baste, if necessary, and work closely over and over. If a long waisted effect is preferred the eyelet may be set far enough down to give a short skirt from seven to nine inches deep. The best plan is to gauge the place for the eyelets by tying a ribbon around the dress to give the desired length of waist.

No lessening of this store's attractiveness when days are hot—for this is Chicago's coolest shop

"My Most Embarrassing Moment Was When—"

The Tribune will pay $1 for every letter published on the subject: "The Most Embarrassing Moment of My Life Was When ——." Address Contest Editor, Sunday Tribune, Chicago.

Both Were Embarrassed.

The most embarrassing episode in my experience was when I was learning to roller skate. The musicians' platform was built just large enough to hold the piano and the front legs of the revolving piano stool, and the back legs rested on two small wooden blocks extending out into the rink. The pianist, a lady with a wonderful head of hair, played while we skated. We went faster and faster around the hall and I felt like an amateur no longer, when suddenly I felt I was losing my balance. I grabbed for the nearest object, which was the musician's head; the stool turned, and I fell, pulling my support with me. On arising I found in my hand a handful of beautiful auburn puffs. I started to return them to their owner but she had fled. I. L.

He Woke the Echoes.

The most embarrassing moment of my life was when I was in church one Sunday with my husband. During the sermon he fell asleep and, as he was accustomed to snore, I wanted to awaken him before anything embarrassing happened. I took my hatpin, meaning to give him a little prick to awaken him, but in my excitement I pressed harder than I expected and he, not realizing where he was, jumped up with a roar that reëchoed through the arches of the silent church. M. M.

The Dollar Wasn't Welcomed.

My most embarrassing moment was when I went shopping not long ago and before I was aware I had spent—as I supposed—every cent I had. To get home, I would have to borrow money, so I started for my uncle's office, when I chanced to meet a friend, of whom I asked a loan of 50 cents. She was starting to get out the money, and, as I was perspiring so, I opened my bag and pulled out my handkerchief, from which, to my great embarrassment, rolled a dollar bill. P. F.

* *

He Who Hesitates.

I lived in a small town, but often visited my cousin in the city. While at her home we were invited to a club dance, which was a very stylish affair.

A very nice young gentleman stepped up to me and asked me for a dance. I had not been used to the late dances, for I had not been in the city for some time, but I consented to dance with him and he asked me if I hesitated. I said, "No; I'll dance with you now."

He explained the new hesitation waltz, and when I saw my mistake that was the most embarrassing moment in my life. G. M.

It Was His Nickname.

One day, while walking along a busy street, seeing a peanut and popcorn wagon, I thought I'd try some of its wares. I walked towards the wagon trying to decide what I would like, from a number of items printed on the glass door, which read: "Peanut slim, peanut brittle, salted peanuts, popped corn."

With the idea of trying something new, a summer novelty, I supposed, I said: "I want 10 cents' worth of peanut slim."

Imagine my embarrassment when a tall, slim man inside, becoming very confused, said: "Pardon me, lady, I'm Peanut Slim." A. G. B.

Tell Us Your Best Fish Story.

But They Didn't Purr.

My grandfather was a great fisherman and frequently the fish which he caught were not dead when he reached home. These he placed in an aquarium. When he placed his hand in the tank the fish would rub up against it caressingly, much in the manner of a pet cat, pushing each other out of the way in their anxiety to touch his hand. S. A.

* *

Thought it Was a Pill.

My brother was fishing in the St. Joseph river, in northern Indiana, and came home with a six pound pickerel. When the fish was cleaned an ordinary sized golf ball was found, which the fish had swallowed. The golf ground near the river's bank was probably responsible for the fish's unique meal. E. A. R.

* *

A Derrick as Fish Pole.

Two years ago I witnessed a peculiar way of catching large fish, a huge derrick playing the part of the rod, hook, and line.

This derrick was on a dredge drawing clay from the bed of a river. After repeating the operation a number of times the shovel again plunged to the depths of the river, and when it came to the surface the clay seemed very much alive. This proved later to be a large fish, of a variety commonly known as suckers, weighing close to 200 pounds. The fish, being caught in the clay, was unable to escape. F. W.

* *

A Four Footed Fisherman.

I didn't catch the fish, but my dog did. Togo is a water spaniel and enjoys going to the river with us.

One spring the water was high and big fish were being speared in the weeds along the river where the water backed in. A party of us went fishing one day, taking Togo with us. A few minutes later we heard him barking loudly further up stream.

I went to see what could be the trouble and found him with both front paws holding down a five pound cat fish in shallow water. C. D.

Playbills of the Week.

MME. VICKA REGONIA At McVickers

Garrick—"Peg o' My Heart" enters upon its sixth week. The management, now that litigation between Oliver Morosco and J. Hartley Manners has been obviated, can see no reason why the run should not continue.

Grand Opera house—"The Whirl of the World," a New York Winter garden show, continues its record summer run. Featured in the cast are Howard and Howard, Miss Lucille Cavanaugh, Miss Elizabeth Goodall, Miss Emily Lea, and many others.

La Salle Opera house—"The Elopers," a musical comedy, with Miss Frances Kennedy, Louis Kelso, Willie Dunlay, and others in the cast. The inspired press agent furnishes the information that the show's "two dozen American Beauty buds are irresisitible to both ear and eye."

Powers' — Ruth Chatterton in "Daddy Long Legs." Twentieth week.

VARIETIES—

Majestic—Arnold Daly and company, including Miss Doris Mitchell, in "Ask No Questions," one of the Anatol plays. Others on the bill are Miss Marie Courtney, English comedienne and dancer; "Romeo the Great," trained chimpanzee; Sacha Piatov and Kitty Glasen, dancing; Tameo Kajayama, caligraphic expert; Van Hoven, comedy magician; McMahon, Diamond, and Clemence, scarecrow dancers, and Fred Kornau, European whistler.

Great Northern hippodrome—Mrs. Bob Fitzsimmons, assisted by Charles Diana, in a comedy sketch, and the Davenport Models in a posing act reproducing famous statuary. Others on the two bills are Whitney's Operatic Dolls, novelty singing act; Howard's Dining Car Minstrels; the seven Terrible Terries, comedy acrobats; Juggling Wagners; Margaret Doorley, soprano; Cole, Russell, and Davis, comedians; Marie King Scott, the Hoosier girl, and the two Lowes, in a roping novelty.

McVicker's — Virginia Brooks, "Joan of Arc of West Hammond," who will talk on suffrage, etc.; the red bottle, wonder kettle, advertized to "do many marvelous things with liquid air"; Mme. Vicka Regonia, classic melodies; the Zancigs, telepathists, and the sixth edition of "The Million Dollar Mystery."

Colonial—The Burton Holmes Travelettes in "India Today"; Coakland, McBride, and Milo, Kammerer and Holland, Trennell Trio, Two Regos, Mr. and Mrs. Theodore La Joss, Figaro, E. H. Loeffler and company, and Beltrah and Beltrah. Beginning Thursday Bonnie Cruz, Cherry and Malone, Stanley and Smalley, and Challenger and Clifton.

MOTION PICTURES—

Olympic—Farewell performance today of "The Christian." Decorators tomorrow will begin work of putting the theater in shape for the reception of "Potash and Perlmutter," which will soon open the regular season.

Illinois—"Cabiria."

Studebaker—"The Littlest Rebel."

SUMMER PARKS—

Ravinia—Chicago Symphony orchestra.

White City—Panama, The Maid of the Mist, deep sea divers, the Hippodrome, and many things, including Knabenshue's passenger dirigible balloon, which makes flights daily.

Riverview—On Aug. 1 Pain's fireworks will present the capture of the city of Mexico by Gen. Scott's army in 1847. Today the Workmen's circle will give its annual picnic.

Forest park—Torcat's educated roosters, fifty in number, will head the free vaudeville show this week; dozens of other attractions.

Vaudeville Wit.

GREAT NORTHERN.

Bush and Shapiro—

"What's this I heard about a fight you had last night?"

"There wasn't any fight."

"Why, I heard you and Zabinski had a rumpus."

"O, we only had an argument. Zabinski and me, we don't speak together for three years now. Three years ago I bought all my goods from him, but he was always trying to soak me, so I quit and bought them from another fellow. And so for three years he won't speak to me."

"What's that got to do with last night?"

"Everything. Last night when I got down to the lodge they had started already. Maybe I made a little noise as I came in and as soon as I did Zabinski shouted not keep quiet but 'Order, order.'"

"Well, as president of the lodge he had a right to do that."

"What, just because he is the president of the lodge he can make me order when I don't want to buy his goods?"

"Never mind, Abe. Come on and take a ride with me in my auto and you'll forget your troubles."

"No, not me. I don't want to ride in an auto with you driving."

"What, you don't want to take a nice spin out into the country. Think of all the nice scenery you can see."

"Yes, but you never can tell when you are going to put a hole in that scenery."

"I'm not such a fast goer."

"No, not when it comes to buying drinks. That's the reason you've got an auto and I haven't."

FRANCES KENNEDY and HER CHILDREN
PHOTO MOFFETT

Miss Frances Kennedy is a Chicago actress who in the several years she has been seen in musical comedy has gained a considerable following. In private life she is the wife of Tom Johnson, a Chicago attorney. The Johnsons have two fine children—Tom Jr. and Frances Kennedy II. Mrs. Johnson is quite domestic and is extremely proud of her children. This picture emphasizes that and also emphasizes why she is.

Miss Kennedy is one of the featured members of the cast now playing "The Elopers" at the La Salle Opera house.

News Notes of the Plays and Players.

Harry J. Ridings, manager of the Grand Opera house, will return to Chicago Monday from New York, where he has spent the last week in the offices of Cohan & Harris conferring on plans for the coming season. Two weeks ago Mr. Ridings visited Atlantic City to review the opening of "Under Cover." This play will open the Grand about Sept. 1. "It Pays to Advertise," "The Miracle Man," "Wanted, $22,000," Cohan's new revue, which will be called "Cohan's Current Revue," and "Love Among the Lions" are possible candidates for the Grand.

Bert Lennon, a Chicago newspaper man, wrote the music, and John C. Miller the lyrics for "I'm On the River of Doubt," a song now being rehearsed for the "Melody Maids," one of the attractions on the Progressive circuit. It will be featured at the Haymarket theater, beginning Aug. 1.

Miss Rêne Detling, who until last fall was a stranger to the stage except for appearances in concert, this season will sing the rôle of Juliska in Savage's production of the operetta "Sari." Miss Detling is a daughter of D. A. Detling, assistant city auditor of Akron, O. She received a musical training in Cleveland, and also took a dramatic course with a view to the stage. She sang in a church choir in Akron and for two years filled concert engagements in the middle west.

Last autumn she decided to try for the stage. She was assigned to a minor part in "Sari," then in its New York run, and was appointed understudy to Juliska. She spent several hours each week with a vocal teacher and studied dramatic reading. She continued the training all last season, and has kept it up this summer. Her reward was the prima donna rôle.

Joseph and Frederic Santley this fall will each head an organization in Philip Bartholomae's musical comedy, "When Dreams Come True." Both shows will make extended western tours. Shortly after the holidays Joseph will be seen in Chicago in a new play and in April Frederic will sail for London to appear in "When Dreams Come True."

To view a battle scene for a motion picture the entire city of Atlanta, Ga., took a "day off." "The Littlest Rebel," the play which Edward Peple wrote about the struggle of Gen. Grant's and Gen. Lee's army, has been arranged for motion picture views and it was in making of the great battle scene in that play, which starts the week at the Studebaker theater tomorrow, that the population of Atlanta enjoyed a holiday.

The scene pictures "The Battle of Seven Days." Daring riding was done by "Slim Jim," a California cowboy, and the horseflesh loving southerners turned out to see him mount a steep hill on a spirited charger. At the summit a bluff prevents the equine progress and the rider is thrown, falling from a bluff to the bottom, several hundred feet below.

The story of "The Littlest Rebel" deals with the loyalty of Virgie Carey and two brothers, Joseph and James Dudley, who were overseers on the Carey plantation before the war broke out.

When the hostilities are declared the plantation owner and the overseers fight in the ranks of the opposing armies and meet during battle.

One Extra Tire Or a Half-Inch Wider Tire

Is This Not Better Than an Extra Price?

We address this to tire buyers who pay more than Goodyear prices.

Some tires cost one-third more. You pay for three such tires all that four Goodyears cost.

Do you believe that three tires were ever made which would outlast four of Goodyears? If not, why lose that extra tire?

Or you can do this:

The cost of an extra-price tire will buy you a half-inch larger Goodyear. And the larger tire will fit your rim.

The cost of an extra-price 30x3 will buy you a 31x3½.

The cost of an extra-price 32x3½ will buy you a 33x4.

The cost of an extra-price 36x4½ will buy you a 37x5.

So with other sizes. If you wish to pay that extra price, why not get this extra size?

But they buy the utmost in a tire. They are all that you should pay.

Extra Features

The No-Rim-Cut feature ends rim-cutting completely. That's the greatest cause of tire ruin.

Our "On-Air" cure saves the countless blow-outs due to wrinkled fabric. That extra cure costs us $450,000 per year.

All-Weather treads—the premier anti-skids. Tough, double-thick and enduring. As smooth as a plain tread, yet with deep, sharp, resistless grips.

Pay the New Prices

Goodyear No-Rim-Cut tires are costing half what they used to cost. Last year alone we dropped our prices 28 per cent.

Our present prices are due to mammoth output, new efficiency, new equipment.

Goodyear tires outsell any other.

Today they are gaining new users faster than ever before in our history. Sheer merit has made them the most popular tires in the world.

The price of Goodyears is all that tires should cost.

Davis Cup Contest the Week's Big Social Event.

THE great event of the last seven days, both from a social and sporting point of view, was the contest for the Davis cup between the Australians and Canadians at the Onwentsia club the last three days of the week.

The Onwentsia tennis courts have been converted into a good sized amphitheater by building grand stands around all four sides.

A lively thunder storm at the end of the first match, that between Brookes and Schwengers, drove the crowds to cover. Before shelter was attained some of the prettiest costumes had been thoroughly drenched. Mrs. "Billy" Hibbard's very smart plum colored raincoat was coveted by all her fellow women. Undaunted by the shower, the majority of the throng stayed for the second match.

The Lake Forest Players must look to their laurels. The young girls and boys who played in the amateur vaudeville that same evening at the Ogden Armours press them hard in the matter of dramatic talent. It was an open air performance for the benefit of the Ridge Farm Preventorium.

Many luncheons and dinners are on the tapis, and Lake Forest is thoroughly roused from what has been up to now one of the quietest summers on record there.

◆

The Saddle and Cycle is the favorite rallying point for the little band of Chicagoans who believe in Chicago as a summer resort. The airy, flower bedight corridor was filled with diners last Wednesday evening, many of whom had the courage to dance after dinner in spite of the soaring thermometer.

Said one nondancer, as he watched the terpsichoreans from the safe and comfortable vantage ground of the star-roofed brick terrace, "Why dance, when you can perspire so comfortably sitting here?"

The latest dancing stunt is for the music to play a few bars of lively one step, then drop into the hesitation waltz, then back again into the "rag," so that the dancers are kept continually on the alert and their brains as well as their heels must work.

Among those still basking in Chicago's climatic allurements are the Charles Hamills, the Arnold Scudders, the Francis Taylors, the Frederick Delanos, and the Merrill Dunns. They all find many opportunities for out of door life even though city bound, and seldom dine at home on pleasant evenings, preferring alfresco meals either at the Saddle and Cycle club, the Chicago Yacht club, the South Shore Country club, the Midway Gardens, the Bismarck Garden, or some other of the many attractive open air places which are beginning to give Chicago the charm and air of a foreign city.

Not even in New York will you find anything to equal our open air dining places. We owe to our large German population the combination of excellent dinners and first class music which can be found at various accessible places within the city limits, and which do so much to mitigate the lot of those who spend the hot months in town.

The South Shore Country club is undertaking extensive alterations and improvements. Of the building as it now stands only the handsome ballroom will be left. A fine dining room of the same size and shape will balance it at the north end, the two to be connected by a long, wide corridor with reading rooms, reception rooms, and card rooms opening off on either side. The ballroom is one of the most effective rooms of its kind in this part of the world, being 70x110 feet in size, with pillars and balconies and a perfect floor for dancing.

The present restaurant, or pavilion, with its rustic bridges and miniature lagoons, will be entirely eliminated, and opposite the club's main entrance broad steps will lead up to what is to be called a solarium, a glass roofed pavilion looking out over the lake. Here growing plants and wicker chairs and tables will make a charming "lounge," as such places are called in England, a gathering place for members and their friends.

The present entrance is to be enlarged so that four motor cars can land their passengers at the same time. Directly on entering the men will find their reception and dressing rooms on the left and the women theirs on the right, thus doing away with the present necessity of going into the main gathering place, hall, or reception gallery with all the outdoor habiliments on—an awkward matter.

Under the solarium will be a grillroom with a billiard hall in the center of it. The outward aspect of the club will not be so much altered as its interior, as the pergolas, which are such a feature of it, will still inclose the great entrance court.

Only part of these changes will be made this summer, the new dining hall with temporary kitchens being planned for this season, so that the rest of the improvements can be carried out next year without stopping the club life. The 1,800 members can continue to lunch and tea and dine and dance there as much as ever in spite of building operations.

Fred Bode, the president of the organization, is full of enthusiasm for the proposed enlarging of the club's facilities and intent on carrying them out with as little disturbance as possible.

When he goes to Swedish as United States minister Ira Nelson Morris will be going to one of the mots aristocratic, conservative, and high bred courts of Europe. It ranks next to the Austrian court in its pride of birth. The possession of money counts for little or nothing in the highest circles of Swedish society. But ancient lineage is held in the deepest esteem. The Swedish royal family, the Bernadottes, are considered parvenus by the real old aristocracy of the country. The great Swedish families dating back many centuries have intermarried much, so that every one knows every one else and the tone is very clannish.

The golden age of Sweden was in the time of Gustavus Adolphus and the thirty years' war, at the close of which the Swedish generals and war lords returned to their country with much spoils of battle and many new ideas of civilization and its possibilities. The finest of their old castles and chateaux date from that era and show distinctly the influence of France and Italy, to which lands many of their nobles traveled in the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries.

In sending American representatives to foreign courts our government is more apt to be influenced by considerations connected with local party politics than by the requirements at the court at the other end, so that sometimes people quite unfit to represent us properly land in ancient court circles and provoke comment and derision. Two or three decades ago there was such an American minister at Stockholm, whose remarks and performances were the talk of the town. On one occasion he nearly provoked a war with Denmark. At a court ball at the palace at Stockholm, where the Danish ambassador—a short, stout personage—wore the court costume of his country, the main feature of which was a crimson waistcoat, our representative went up to him and, clapping him hard on the back, shouted cheerfully:

"How are you, my fine, fat flamingo?"

The "flamingo" nearly burst with rage.

There is no danger of Mr. Morris' outraging any sensibilities. He is a man of the world, has traveled much, and consorted with foreigners. He and Mrs. Morris will probably entertain a good deal. They are notable hosts at home and abroad.

◆

Last winter they gave a famous ball in Rome at which the souvenirs were gold wrist watches, each engraved with "compliments of Ira Nelson Morris." Alas for human frailty! The next morning the pawnshops of Rome were filled with gold wrist watches. The principal pawnbroker, to whom fifteen of these had been offered, even called up our ambassador, Thomas Nelson Page, and asked who Ira Nelson Morris was and if these had been stolen from him.

The Swedish nobles may not be any richer than those of Rome, but they will not run and pawn their ball souvenirs the morning after they have received them.

Mrs. Ira Nelson Morris' jewels will make a great showing at the court in Stockholm. The Swedish women dress well, but simply. They are very chic and have much more of the French savoir faire than their near neighbors, the Germans. Stockholm is sometimes called—with a fatuous lack of originality—the Paris of the north. It is noted for its excellent restaurants. It has also up to date theaters and fine opera.

An interesting and distinguished English jurist is coming to Chicago next month as the guest of the Chicago Bar association. This is Lord John Fletcher Moulton, or, as he is more properly called, Lord Justice Moulton, one of the great law lords of England. His title was conferred on him in 1912, when he was made lord of appeal in ordinary and member of the judicial committee of the privy council. He has a lot of other honors and the right to a whole alphabet after his name, each set of letters indicating some degree or membership in some distinguished society, English or foreign.

He has twice been married, his second wife having been an American woman, a daughter of Maj. A. H. Davis of Syracuse, N. Y., and Naples, Italy. She was Miss May Davis and a woman of rare attainments and personality. The Fletcher Moultons' house in Onslow square was noted during the second Lady Moulton's life for its beautiful entertainments.

The house had the advantage of having nine garden holdings behind it—that is, besides its own it had eight other gardens, all os planted that the whole little park was quite screened from the view of adjacent houses. Here Lady Moulton gave beautiful garden fêtes as well as many stately dinners in the big main dining room of the house. Her untimely death a few years ago put an end to a series of entertainments which was fast making hers one of the famous London houses. Among the noted guests to be met at the Moultons' were Sir John Lecky, the great historian; Sir John Tenniel, the celebrated Punch cartoonist; Sir Norman Lockyer, the famous astronomer, and a host of others, all renowned in some direction.

The Cyrus McCormicks have had constructed a fine swimming raft, with springboards for diving and all sorts of convenient contrivances for swimmers. This they had moored out in the lake off their Lake Forest place, "Walden," for the use of their household and friends.

It proved a temptation for the village swimmers, and one morning was missing from its moorings. One much like it was reported as being seen off the village park, and on investigation was found to be the McCormicks'. It was returned to its berth. Then, as the mountain couldn't go to Mahomet, a whole lot of Mahomets went to the mountain, and the raft was so occupied by the village swimmers that there was no room for the McCormicks and their friends.

As a way out of the difficulty the McCormicks have had built a duplicate raft, which they will donate to the village, and which will be moored off the town beach for the use of all, thus preserving private rights without hurting public feelings.

A garden fete is to be given next Friday afternoon in the lovely grounds of the William G. Hibbard Jrs., at Winnetka. The affair will be for the benefit of the Arden Shore open air camp at Lake Bluff. Hundreds of mothers and children from the slums of Chicago are given annual outings at this delightfully situated camp.

The Hibbard gardens are among the most attractive on the north shore, and the garden party will be both afternoon and evening, and will provide tea and bridge and dancing for those who come to it.

Miss Dorothy Crane has charge of the woman's golf for the season and there are competition matches every Friday morning. The second in the series of Saturday night dinner dances was given last night. At Evanston the Country club is having a number of entertainments, with one of the women members in charge of the weekly dinner dance.

SUMMER MUSIC

Opera, with Pasternack Directing, Will Begin Tomorrow Night.

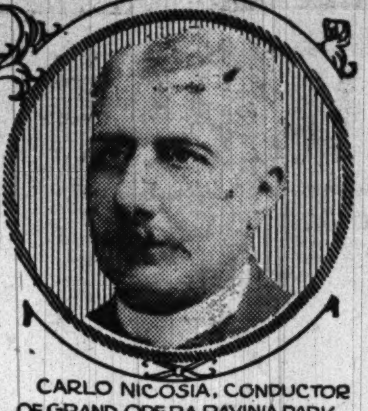
MME. LOUISE EDWINA IN "JEWELS OF THE MADONNA" CHICAGO GRAND OPERA CO.

MME. IVY SCOTT IN LOHENGRIN RAVINIA PARK.



CARLO NICOSIA, CONDUCTOR OF GRAND OPERA RAVINIA PARK.

Mme. Louise Edvina, one of the new members of the Chicago Grand Opera company, recently was given a gold thimble by Charpentier, composer of the opera "Louise." It was engraved "To Mme. Louise Edvina, the ideal 'Louise.'" Mme. Edvina has created the role of Fiora in "L'Amore dei Tre Re" for London. The opera will be given its first Chicago hearing during the season.

Ivy Scott, an Australian, made her American debut in "The Girl of the Golden West" (Henry Savage's production), and has since been heard in the Century opera house, New York. She is one of the principals in the Ravinia opera company, beginning her engagement tomorrow evening.

Carlo Nicosia will direct the orchestra during the operatic performances at Ravinia. He was musical director of Oscar Hammerstein's Philadelphia grand opera company.

By Ronald Webster.

FREDERICK STOCK has turned over his baton to Josef Pasternack and has concluded one of the most delightful series of summer evening concerts which Chicagoans have ever enjoyed. From the audiences during the last week it would seem hardly necessary for the management to add opera to the program.

Ravinia is in some ways one of the most potent educational elements in Chicago's music world. We have a plenty and more of serious minded concert goers—those who feel they are taking unto themselves great gobs of culture with every Friday concert, and an equal amount of social prestige with every premier of grand opera.

It is interesting to see the Friday concert goers at the Ravinia concerts. Their wrinkles of intense appreciation are smoothed out; their voices are actually sometimes heard laughing when some particularly humorous piece is played. It is dark and they need not be afraid of clapping industriously over "The Bee." Perhaps Ravinia patrons will actually come to enjoy the Friday concerts during the winter.

No one could find fault with the appreciation of the audiences there recently. The dancers have had a strong appeal. Dorothy Dickson and Carl Heisen in their up to date ballroom dances were compelled to give four encores Tuesday evening. When the latter came out on the stage and rather shame facedly asked "A waltz or a rag?" at least fifty persons shouted at once. There were about twenty-five to a side. They did the "rag" and then the waltz.

Opera, the latest novelty, begins tomorrow evening with a performance by the entire opera company of "Tales of Hoffman." The members have already arrived and are being rehearsed by Carlo Nicosia, who will conduct the performances, and by Mr. Pasternack.

If there are no singers of Mme. Melba's ability in the company, the patrons have more reason to be thankful. It is reasonably certain that the operas will be given for the dramatic and musical effect rather than to exhibit the voice of one star singer.

For the rest of the week the operas will be: Tuesday, "Carmen"; Wednesday, "I 'Pagliacci"; Thursday, "Secret of Suzanne" and one act from "Faust"; Friday, "Carmen"; Saturday, "Tales of Hoffman," and Sunday, "I 'Pagliacci."

On account of the changes necessary in the stage, the Monday afternoon concert will be omitted.

◆

An effort to arouse more interest in the Chicago bands will be made Wednesday evening, Aug. 5, when the band plays at Grant park. The evening is called the "Chicago Band association" night. A section of seats will be reserved for members during the concerts and a reception will be held after the performance at the Congress hotel. The association hopes through the meeting to be able to increase the band from forty-three to sixty instruments.

◆

How many years it will take for Americans to become thoroughly soaked in music as Germans are is suggested by a recent happening near Erfurt, Germany. A church choir there has been paid for generations by the village. The pay has been 400 liters of beer and four small lots near the village. The land gave out this year and the city refused to pay its traditional emolument. The choir struck. A compromise offer of the beer alone was not accepted. Somehow, when you think of it, our puritanical ancestors are sometimes at a disadvantage.

◆

The Century Opera company has concluded negotiations with Wolf-Ferrari, composer, for the production in New York of all his operas. Last year the repertory included "The Secret of Suzanne" and "The Jewels of the Madonna." The new works are "Le Donne Curiose" and "L'Amore Medico." Other of Wolf-Ferrari's works will be added later.

◆

Max Bendix is watching the attendance and thermometer at the Midway gardens and feels rather self-satisfied; chatty, too, for a man who exercises so violently in hot weather. In one of the warranted interviews given out periodically, Mr. Bendix pats Chicago on the back and incidentally himself. "The Boston Transcript is complaining," he says, "of a condition which it terms a 'music famine.'" Still quoting the Transcript he says: "From the closing of the 'pops' in June, until the opening of the symphony concerts there stretches an arid tract unwatered of reputable performances, except the municipal band concerts sown over the public parks with a sparseness due to the meager appropriation."

"What is true of Boston," says Mr. Bendix in persona propria, "is largely true of every large city in the United States with the sole exception of Chicago."

Now you see where Mr. Bendix is leading us. However, he tells the truth, as follows: "Ravinia has managed to carry on the tradition of summer music of the best kind which was established by Theodore Thomas when I was his concertmaster. And now the National Symphony also is carrying it on. Philanthropists seem of the belief that the public doesn't want music save in the season. The ease with which we have built up the National Symphony orchestra is proof that good music, even in summer, does not need a subsidy."

"Here endeth the lesson," you say! Possibly. Nevertheless the result of the experiment is a compliment to Chicago.

MISS EDITH REYNOLDS

Miss Edith Reynolds of 6517 Woodlawn avenue is treasurer of the Gamma Beta Pi sorority, which gave its annual ball at the South Shore Country club last week. Miss Reynolds is also a charter member of the sorority and was the head of the committee in charge of the affair.

Vaudeville Chatter.

GREAT NORTHERN.

Murray K. Hill: "I come from a good family. There were seven of us boys and we all told turned out honest except Bill; Bill became a plumber. Maybe he was a horse thief. I don't exactly remember.

"Brother Frank was educated in college. When he came home father asked him what he had learned in college. Frank said that he had studied for a veterinary surgeon. Father told him to let the veterinary surgeon study for himself. And I—I ran for sheriff once—he was umpiring our baseball game. I ran for the sheriff, but I couldn't catch him. I've done pretty well, though. I married a daughter of one of the first families—one of the first as you come down from Blue Island avenue.

"I love Chicago. It always will hold the first place in my heart. Why, it was the first city I was ever born in. Even if I have suffered all kinds of diseases since I lived here I love Chicago. Why, I've had measles and scarlet fever and gout—that's a swell disease, so's mumps. But the first job I ever had took me out of the city. I got a job with a traveling temperance lecturer. He hired me for the horrible example. Every day he would get me drunk and when I was sufficiently drunk he would stand me up on the platform and point me out as the horrible example. We didn't make any money, though—we didn't make even enough to keep the horrible example in proper condition.

"After that I had to take the booze cure and when I was down there I nearly lost my life. The booze cure buildings caught on fire and one of the old tanks exploded. I don't think those doctors do you any good, though. Why, I knew a doctor who prescribed exercise for a mail carrier and told a motorman that he ought to get a job as a conductor—he said the change would do him good. And then when the baby swallowed four buttons the doctor didn't know what to do, but old grandmother, who didn't know a thing about medicine, just made the baby swallow four button holes and then it was all right.

"But a doctor knows a lot more than a man I saw the other day. He saw another fellow with a greyhound and he asked him how high the dog could jump. The other fellow said he could jump higher than the Masonic temple and after they had made a bet about it he told the first fellow that the Masonic temple couldn't jump at all.

"Last night I was down to the corner saloon and there was one of those champion stingy guys—one of those fellows who every time it comes his turn to buy tells a funny story and thinks that he has done his share. He was telling us that he was a deep sea diver, that he was a whale of a diver. I told him he wasn't a whale. A whale shows himself occasionally; he comes to the surface and blows himself.

"He was a bum. He kept criticising Chicago. I told him that people here were better off than in Mexico City. There they were in danger of getting hit by a bomb all the time. Here even if you did get hit by a bum you wouldn't be hit for more than a dime.

"But all those bums will have to seek cover when the women start to vote. I think a woman ought to have the right to vote. They've got just as much right to hang around the poles as any one. They've as much right to hang around the poles as they have to hang around the Swedes.

"If I ever get elected to any office I'll see that all dogs have licenses. A dog's no better than a saloon or a man going to get married and they have to have licenses. Then after he's married the man leads a dog's life anyway. But I don't think a woman ought to wear a split skirt. Why, just last week I bought a wedding present for my wife—I suppose I ought to have bought it for her before we were married, but I didn't have nerve enough to ask her for the money—and she took that perfectly good wash tub and traded it off for a split skirt."

MAJESTIC.

Emily Darrell and Charley Conway, in "Behind the Scenes." Girl comes out with dog in arms. To orchestra leader: "Isn't she cute? Her name's Oscar."

Her partner, just coming on stage: "Say, the manager told me you'd have to get off. No kind of dogs allowed here."

"You don't mean it? Then how on earth did you ever get by?"

"Why, I get a thousand a week for putting on this act?"

"Sit down—you're tipping the ship!"

"But I do—and I feel so happy!"

"Happy? Well, I feel about as happy over this act as the hind wheel of a hearse."

Chuck Riesner and Henrietta Gores. Girl enters with grip in hand. "Say, this town doesn't look like a spot on the map. When does the next train leave?"

"O, pretty shortly. A week from Tuesday."

"Well, I guess I'll take the grip and keep on going."

"Better not. It's the best way to take the "grip""

Man comes in. Points to scenery. "Say, this is all just a show. Nothing real about it, you know. See that huge hill running up the side. Well, that's no hill—honest it isn't. It's just a big bluff.

"And you see the rolling sea back of it? I might tell you a joke about that. But I'm afraid it's too deep.

"I know another one, too, about a spotlight. Gee, I'd like to tell it to you. But no, I won't. It would just go over your heads."

By Ronald Webster.

Have you ever tried your hand at futurist poetry? Maybe you are the Kipling of this ultra-modern school of poetry without knowing it. Use a vacuum cleaner on your brain—nothing insinuated—get rid of all your former notions of grammar, spelling, and methods of expressing your thoughts and have a try at this newest type of verse. You may be good or bad at it, but you can't tell until you try. "The Tribune" will pay $1 for each futurist poem published. Address Futurist Poetry Editor, "The Sunday Tribune," Chicago.

YOU were taught in kindergarten to speak correctly. You were taught the rudiments of grammar in school and learned the rest" at home. You have been proud of the precise expression of your thoughts. You believe that correct English and sequential thought are necessary to a blameless social life.

You are wrong. It is now necessary to forget your grammar, to forget the rudiments of clear thinking and to evacuate your mind of all conventional preconceptions, if you want to be in the intellectual (there is no other word) swim.

Some time ago a man named Marinetti, son of a wealthy merchant, fell into a ditch full of mud at the termination of what police impolitely call a "joy ride."

"As usual," says Marinetti in describing his evening, "we spent the night in our favorite café, which is attended by the most elegant women. Some one suggested that we take an automobile ride in the suburbs. We whirled over the sleepy streets. Out of town. Deep darkness . . . Moment of falling. We are hurled into an abyss. Ecstacy.

"Then—we are on the bottom of a ditch filled with malodorous dregs. We drown in the mud. Mud covers the face, the body; mud blinds the eyes, fills the mouth.

"Finally we succeed in getting out of the filthy ditch, and we go back to the city. But——

"For a certain time there remained with us the taste of rottenness. We could not get rid of the rotten odor that permeated all pores of our bodies. In the moment of falling into that ditch the idea of futurism came into my head. On the same night before dawn we wrote the entire first manifesto of futurism."

There we have it—futurism. Marinetti believes that we are writing in the past. That is because we are chained to the grammar of our forefathers, to their words and their sequences of ideas. His manifesto urges that we cast off all of the shackles and that our style may be "polychomatic, polymorphous, and polyphonic, that may not only animalize, vegetalize, electrify, and liquefy itself but penetrate the essence and the atomic life of matter."

Marinetti is not the only one. There is a wealthy American woman of Paris whose works have been variously denominated by various persons. She has as yet issued no "manifesto," and so cannot definitely be said to have started a school of poetry. She is Gertrude Stein.

She is at any rate an anarchist of literature. She also has burned all the bridges that lead to the past and has projected herself into the obscurity of the future. We look at her over the waters, bridgeless, of Futurism, and hear indistinctly from a far shore something like this:

She has written a book on Mabel Dodge, just a word picture of Mabel. She has also written a play. Here is part of the play.

"Marsden Hartley.

"Clark which is aweful, clark which is shameful, clark and order.

"A pin is a plump point and pecking and combined and more, much more, is in fine."

There is more of it. That does not even complete the first section.

Before you condemn Miss Stein utterly you should know that she is a doctor of medicine and a doctor of philosophy—a brilliant scholar at Johns Hopkins and at Radcliffe, and a woman who, Henry James thought, would be a great woman.

A friend of hers has given us a few hints of her method of work and her ideals. He says:

"She is impelling language to induce new states of consciousness, and in doing so language becomes with her a creative art rather than a mirror of history. In her impressionistic writing she uses familiar words to create perceptions, conditions, and states of being never quite consciously before experienced. She chooses words from their inherent quality rather than from their accepted meaning.

"Her method of work is deliberate. She always works late at night, after reading several hours to get herself into the mood, and in the silence brings all her will power to bear on the banishing of preconceived impressions. Concentrating on the impressions she has received and which she wishes to transmit, she suspends her selective faculty, waiting for the word or the group of words which will perfectly interpret her meaning to rise from her subconsciousness to the surface of her mind. Then only does she bring her reason to bear on them, weighing and gauging their ability to express her impression."

From her method of work it seems that no impression is to be had from reading the words. They must be read aloud. Try it and see.

"Apple plum carpet steak, seed clam, colored wine, calm seen, cold cream, best shake, potatoo, potato and no no gold work with pet, a green seen is called bake and change sweet is bready, a little piece a little piece please.

"A little piece please. Cane again to the presupposed and ready eucalyptus tree, count out sherry and ripe plates and little corners of a kind of ham. This is use."

Do not with mistaken facetiousness say "What use." Miss Stein is deadly serious. Her defenders say that we must not judge Miss Stein by our standards. We must not forget the Ph. D. and the M. D.

Read over the apple. See if at the third reading it doesn't produce some sort of emotional color pattern. After you have done that eat at a cafeteria, ride downtown in the elevated, read the morning papers, or do anything that most persons do. Then clean out your mind and write. The shorter and more pointed the writings are the more they will be appreciated. You will in any event be placing yourself on a more modern, if not a higher intellectual plane, and if you are adept enough you will make a dollar.

If you do not care for Miss Stein's literary methods try Marinetti. You will probably be able to "let your words at liberty," to "animalize and vegetalize" your style. Never use verbs except in the infinitive. Infinitives are round, according to Mr. Marinetti, and don't hinder the flow of the idea.

"A stream. A bridge. Plus artillery. Plus infantry. Plus trenches. Plus cadavers. Dzang-bah-bakh. Cannon. Kha-kh-kha. Mitrailleuse. Tr-r-r. Sh-sh-sh-sh. Ss-s-s-s-s. Bullets. Chill. Blood. Smoke."

Probably you are not yet up to the times. Other works will, by the hour of going to press, have appeared in the book shops. But it is better that you educate yourself.

Theatrical Notes.

Victor Herbert and Henry Blossom are collaborating on a musical version of the farce, "Our Wives," which in its new form will be named "The Only Girl."

Bide Dudley tells this in the New York Telegraph to illustrate the ingenuity of the American youth: The cigar salesman at a vaudeville house told the doorkeeper a boy would be along with some lunch for him and to let him in. Pretty soon four boys arrived. One carried a sandwich, another a piece of pie, the third a bottle of milk, and the fourth a pickle. The doorkeeper admitted he had a sense of humor and the boys at one and the same time.

A. H. Woods sent Pauline Frederick to Paris to buy the gowns for her part as leading woman in "Innocent," which will open in New York in September. He has just received the bill for the first installment. Counting the customs duties, this first installment will cost Mr. Woods $5,000. And Miss Frederick has just begun to shop. Mr. Woods' office gave permission for this information to be printed.

Frank Sheridan will open in Schenectady, N. Y., tomorrow night in a new playlet, entitled "The Touch of the Child." The skit was written by Leon M. Lion from a story by Tom Gallon, and has been popular in England for four years.

Getting By a Britisher. ∴ By Mme. Y.

LONDON.—[Special Correspondence.—I had intended to indulge in a few brief descriptive paragraphs on the subject of the exercises of conferring honorary degrees at Oxford on Walter Hines Page, American ambassador; Prince Arthur of Saxe-Coburg and Gotha, Richard Strauss and others. I am afraid, however, the entire article will be devoted to the narrative of my adventures in getting in. The exertion and the warlike character of the endeavor remain uppermost in my memory.

Having tried on previous occasions to persuade, argue, and browbeat the English gentleman into my attitude of mind, I feared an unpleasantness when I heard that tickets were necessary—something that the American embassy quite overlooked telling me. Sure enough, when I reached the beautiful stone theater of the university I met at its outer portals the English nation in its most characteristic type of subject.

A short, thick necked, red faced, apoplectic gentleman defended the entrance. He was one of that class who marched up Bunker hill three times and never knew he was licked. He wore a cap and gown and had the politest, most open to reason manner you ever saw. A janitor told me to go to him because he was the most pliable dean on the faculty.

I explained my case in elaborate detail, saying that a great many people of the middle west would wish to learn about what was happening to our ambassador. He replied that I didn't have a ticket. I said yes, that was what I had been telling him. I then began all over again, putting in a few frilly, dressier remarks here and there. He repeated that I had no ticket. I went through with it again and got him to the point of saying that if he got a ticket he would give it to me—but he did not think he would.

I then went across the street, watched him give away three tickets, and came back with the full recitation of my narrative. He listened throughout as if he had never heard it before. When I got to the end he said that he had no authority; that the rules were strict. I asked if I might not see the man who manipulated the authority. He said that he could not spare a policeman to fetch him. There were three present with nothing to do but to watch me. I said I would go to him, but he said I wouldn't. So that point was settled.

All the while we practiced the greatest courtesy toward each other. He said when everybody got in he would see what he could do for me. When everybody got in he shut the big iron doors with himself behind them, and that is how he carried out his word.

If I lived in England there isn't any doubt that I should spend three-fourths of my time in jail. I saw the most righteously grieved editorial in the Times the other morning, saying they could not imagine why they had so many cranks in England—so many people who departed from the normal British type. They deplored particularly the sad, unfeminine attitude of mind developed in their women.

I had not cared much about getting in before and thought that I could with a clear conscience go off to see the haunts of the great men who had touched me. I now made a business of being admitted. There was a gate presided over by another dean who looked just like this one. I went and told him that it remained for England of all the nations to be discourteous to an American woman; that Oxford was the place in England which Americans thought of with the greatest reverence; that, after all, its traditions belonged as much to us as to them, and that England was a decadent nation.

That last was the touch that brought him. If ever you wish the people of England to do your way, tell them they are a decadent nation. It's their one vulnerable spot. They know they are and the very mention of it frightens them to death.

He let me in, but even then I had to get past a million police into the stately, classical auditorium. A charming old gentleman in cap and gown took me in and I asked his name. Whoever should he be but a nephew of Matthew Arnold—of all the English poets the one that I love best! He stood me in a niche designed for a saint, but as we both observed, it fitted a sinner very well. I showed more plainly than anything else in the room, not excepting Dr. Strauss and the Duke of Saxe-Coburg and Gotha. Among those who saw me was the dean who would not let me in. How can I possibly remember about the exercises after this?

By the way, I cannot tell about the thing that I went to describe, which was the bestowal of a degree on the ambassador, because during that ceremony I was engaged in trying to get inside. There were a lot of distinguished people there, including the Duchess of Albany. If I described an English woman's clothes, the paper would be liable for libel damages. Edna Ferber came to town today, looking like a design for THE TRIBUNE fashion page, although she said that in Paris she was a mere rural type. I said for goodness sake tell me what the fashions are. I could sit in London all season and never know. She said she couldn't tell, because she had left yesterday in the morning.

But to confine remarks to Oxford. After the ceremonies I went out to look at the fine, beautiful, old colleges. The Prince of Wales is getting his education there. Some charming people of Oxford took me around. They had never seen his quarters, and we started in to find them. His tutor's name was on a door, and it had not occurred to them that the prince might be on the floor above him. They thought that maybe his name would not be on the door, but I, a newcomer knew better than that. Would English people miss a chance to spread the words his royal highness? Sure enough, there they were above the door. He was away at Henley, and some one tried the latch. It opened! Such a pretty room as it was and so very simple! Unofficial pictures of the king and queen stood in silver frames on a table. And, O, lovers of royalty, there was a bulging soiled clothes bag, emblazoned with a crown and embroidered with H. R. H. The Prince of Wales' laundry.

A chance for every amateur who can rite motion picture plays to win a prize f $50 has been opened by the New York ate Woman Suffrage association. The ld plays, or, rather, "movies," which tarred Dr. Anna Shaw and Miss Jane Addams, have been used so often that they are worn out, and a new one is in demand. Therefore the New York association has decided to make this novel offer. The play must have a careful mixture of plot and propaganda, with widely known suffragists taking the leading parts. Among the writers who have been asked to compete are Irvin Cobb, Wallace Irwin, Rupert Hughes, George Middleton, Alice Brown, and Zona Gale. No amateur will be barred, and every manuscript will be given careful consideration by a committee of judges, with whom authorship will carry no weight, the merit of the play submitted being the only consideration.

S'more about Edwin August—he's gone to New York. Summat happened, we gather, on the coast which didn't please him, so he stored his automobile—and silently stole away.

Motion picture exhibiters, in national convention at Dayton, adopted at least one resolution which will meet with almost universal approval. These men, who depend on public favor for their livelihood, voted to disapprove all films which depict any form of cruelty to animals. Isn't that comforting to know?

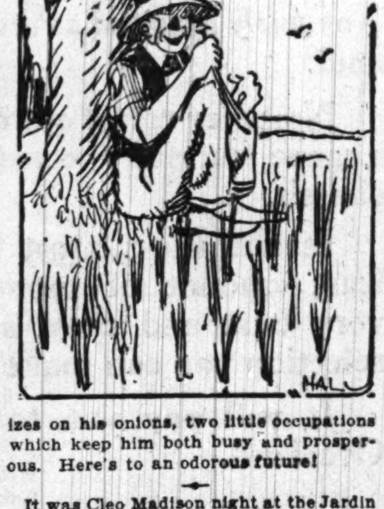
"Tango versus Poker" is a comedy released by the Eclair-Universal on July 19. It portrays that Jones' wife is tango mad, and when she decides to give a tango party he figures he is entitled to have a little poker game with his friends. After she leaves Jones' friends arrive. It being a dry town, Jones takes a baby carriage, in which to get the beer. Mr. Smith's maid takes the baby for an airing, and, meeting a policeman, leaves the carriage alone. While Jones is in a store a mischievous kid changes the carriages, and Jones wheels home what he supposes to be a dozen bottles of beer. Arriving home, Mrs. Smith's maid discovers, instead of the baby, twelve cold bottles, while Jones and his friends are amazed when they lift the carriage hood to find a crying infant.

"It's great to be popular." So says Charles Ray of the Kay Bee. Explanation: A young woman from Wisconsin sent him an oil painting made by herself from a photograph of himself, and he is spending much money on a frame for it.

Would you care less for your favorite film player if you were to learn that he or she was married? Please write and tell us. If you would, why? If not—? Just write as concisely and interestingly as you can on the subject and we'll print the letters if you don't mind.

Myrtle Stedman was enabled to see herself as Saxon in "The Valley of the Moon" at Tally's Broadway theater in Los Angeles last week, and there were few ardent photo fans who did not see this fine Bosworth-Jack London production. Myrtle Stedman has done many fine things, but never anything more convincing or delightful than Saxon. If there is anything more joyous in this world than Myrtle Stedman's smile we do not know of it.

Anybody ever tell you that William Garwood has an onion ranch? Well, he has; and between the times when he is working at the American studios he realizes on his onions, two little occupations which keep him both busy and prosperous. Here's to an odorous future!



It was Cleo Madison night at the Jardin de Danse," New York, last Monday, and the popularity of this young actress was clearly testified by the number of her friends and admirers who attended to make the occasion the howling success it undoubtedly was.

Soliloquize I:

"John Barleycorn" will sure be an upper cut at the liquor dealers. One visit to see it and you are guaranteed to shy at even a claret lemonade.

The principal attraction of "Neptune's Daughter" lies in the scenery. Use your own interpretation, please.

One travels far and learns a lot in one little hour and a half watching and listening to Burton Holmes' "Travelettes."

Don't you wish you were in the "movies" so people could dedicate poetry to you and name their babies after you and all?

Movie actors seem forever on the fly, as well as on the move. One of the latest shifts of interest is that of the clever dark eyed Ethel Grandin and the skillful director, Ray Smallwood, who have left the Imp brigade of the Universal ranks with their destination unannounced.

Miss Grace Cunard, who has figured as heroine in the "Lucille Love" series is also leaving the Universal company. Her plans seem vague, too, wavering between entering vaudeville or becoming the subject of a new series of adventures written around her personality.

Harold Vosburgh

PRESENTING Harold Vosburgh of the Goldin Feature Film company! Yes, it is the same Mr. Vosburgh known long and favorably as the Chicago leading man of the Selig Polyscope company. Recently, however, Mr. Vosburgh was engaged by the other company mentioned to support and be featured with Madam K. Lipzin in one of that Jewish actress' greatest successes, which will be produced in five big reels, and, later, to appear in the same capacity with David Kressler in another five reel production.

Mr. Vosburgh was born in Toronto, Canada. He is a comparatively recent graduate—if that's what you call it—from the legitimate stage, where he has had a long and varied experience and been exceedingly popular. Those who "adored" him as a "legit"—and they are many—speak fondly of the little habit he had of meeting his auditors on the stage after performances, giving them a chance to grasp his hand and gaze into his eyes. Recent plays in which he is well remembered are, "The Turning Point," "The Confession," "Putting It Over," "The Woman" and "The Double Cross" (two titles which to some people are synonymous), and it was during his engagement in the last named that he received from W. N. Selig an offer to enter the ranks of the silent players. For the last nine months, therefore, he has been busy, if "silent," for he has played many leading roles.

"It's a great life!" he declares enthusiastically. "I'm for it!"

"When not working, Mr. Vosburgh plays out of doors. He is fond of all sorts of sports that he can indulge in in the open air. He can ride horse-back; play tennis; row a boat; golf—and even, he says proudly, "climb a tree!" Hooray! Girls, are we for him? One, two, three—now, altogether—!

Answers to Movie Fans. - - By Mae Tinee.

M. H.: Too bad you've had to wait so long, but letters must take their turn, you know. And even now I cannot print what you ask for on account of space. But if you will send a stamped and self-addressed envelope, I'll send you your information instanter. Will that be all right?

Constant Reader: It's in southern California, but I can't give you the exact latitude and longitude. The only way to become experienced in anything is to get experience. Just watching and listening never made an expert of anybody. If I were you, I would pay a visit to the studio nearest my home and have a chat with the studio manager, or head director. He will give you lots of pointers. I can give you some if you'll send me a stamped or self-addressed envelope. The wages aren't anything extra at first.

Matilda D. R.: Your questions are many, but that doesn't matter. I'd be so happy to answer them in the paper if I had the space, but—not having it—I shall have to ask you to send me a stamped and self-addressed envelope. You will be surely satisfied with the result.

W. E. D.: Sorry, but I haven't the space. I'll send you one though if you'll send me a stamped and self-addressed envelope, and be glad to do it. (I mean I'll be glad to do it.)

A. E. G.: Will you take my advice, I wonder, little 10-year-old, and "forget it" for a while? Please!

M. N. B.: Better get the consent of the author of the novel before you attempt selling anything of the kind. I believe you refer to Horace Carpenter.

MRS. C. S. F.: Phillips Smalley wore the coat in the picture "The Leper's Coat." King Baggott did not appear in this picture."

Owing to the number of queries received and the somewhat limited space allowed for answers, it is not always possible to print information as rapidly as the writers desire it, as the letters must be answered in turn. All, however, receive careful attention.

When stamped and addressed envelopes are inclosed, Miss Tinee will be glad to answer personally any letters addressed to her. Address all queries to this department to Mae Tinee in care of this paper.

Questions that have been repeatedly answered will receive a reply only when a stamped and addressed envelope is sent.

Questions considered as ridiculous will not be answered.

Questions regarding relationship will be answered to the best of our ability, but we are not responsible if mistakes are made.

If you are interested in photo-play writing send a stamped and self-addressed envelope to this department for the information you desire.

Sophia G.: I'd go to school a little longer if I were you, dear. You don't know how much that would help toward making you a success if you still desired to enter the "movies" after you were older. From your description I am sure any one would think you pretty. Have them think you brilliant as well. I'll write you a personal letter if you'll send your address.

M. E. V.: Stamped and self-addressed envelope, please!

J. D. B.: They should be typewritten if possible. If not, write with pen and ink, on one side of the page only, numbering each sheet neatly in the upper righthand corner. Stamped and self-addressed envelope, please!

Bobbie: Business of blushing! But I am of a vurry retiring disposition! Yes, you may send the poetry if you like.

W. B. D.: East Fifteenth street and Locust avenue. You're welcome.

MISS GERTRUDE S.: Thomas Santschi is married. Call up the studio nearest your home and ask on what days it is convenient for them to have visitors. No trouble at all. Are you thinking of becoming a "movie" actress?

R. McK.: You can get a sample scenario through this department if you will send a stamped and self-addressed envelope.

C. M. V. A.: Biograph, 807 East One Hundred and Seventy-fifth street, New York City; Famous Players, 213 West Twenty-sixth street, New York City.

Norman S.: I believe a talk with the business manager of the Mutual Film company, 5 South Wabash avenue, Chicago, would be of benefit to you. It's too bad you've had to wait so long for the answer!

Pearl M.: Stamped and self-addressed envelope, please!

R. G. and B. H.: Suppose you ask Mr. Bushman? Address him in care of the Essanay company, 1333 Argyle street, Chicago.

EDWIN S. K.: So you think scenario writing a "demoralizing vagary" and have reached the sad conclusion that "asserted genius" is not appreciated! I'm sorry your experiences have been so unhappy. If you will send a stamped and self-addressed envelope maybe I can help you a little along the road to success. I'd like to, awfully!

Ben F. H.: Yes, indeed, they let you know if they accept your play. You also hear if they do not—provided you inclose a stamped and self-addressed envelope. If you send me one, I'll mail you some information that may be of great assistance to you in your endeavors. Don't mention it!

J. S.: Experience is not always necessary. I don't know, I'm sure. Probably there are, though. Buffalo's a splendid place to come from!

Robert M. S.: Why, of course it is possible for you to write questions to "Right Off the Reel." Perhaps I don't quite understand what you mean. You say you may write once in a while and you hope I will appreciate your letters. Let me assure you right now that I will—fully!

Marion: I'm afraid he is, Marion! Anyhow, you don't mean you love him. You just admire him. Isn't that it? If that's the case, the fact of his marriage need make no difference, need it?

Two Readers: If the actor whose name you mention receives enough votes of course we'll print his picture. And his biography. So possess your souls in patience.

F. B. POPE: Good looks, good sense, and some histrionic ability, I should say. I'd call up the studio manager of the firm you mention, however, and ask him. If an actor is "good enough," I reckon, there is no age limit. Depends on the beginner. I am not certain about the days. The studio manager will tell you that, too, when you ring him up.

KATTY Y.: Alas, Warren Kerrigan answers vurry few letters. Yours, however, might be one of the few—or the few. Why don't you take a fighting chance and see what your luck will be?

INTERESTED: He most certainly was.

The LOVE AFFAIRS of PEGGY

[Copyright: 1914: By The Tribune Company.]

Interested "Peggy" fans are hurtling in advice regarding who they think should be the Peggy of the Screen. It has been suggested that Mary Pickford could play the part to perfection. And the Mignon Anderson adorers are right there with their proofs that no one, nowhere, would make a better "Peggy." We, opening the mail pantingly as it poureth in, find ourselves still in doubt. Keep on suggesting while the suggesting's good!

YOU expect a boy to be a boy, don't you? You don't expect him to be an educator. Who in the world would want to be an educator, and who in the world wants to be educated?

It's a horrible mistaken idea, all of it. Things will never be right until schools are done away with. It will be fitting, of course, to retain the football gang and the track meets and the baseball crew, but all that musty poky book gab is old stuff! old stuff! dear journal of my heart.

The creature about whom I would write eats it alive. He doesn't care whether it's geometry or Latin or Sanskrit or French or chemistry. He's so crazy about getting his brain full that he goes to summer school. I go to summer school, too, dear journal, but not for the same reason. My brain is used to being empty and likes it. It finds its lonesomeness very good company. But the creature is not content with collecting knowledge; he wants to distribute it. By fated chance I happened to be the consumer.

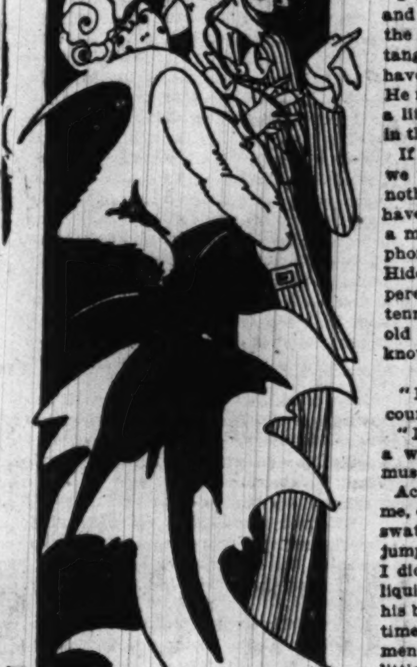
It was a glorious, wonderful, beautiful night and we were walking down the street as lively as a couple of steam rollers. It makes me laugh fit to bust to think of him. He's a tall, long thing with eyeglasses and somehow there is a sissy manner to him that reminds me of a high brow with a spitcurl on it. Excruciatingly comical idea, isn't it? I tried to tell my mother how funny it is, but she couldn't see it. "Trot you," said she, "to the grocery and buy me a nice filet of bird seed. Dicky hungers," which reminds me that old lanky long high brow eats nuts. He lives on them—if mere breathing and learning is living.

Well, dear journal, we were coming down the street and I looked up into the sky and there were a million and forty thousand beautiful stars, all winking eyes at me and laughing and stretching out little golden threads as if to tickle the star that lives next door. I just naturally gasped and wanted to holler. It is so astonishingly lovely to be alive, and the stars sort of bring a sense of appreciation to your mind.

Creature looked up and saw them.

A real boy would have slipped his arm through mine and said something appropriate and proper—not spoony, of course, but apropos to the moment. Even a dull boy could have thought of something. Not high brow. O, no! This is what he delivered:

"The marvels of the universe are very strange, Miss Peggy. Think of the great worlds up there! Some of those stars have been out of existence for years, but we still see their reflections! Millions are there that we cannot see at all. If our world were near one of the big ones, we would be burnt up"—and a lot more tiresome rubbish like that. "Men have gone mad thinking of these stupendous problems," said he.



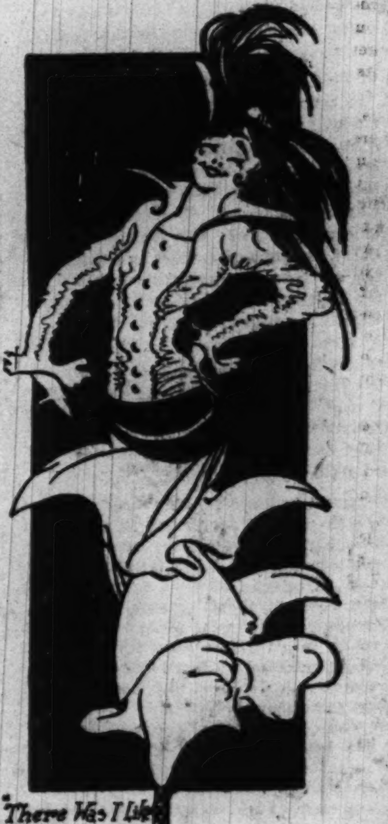
"I Was but a Little Gust of Summer Breeze Fluttering in the Starlight! Aye, Even Less!"

"I didn't know whether he wanted me to applaud him or stand up and recite.

"Yes, teacher," said I, very sweetly. I was trying to be satirical.

I believe that encouraged him. He started out with such a liquid flow of eloquence that his chin perspired. He touched upon psychology, played a bit with the theory of sound, glimmered brightly about Prexy Wilson's policy in Mexico, and finally burst into a hallelujah chorus on the correct pronunciation of the word "literacha!"

Well, school had closed for me at noon that day. I had done my time and I got madder and madder. He was making me look like a little bonehead. Furthermore, it's nothing to me how aloof the stars may be; I don't speak to them anyhow. Erstwhile and anon, why walk with a young lady on a starlit evening if you don't know how to act? What's summer for—for what? There was I wearing my new voile frock which makes me look like the frontispiece of a fashion journal, and old nut eater blatting and clacking on subjects that ought not to be allowed outside the dictionary, they are so tiresome. That such as he should be a human being is beyond belief! That he should wander unchecked and unhindered, scattering dull facts into the ears of helpless summer girls, is almost a crime!



"There Was I Like a Frontispiece of a Fashion Journal"

I chirped up about swimming contests, and I flung out a word about golf being the one and only, and then I spoke of the tango and canoeing, but I might as well have shouted into the ear of the sphinx. He never heard a word. What was I but a little gust of summer breeze fluttering in the starlight? Aye, even less!

If Willum had been walking with me we would have talked rapturously about nothing at all, and the trip home would have been like a toboggan slide down a moonbeam. Instead I listened to the phonographic course in assorted sciences. Hideous memory. Then some imp whispered "Tennis." Very queer people play tennis. You can never tell. Even this old dill pickle of profound confab might know how.

"How about a nice hour on the tennis court tomorrow morning?" I asked.

"I thank you, Miss Peggy. Tennis has a wonderfully excellent effect upon the muscular tissue," etc.

Accept the facts from the victor, what's me, dear journal, for every great truth he swatted my way that night I made him jump the next morning—aye, many times. I did him up and I did him brown. His liquid flow of speech was quite dry, but his brow was flooded. He didn't have any time to give me the exact waist measurement of the moon or to tell me why the little dewdrops drip on the greeny grasses. He was kept pretty lively for about sixty minutes, and at the end of that time he was still a long, tall creature, but only in that one respect did he resemble his former academic personality. O, joy and bliss! One time he chased the ball and fell exhausted upon his knees. I pretended like he was begging for mercy.

We walked home together—I the triumphant heroine and he the drippy vanquished. We stood at the gate.

"Good day," said I. "Good day forever."

I can't abide people who know things. It is so uncomfortable to be with them. You see, there's so much more than all that that I know. But they don't know that.

Heigh-ho!

Balboa vs. Edwin August.

The dove of peace, with one eye all sweeled lop sidedly and feathers plucked from their moorings, is anguishingly aflutter over some of the western camps of motion picture makers looking for a perch to perch. The immediate cause of the black eye is Edwin August, that good looking actor with the perfect nose, and from the Balboa camp comes the loudest wail as to his inhumanity to doves of peace, not to speak of directors and managers and bank balances.

Mr. August, formerly bright star of the Universal constellations, recently betook himself to the Balboa amusement company at Long Beach, Cal., at the rate of $200 a week in exchange for his services as a producer, and actor, and an occasional scenario writer, himself being fond of autherizing his own plays.

Events followed just like this, to quote from the letter of the Balboa people:

"When we discovered that Mr. August had foisted upon us a scenario which he had sold to the Universal Film company as a one reeler and for which he had received extra pay from that firm, we at once dismissed him from our employ, and he retailiated by bringing suit against us for not only the balance of his salary but also claimed that money was due him under a contract which called for him to receive $25 per reel for all scenarios he submitted and produced. Needless to say no such contract ever existed with Mr. August, and we propose to fight the matter to the end."

Besides a vindication of themselves and their position, the letter's object reveals the germ of a combination idea, concluding with this plaintive note:

"It is just such actions as these on the part of certain people employed in the picture business that are injuring the trade. Manufacturing firms seem to have no protection at the present time, and if they dispense with the services of certain people then these people seem to do everything possible to injure their former employers.

"In the case of Mr. August we sustained a heavy loss in putting on the production of 'The Actor,' which, of course, we are unable to put upon the market, as we would be infringing on the rights of the Universal Film company.

"Some steps must be taken by manufacturing firms to protect themselves from not only people in their employ foisting upon them scenarios that belong to other people, but also to stamp out the actions of certain scenario writers who are constantly doing the same thing."

That is why the cinemac dove of peace is all bunged up.

ADJUSTABLE STEERING WHEEL TO GIVE MORE ROOM IN ENTERING OR LEAVING CAR.

Inquiries concerning motorists, motorcyclists, etc., will be answered. Address letters to "High Speed," care of THE CHICAGO SUNDAY TRIBUNE.

[Note. Answers to route queries and descriptions of routes cannot be answered by mail, inasmuch as the information given in reply to an inquiry is intended to serve all motorists. Readers should retain all route information, using a scrapbook for future use. Where some small town is mentioned as desired to be reached, the county should always be stated, and, if possible, the name of the nearest place of importance.]

MOTORISTS going east have suffered through bad stretches of highway from La Porte to South Bend, a distance of about twenty-five miles. Parts of this stretch have been in a miserable condition for years and it probably is the worst bit of highway from Chicago to New York and one of the bad spots on the Lincoln highway.

Now it is to be improved, so that Indiana will have soon an almost perfect stretch of road across the state from the Ohio line near Fort Wayne to the Illinois territory, near Chicago Heights. Less than a month ago St. Joseph county, in which South Bend is located, passed a bond issue providing $19,000 for Lincoln highway improvement. The recent election in Kankakee and Wills townships of La Porte county was carried by a safe margin and provides upward of $80,000 for the building of thirteen miles of Lincoln highway across the county.

As the remainder of the highway between the two cities is already improved, the completion of this thirteen mile section and the section in St. Joseph county will open up a perfect road between South Bend and La Porte. Work will be rushed as soon as the bonds are sold.

Motorists know how the steering wheel inconveniences the driver in getting in or out of a car; he must either climb over the occupant of the adjoining seat or find difficulty in crawling out from under the wheel on the other side. Years ago steering wheels were made to be shifted, so as to give more room for the driver when entering or leaving the seat, and recently this scheme has been adopted by some manufacturers.

The convenience of the shifting wheel has been appreciated evidently, for a manufacturer has brought out a wheel of this type that can be fitted to almost any make of car, so that where the wheel is too close to permit the driver to get in and out readily this can be overcome now, as the device gives the driver an additional eight inches of space between the seat and the wheel, when it is thrown in an upward position.

A motorist who overhauls his own car, or even the most expert repairman, should guard against endeavoring to make too quiet a running motor out of one that is old and has many worn parts. In trying to eliminate noise the worker is apt to set up the pushrods to such a close adjustment as to cause loss of compression through expansion when the motor becomes heated.

It has been known where a mechanic adjusted the pushrods to such a tight fit that when the motor became thoroughly heated and the valve stems and pushrods expanded the valves were not permitted to seat and a severe loss of compression would result, to say nothing of making the motor hard starting and devoid of power.

DEVICE TO AID IN HOLDING PISTON RINGS WHEN REPLACING CYLINDERS.

What a difficult job it is to hold in a piston ring when putting on a cylinder is well known to anybody who has tackled the job, and in the case of an en bloc motor of four or six cylinders is greatly multiplied. An inventor has brought out a clamp to aid in the work. This consists of a flexible woven web strap with a buckle, to which is attached a strip of spring brass, with one end free. The strap and the brass together are wrapped around the piston, the free end of the brass is led under the lap and the strap is then tightened. The rings are clamped in the grooves, flush with the piston walls, and in sliding on the cylinders the brass liner rides into the chamfered portion of the cylinder, entering the rings perfectly. The thickness of the brass prevents it from entering the cylinder.

Even if you have demountable rims and a couple of extra tires it is a good plan to carry a good tire pump and to know that it is in working order. The experience of a Chicago motorist will explain why this is essential. He had four good tires on the four wheels; he carried two spare tires, inflated, as he thought; he was safe for a 500 mile trip. But misfortune came to him in having a casing cut by a broken bottle, and he put on one of the spares. He again met trouble in a blow out, and when he attempted to use the other spare he was surprised to find it with little air—too soft to use. He had no pump, he was way out on a lonely road, and he waited three hours before a motorist came who had a pump and would stop to loan it long enough to permit him to fill the tire with air.

Naturally the plug pump came to his mind, and he did not waste time in adding one to his equipment, although he knew he might never have occasion to use it on the road so long as he carried two extra casings in good condition.

Queries and Answers.

"Recently The Tribune gave the best route from Chicago to La Salle, Ill., or, I should say, to Starved Rock. I put this away, but my youngster managed to lose it for me and I will appreciate it if I can secure another. E. L., Chicago."

Details of the Starved Rock trail were published in The Tribune of July 19. The road is completely marked from Washington boulevard where it ends at Harlem avenue, Oak Park. Go out that boulevard to the end and then follow the signs.

"I am planning a trip by automobile to Yellowstone park and would ask you to advise me what route is to be recommended and what the main points of interest will be. I. M., Huntington, Ind."

Follow the Lincoln highway from Geneva, Ill., on the Fox river, through Dixon and Sterling to Clinton, Ia. The road is then through the Iowa towns of Cedar Rapids, Marshalltown, Ames, Grand Junction, and Denison to Omaha. Then you pass through Kearney, Cheyenne, and Laramie to Rawlins. Here you leave the Lincoln highway and strike off on a good mountain road through Halley, Landen, Fort Washakie, Circle, and Union to Yellowstone park. The Lincoln highway is marked practically all the way and is for the most part good—it is the best route. The Iowa roads are dragged after each rain. There will not be much in the scenic line until the foothills of the Rockies are approached. From Cheyenne on you will be in the mountains and will have scenery galore. Take a camera.

"Will you please give me a detailed description and route from Chicago to Wabash, Ind., by way of Laporte, Plymouth, and Rochester, Ind., and greatly oblige? M. B. S., Chicago."

In The Tribune of July 12 there appeared a detailed route to Hammond, Ind., with map. Proceed straight through Hammond, south, to the end of the road and then turn east on the Ridge road. This passes through Highlands into Hobart. The main road is easy to follow, being through Wheeler, Valparaiso, and Westville to Laporte. Then follow the old road to South Bend. At the latter place go south on what is known as the Michigan road, directly through Plymouth, to Rochester. From here there is a direct road to Peru and then follow the river to Wabash. It is seventy-six miles to Laporte, 103 miles to South Bend, 147 miles to Rochester, 170 miles to Peru, 185 miles to Wabash. You can cut off at Laporte and strike Plymouth direct, but the road is not good and would be almost impassable in wet weather. The South Bend way is longer but easier on car, tires, and passengers.

"Will you please tell me through The Sunday Tribune which streets to take out of Chicago to strike the Lincoln highway to Sterling, Ill.? How many miles is it to Sterling?

"Charles Butler Jr., Chicago."

Go out Jackson and Washington boulevards to the end of the latter at Harlem avenue. The turn one block south to Madison street. Go west in Madison to Fifth avenue, Maywood, and north to St. Charles avenue. Here turn west to the end, then right, and soon left and straight through Elmhurst and Lombard. Keep to the right at the fork just through Lombard. Keep on this road through West Chicago straight into Geneva, which is thirty-seven miles. Here you will come to the Lincoln highway, which is marked all the way to Sterling, which is 118 miles.

"Will you kindly give me the best road between Dubuque, Ia., and Chicago and greatly oblige?

"F. M. Ross, Waterloo, Ia."

Go out Fourth street, crossing the river and passing through Fairplay, Hazel Green, Shullsburg, and Warren to Freeport, which is sixty-eight miles. The road is then straight through Freeport into Rockford, ninety-five miles total. You then follow the road to Cherry Valley, Belvidere, and Marengo to Elgin, another fifty miles, or a total of 145 from Dubuque. Now take Grove street, turning left at the watch factory, up hill and straight ahead through Ontarioville, Bloomingdale, and Addison to Oak Park. Here turn south to Washington boulevard and then straight east to Garfield park. Then turn south on the east side of the park to Jackson boulevard and straight east to the center of the city. It is thirty-eight miles from Elgin to Chicago, making a total of 183 miles from Dubuque.

"Please tell me through the columns of The Tribune who made the fastest lap in the Decoration day race at Indianapolis. A. S. V. P., Davenport, Ia."

So far as known no record was kept of each lap; it has never been given out if known. Thirty cars running 500 miles each would mean 6,000 laps to care for—a big job.

"Yesterday in the performance of my usual Sunday obligations, among the pleasant ones being the perusal of your column, I noted with interest your talk on an alarm device for signaling low pressure on tires. I have for some time been looking around for such a device and fully belileve you are correct in stating that tire maintenance is one of the heaviest expenses for the car owner. Such a device as you outline, if entirely practicable, would certainly seem to point the way toward a considerable saving. I do not know how long you may have known of the precussion type of alarm, but recently a whistling alarm came to my attention. I have seen working models and have tried it out with entire satisfaction. It seems as yet not to have received much attention in Chicago. At any rate your talk on such an article displays the up to dateness of your section, and I am taking this opportunuity of expressing thanks for the many pointers I have received through keeping in touch with you.

"M. J. Peters, Chicago."

"Being a subscriber to The Tribune, I take the liberty of making inquiry as to the best route to take for an automobile trip from Chicago to Minneapolis.

"H. M. K., Batavia, Ill."

If from Batavia, go north to Elgin, then to Rockford by way of Marengo and Belvidere; thence to Madison by way of Beloit; thence to La Crosse by way of Baraboo, and direct from La Crosse to Minneapolis, about 375 miles.

"You recently gave me a route from Kewanee to Peoria instead of from Peoria to Kankakee, as desired, which I would appreciate very much.

"J. L. Harmon, Kankakee, Ill."

In order to avoid taking chances on roads and their conditions it is suggested that you take the road from Peoria to Bloomington, which is about forty-four miles; then take the Chicago road to Dwight, fifty-nine miles; then east straight to Kankakee, thirty miles, a total of 133 miles. Most of this will be over dirt, which is good in dry weather. Some heavy sand will be found for three or four miles before reaching Kankakee.

"Will you please give the best route from Chicago to Milwaukee at the present time? J. C. Schmidt, Chicago."

Sheridan road through Evanston, Wilmette, Winnetka, Highland Park, Lake Forest, Waukegan, Kenosha, and Racine. The road out Milwaukee avenue through Wheeling, Libertyville, Gurnee, Eddy, and then north is good in dry weather, but dusty. There 's little traffic, however. Another good way is from Libertyville through Lake Villa, Antioch, Burlington, Waterford and Mukwonago, although it is considerably longer.

"Will you please give me in The Sunday Tribune the best route to Denver, Colo., and state the condition of the roads, if possible? P. A. Schriver,

"Genoa Junction, Wis."

Go through Maywood, Elmhurst, Lombard, and West Chicago to Geneva, Ill. From here follow the Lincoln highway all the way to Denver. This highway is marked and as much work has been put on the road in all sections it is apt to be in pretty good shape, especially in dry weather.

"I have a 1913 car which gives me no end of tire trouble. It is equipped with 37x4½ inch tires, which are oversize, the original tires being 36x4 inches in size. The tires are straight side, mounted on Baker demountable rims. The trouble seems to be due to pinching, as the trouble is always on the side of the tube next the rim. Last week one tube ripped for a distance of thirty-six inches, making it worthless. As I use extreme care in putting these tires on the rims, making sure the flap is laying straight, I have just about given up. Any information you can give me on this trouble will be much appreciated. (2). I also would like to know if oil in the crank case of all motors becomes black after little use, and, if not, can you give me the reason why it does in my case. A. J., Chicago."

* * *

(1) Why worry about the trouble when you are so near the Baker Rim company and the tire company's service station? Drive downtown, have Mr. Baker himself step in the car, and drive to the tire company, and have Mr. Baker and the tire company's expert settle the cause. You will soon learn if it is your fault. It is impossible to tell without seeing the tires and rims. (2) Yes, oil soon becomes black in a crank case. It is from the natural dirt, exceedingly small deposits from metal worn off and from escaping burned charges, some of which will penetrate the crank case. It is nothing to cause alarm, but, of course, the old oil should be drained once in a while and a new charge added.

Five New Speedways Planned for Next Year.

By Reed L. Parker.

AUTOMOBILE races probably will be held over five new speedway courses in 1915. Plans for the erection of motordromes have reached such a degree of progress at New York, Omaha, Sioux Falls, S. D., Sioux City, Ia., and Chicago that it seems safe to predict a revival of speedway racing next year that heretofore has been unequaled.

At New York it is believed a two mile course of brick or concrete will be erected, the work to begin in the near future, with a view toward a grand opening next spring. Omaha expects to have either a dirt or concrete oval two miles in length, which will be opened with a race for a large purse during the summer of 1915. Sioux Falls intends to build a two mile brick or concrete speedway, some of the money for the construction of which already has been collected. At Sioux City, where one race already has been conducted successfully, an association has been formed and the sale of stock for a permanent structure already has been begun. Tom Cary of Chicago is said to be willing to build a speedway at Hawthorne, and may have it completed this year, providing contractors can guarantee completion in time for a race meeting in the fall.

There is no doubt that the excitement over the possibilities of a big speedway has been caused by the vague rumors from Indianapolis regarding the extraordinary profits that have been gleaned by Carl Fisher and his associates in the Indianapoli sspeedway, to which fully 100,000 persons have been coming yearly for the last four years to see what now is recognized the country's greatest racing classic. At Sioux City they seem to have heard of Mr. Fisher's profits before the other cities and as a consequence built the speedway last year. One successful meeting was held there on July 4. Something over 90,000 persons attended that meeting and the promoters received a profit of a little more than $30,000.

The Sioux City promoters were leagued for the one race only. Now Ernest Schultz, who during the first promotion was secretary of the original association, has organized a stock company for the purpose of taking over the holdings and good will of the original organization for a compensation. In the future Schults and his crowd will conduct races on a strictly business basis, the object being to get the crowds and the money without regard to the advertising of the town of Sioux City or the automobile club.

It will take exactly $100,000 for Mr. Schultz to float his proposition, and it now looks as if he has accomplished the feat of getting that much money together. With this fund the association expects to buy not only the holdings of its former members but also to make some improvements on the track, chief of which will be bricking or concreting of the turns. It is hoped thereby to increase the speed of the track, which already has been shown to be better than eighty miles an hour for short distances and as much as seventy-eight miles an hour for longer trials.

A 400 mile race will be held there some time next year. The aggregate purse will be the same as this year—$25,000. As yet no date has been selected, and none will be set until the date of the Grand Prix in France has been settled, the Sioux City promoters expecting to land some of the foreign drivers who come here yearly for Indianapolis.

* * *

No details have come to Chicago regarding the plans of the Omaha promoters. It has been decided to build a speedway there and offer huge purses. Nothing more definite has been decided on.

Sioux Falls, profiting by the experience of Sioux City, will build a speedway, the work to start, it is said, some time this fall. Plenty of prize money will be offered, it is said, and one need not be surprised if a $25,000 purse is offered.

At New York a more magnificent proposition is under way. It is expected fully $1,000,000 will be spent for a speedway at Brighton Beach. Full details are expected this week. It is said some of the most prominent men in the automobile industry are back of the Gotham project.

That Carl G. Fisher and his associates at Indianapolis are interested has been rumored, although no confirmation of the rumor could be secured here last week.

Announcement of the Chicago plan is expected this week, probably tomorrow. It is understood the Chicago men wish to make a mile and a quarter speedway of boards.

Announcement of the affiliation of Theodore F. MacManus, formerly president of the MacManus company, with the Dunlap-Ward Advertising company of Detroit and Chicago has been made in Chicago business circles. The move is regarded as one of the most important developments in the advertising agency business in some years and is the topic of wide discussion among the local advertising fraternity. Mr. MacManus has a national reputation both as an advertising counselor and as a brilliant writer, and has been notably successful in supervising the advertising campaigns of several of Detroit's largest motor car concerns. His experience embraces practically every phase of advertising and sales promotion. It is understood he brings several large accounts to the Dunlap-Ward company.

The Rudge-Whitworth company of Coventry, England, manufacturer of the Rudge-Whitworth detachable wire wheels, whose license is held by the Standard Roller Bearing company in this country, will offer the following prizes to the cars coming in first and second each day of the Elgin road races to be held by the Chicago Automobile club on Aug. 21-22, provided the cars are equipped with Rudge-Whitworth detachable wire wheels: To the car coming in first, $200; to the car coming in second, $100.

While every owner of an automobile speaks familiarly of Detroit as the "auto center," probably few actually realize what the city means to the motor car industry.

Of the 385,000 motor cars made in the United States last year, 261,800, or 68 per cent, were built in Detroit. For 1914 one factory alone, the Ford, will turn out 250,000 cars, and the other Detroit factories will make 50,000 more.

The Richer Palette.

THE palette of summer is demanding brighter colors; bring yellows and reds, crimson and brown, purple and blue; the evening field must be the image of the evening sky. Where the sun has scorched and dust has been swept in by the hot winds off dirt roads pulverized under heavy wheels there are baked dismals, but where scenes are more fortunate they are not only fresh—they bloom.

Green jerkins take on the joy of gay ribbons. Nature puts a feather in her cap and a bow in her hair.

For summer's palette there must be yellows for golden rod and helianthus, yellow and orange for snap dragon, dark crimson for the sumac, reddish brown for the red top grass, purple for the bergamot, red for the berries of the honey suckle and red for the berries of the wild rose, purple for bee's balm and canary for loosestrife.

When field and thicket have thus been bedizened they reflect the image of the evening sky—patches of bergamot flecked with yellow daisies, a clump of crimson panicled sumac in the fence corner, yellow snap dragon in a gravelly spot, red top grass in the distance, fox tail grass to make a shimmer of soft color, sweet clover white by the road way.

A microscopically attentive colorist has worked out the effect and does not stipulate a point of observation. Make it six inches or six hundred feet. A blade of fox grass held in the hand explains by the minute particularity of its beauty the charm of the far away patch. The perfection of the ensemble is the perfection of each blade.

Hazel nuts have formed in their green husks, the wild cherry is reddening, high bush blackberries are ripening; here in the woods is nightshade and, maybe, a freckled Turk's cap, here's the canary of loosestrife, the white of Queen Anne's lace; there's thistle and dog bane, wild peas and, by the roadway, Joe Pye weed, Culver's root and many simples, asters and, maybe, in protected damp places, the cardinal flower.

The Gardener at Work.

BOWERS of sky blue delphiniums or banks of purple petunias or well arranged masses of scarlet or white perennial phlox, the queens of the meadow, have saved the reputation of many a crafty gardener in July. The dog days are critical periods in the flowering borders, being the between seasons with glorified June and its roses on one hand and the gorgeous autumnal asters on the other.

Delphiniums or larkspurs reflect the deepest azure of the heavens. Nature permits them to thrive as annuals, sowing their own seeds for the graceful plants of feathery foliage, and accepts them as perennials of the enduring sort that persist in living and increasing. Nearly every seedsman advertised a superb new delphinium for 1914. The flower shows will parade the gold medal hybrids, long rich spikes of the quaint blossoms of every lovely shade of blue from the deepest indigo to the dazzling royal, and the Japanese favorite, the rain washed blue. Larkspurs are flowers for the poor as well as the rich, as they will grow under nearly every condition and bloom as if they were thankful for life.

Although the petunia is an annual, its color and fragrance and extravagant flowers make it highly popular. Its trumpets appear in every possible shade of rose and crimson, in magenta, pink, deep purple, striped or mottled, modestly scalloped or elaborately fringed. But even the jasmine and the tuberose have not so exquisite an odor as that exhaled from the crystal throat of the petunia.

Like the phlox, pinks, asters, and larkspurs, petunias are at home in a tin can on the window sill of a tenement, in a window box, a hanging basket, a crowded flower bed, or an aristocratic garden. All these do better when they are not crowded. They should be thinned out, the weakly plants thrown away, and the strong ones encouraged. By pinching off buds and cutting the flowers before seeds form, wreaths of petunias may be had until late in the fall. Splendid, large flowering, fluted and fringed petunias of rare shades will be conspicuous at the flower shows. The Hybrida Nana Compacta family is highly recommended.

No matter how experienced, a gardener cannot always account for peculiar seasons. Both last year and the present season are known as petunia years. This is also a nasturtium year, while last year was not. Sometimes the best of seed does not germinate as expected, and again plants and vines will run to foliage without flowers. Moisture and dryness have a great deal to do with the germination of seeds, and unusual weather conditions may act against the needs of petunias, nasturtiums, and various other annuals. When plants produce leaves at the expense of flowers, pinch off terminal buds. This shocks a plant and it begins to flower. Also look at the soil that it is not too highly fertilized.

The Salpiglossis, called the orchid of the hardy annuals, has been advertising itself in all the florists' windows. It grows easily from seed. Its petunia-like trumpet wears more colors than any single flower known outside its family. One blossom may be painted with the crimson of a damask rose, the purple of a velvet pansy, the pink of apple bloom, a rich brown, a note of emerald, and then veined with liquid gold. A plant in bloom looks like a bouquet of flowers.

Elder bloom, white and red, has been abundant. Both the Sambucus Canadensis, the American elder, and the golden elder as well as the ruddy flowered species of the north and the fancy cut leaf are to be prized in the shrubbery. The berries are ripening now and soon after the robins have carried them away or the housewife has used them for wine or jelly is the right time to prune the shrubs for next year's growth.

The lilac, mock orange, wigelia, Deutzias, and climbing roses may be pruned late in July. Raspberries should be cut back soon after fruiting. Currants should be watched and bugs and caterpillars smoked out or killed with insectide and the bushes trimmed.

Break up the earth around the celery to let in the air. A crusted soil around banked up celery retards its growth.

Women's Clubs Aiding Home Gardening.

By Inez Travers.

THE Illinois Federation of Woman's Clubs and the American Society for Thrift lately coöperated to organize a school of home gardening and canning in Illinois. O. H. Benson of the department of agriculture at Washington was instructor, and free sessions of the school were held at De Kalb and Aurora.

Mrs. Fred L. Hatch is chairman of the educational committee of the Illinois Federation of Woman's Clubs.

The American Society for Thrift, taking Mississippi as an example of what can be done by such a school, considers that it would be a distinct economic advancement for Illinois.

The schools are an outcome of the boys' and girls' clubs formed in the public schools under the auspices of the department of agriculture, which in many states, not including Illinois, provides for an instructor to teach them practical gardening and the preservation of crops. For instance, by a simple process they are taught to care for wind fall apples, which would otherwise go to waste, and to can them in such a way that they will keep indefinitely. The same simple process cares for tomatoes, sweet corn and other vegetables, so that besides having an abundance for the table in a fresh state they can provide good food at little cost for the winter months.

Mississippi's girls' tomato club will have about 500,000 cans of tomatoes to put on the market in the fall, besides providing the members' own tables. One girl earned enough last summer to take her through college. In the year that Mississippi suffered so severely from the weevil it was the canning clubs that saved many families from want.

The American Society for Thrift endeavors to form thrift committees in each city and village in the state for the purpose of bringing before the minds of the people the extreme need in this country of conservation of resources. These committees are formed of such citizens as will be a power locally—a president of a woman's club, several business men, and one or two professional men.

Thrift, as the society understands and intends to inculcate it, has no relation to parsimoniousness; it is the thrift that creates comforts, the thrift that combats the extravagance of poverty through enlightenment.

The society prints literature of an educational value on the subject of thrift, which it distributes free where it will do the greatest good.

The society is financed by voluntary contributions, and since its object is to promote national and individual thrift its work can be summarized in the following from its bulletin:

Urge school gardening to continue through the summer months, pupils to get the profits of their own crops.

Urge that school savings banks be provided for the earnings of pupils rather than for money they can beg from others.

Systematize the investigation of goods that are sold by local merchants and prevent adulteration, short weights, and short measure.

Encourage home gardens by prizes and contests, not alone for flowers and beauty, but best results in growing fresh vegetables for their tables.

Encourage canning of fruits and vegetables by having it systematically taught to the girls in the schools. This has been found the surest way to give the housewives new ideas and better standards.

Encourage buying of homes and the means therefor.

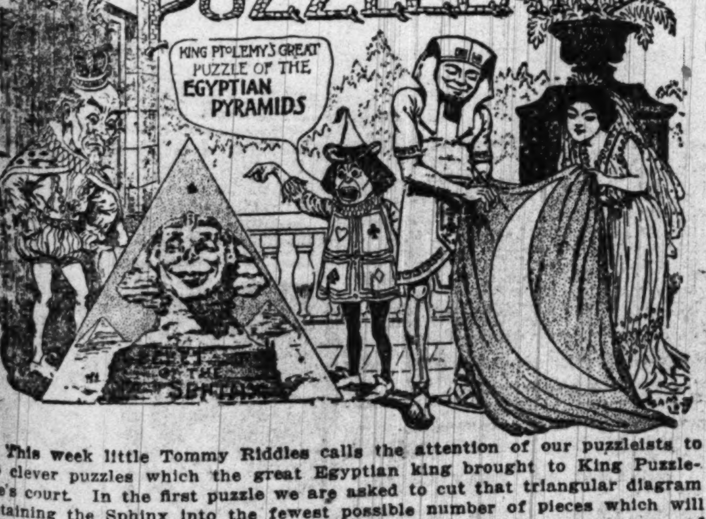
Encourage personal marketing and cash buying; hold meetings of retailers and their customers to illuminate the added cost of hand to mouth, eleventh hour ordering by telephone, unreasonable demands for deliveries, etc.

Aid and encourage saving, vacation funds, and also thrift clubs in big establishments under unquestionable security.

Expose wildcat investment schemes that attempt to exchange lithographed certificates for real money.

Study the merit of coöperative distribution on the Rochdale plan for local conditions and expose "fake" coöperative schemes.

Simon W. Straus is president, and the directors are Mrs. Grace W. Trout, Mrs. Celia P. Woolley, Charles E. Piper, Lyman E. Cooley, W. B. Sloan, Henry K. Brown, Clyde A. Mann, and Miss Winifred Gardner.



PUZZLELAND
KING PTOLEMY'S GREAT PUZZLE OF THE EGYPTIAN PYRAMIDS

This week little Tommy Riddles calls the attention of our puzzleists to two clever puzzles which the great Egyptian king brought to King Puzzlepate's court. In the first puzzle we are asked to cut that triangular diagram containing the Sphinx into the fewest possible number of pieces which will fit together and form a perfect square. Of course there are many ways of performing the feat, but you see the real puzzle lies in discovering the method which requires the least amount of cutting.

In the second scene the Egyptian king is showing the Princess Enigma how to mark the moon on his national ensign with five straight lines which will divide the crescent into the greatest possible number of pieces. Draw five straight lines across the diagram, then count the number of sections your markings have produced.

NEWS of the RELIGIOUS WORLD

CICILIA MEYERS EDNA STROH

By the Rev. W. B. Norton.

"THERE was a man who had two gardens. In one he placed a boy and in the other a girl. He told them to sprinkle the flowers with clean water. One day the boy thought the kind of water made no difference and so he poured dirty water on the flowers, with the result that certain bugs and insects were lodged on them which spoiled their beauty. Then the little girl thought that she would help her flowers and sprinkled them with a powder and closed up the pores of the flowers and they couldn't breathe.

"Boys and girls are God's flowers, the most beautiful in all of his creation. Some girls buy face cream and powder, thinking to make themselves more lovely than they are—a pretty fooolish thing, isn't it?"

The man who was speaking was Dr. Albert M. Wickstrom, a physician; the place where he was speaking was the La Salle Avenue Baptist church, and the children he was addressing were the attendants at the daily vacation Bible school, which meets in the church five days in the week for a term of five weeks.

The La Salle Avenue Baptist school is one of thirty which are in operation in Chicago. They are one of the means used by the welfare workers of the city, the majority of whom are connected with some Christian church, to keep the children from the contamination of the streets, and at the same time keep them happy and teach them the principles of religion, good morals, and good citizenship.

Dr. Wickstrom was telling the children what to eat in the summer time and what to avoid and how cleanliness was conducive to both health and happiness. It was a beauty talk as well as one on good morals.

"Would you like to know what to eat in order to be beautiful" he asked. "The fruits and herbs are the best. There is more food in a banana than there is in a piece of pie. Watermelon has food in it even though it appears to be mostly water."

At this point one small boy tipped too far back in his chair and sprawled on the floor. It was an incident that seemed in harmony with the situation, and after a few titters the moral instruction proceeded.

"How many times a day ought we to eat meat?" Every hand went up. "Once a day," was the unanimous shout. "That's right," the doctor said.

"There is one thing about fruit eating that every one ought to learn," he continued. "In eating apples you wouldn't eat the rotten ones, would you" All agreed that they would not. "Then you must never drink anything that has alcohol in it, for alcohol is the product of decay."

After the general talk the children were formed into classes. The boys went to different rooms, where some of them made patterns in wood with scroll saws. Others wove hammocks. The smaller girls made raffia baskets and the older girls made aprons or blouses. The kindergartners strung colored paper and worked diligently around a table suited to their diminutive sizes.

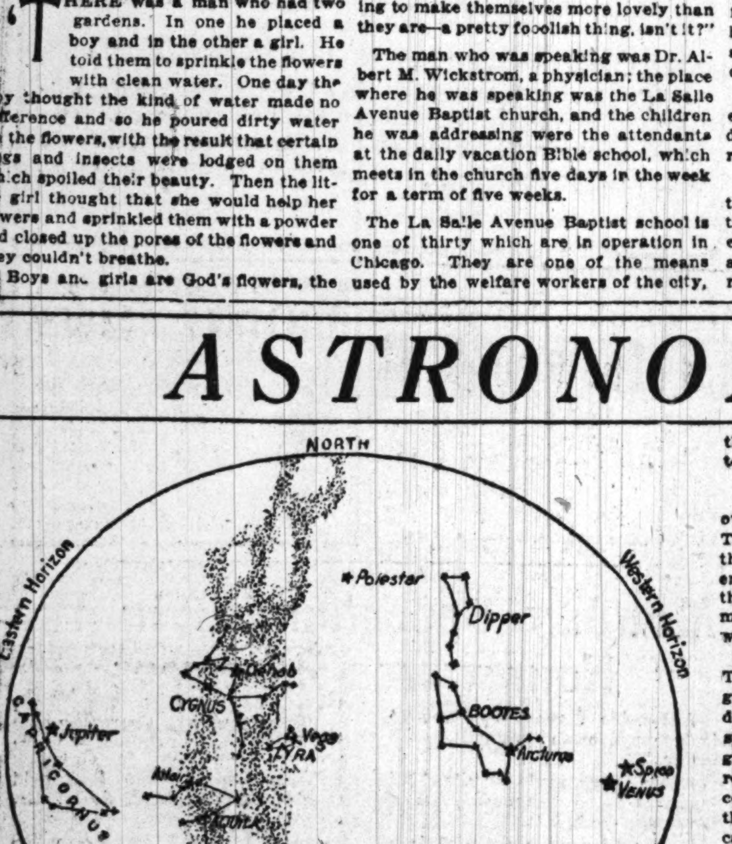
A pinwheel and a windmill which could be made to turn were used as a starting point for a lesson on Christ's stilling the tempest on the sea of Galilee. A lesson in obedience taken from the example of the boy Isaac who obeyed his father, Abraham, was the lesson on that particular day.

The Daily Bible Vacation school originated in New York and the national organization has its headquarters there. It supervises throughout the country about 300 schools, the number increasing each year.

The head of the Chicago schools is John E. Ransom of 6451 Blackstone avenue. He meets with the teachers and supervisors every Monday at the Aiken institute, where difficulties are explained and new methods of instruction and entertainment are devised.

Funds are solicited for the purchase of equipment for schools unable to buy their own. Some schools, like the one in the Lincoln Street Methodist Episcopal church, which received aid at first, now buys their own supplies. Some schools are furnished with teachers who are paid for their time out of the general fund. The Lincoln street school provides its own teaches. Between the schools entirely dependent on aid and the Lincoln street school, which has risen above aid from without, there are schools which receive some help and provide some out of their own resources.

ASTRONOMY.



A number of inquiries have been made regarding the seemingly erroneous directions of the map of the heavens. Star maps reverse the directions of earth maps. They are intended to present at your feet, so to speak, the position of stars over your head. The usual suggestion is to hold the map over your head. Then the west and east of the map correspond with the east and west of your horizon and the stars are shown in their position.

NEXT month the earth meets the Perseids. They may be looked for about the 10th or 11th. The Perseids are meteors which seem to have the radiant point of their shower in the constellation Perseus. In November the earth comes into a swarm of meteors seemingly radiating from the constellation Leo. They are known as Leonids. From Andromeda come the Andromedes. The earth goes into that swarm also in November. In October the Orionids, from Orion, are encountered.

The meteors are the falling or shooting stars which usually bring a cry of discovery from the observer who has caught the flash of one across the heavens. For the most part they revolve in regular orbits and the earth in its course comes into the well known swarms at regular intervals.

When a meteor is seen it has entered the atmospheric envelope of the earth and in the friction of its speed through the atmosphere heat is generated. Sometimes the meteor escapes, touching merely the edge of the atmosphere and passing out. Sometimes it is resolved into dust. Sometimes it lasts to reach the earth's surface. The atmosphere is a protective envelope. Although great swarms of meteors are encountered at fixed times, there is a constant peppering of the earth by these midgets of the heavens, but not many of them that hit the envelope and are headed toward the earth escape dissolution.

There is a record of a meteor weighing over five tons which fell in South America. That was nearly 100 years ago. Many of them are so small that they do not make enough light to be seen. It is estimated that the atmosphere is dense enough 100 miles from the earth to cause the friction which gives the meteor its white heat.

Their composition is stone and iron. They are fragments, possibly, of some great unit torn to pieces, and speculation devises the theory of the solar system springing from the breakup of some great parent. The meteors would represent the small pieces; so, also, the comets. Another theory is that when the moon was volcanic the fragments called meteors were thrown out; another that they have come from the sun, and another that they are fragments from explosions in stars.

By heating a meteor in a laboratory the absorbed gases may be extracted, and from this evidence it is possibl to determine that they were immersed in great heat and under great pressure. They contain hydrogen, carbon, and helium. That would indicate that they came from a sun.

It is frequently observed that more meteors are seen in early morning than in evening. In the evening we see only rear end collisions. The meteor has to run us down. We are then at the back of the earth with regard to its movement along its orbit. In the morning we are in the front, rushing along, and the collisions are head on.

It is of comparative recent date that the swarms were first shown to be encountered periodically. Some years the displays are of extraordinary brilliance. Such extraordinary displays are also periodic, but they do not always make good the promise. They may have their orbit changed by attraction and the earth may not run through the swarm where it is thickest.

About Aug. 10 begin to look for the Perseids. We are about due to enter that shower.

Church Notes.

Because Labor Sunday comes on Sept. 6, so near the close of the vacation season, the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America urges the pastors and churches not to forget to make provision for its proper observance. The subject suggested for presentation from the pulpits of the country is "The Causes of Industrial Warfare." This subject, it is urged, is especially timely in view of the troubles which have arisen in the mining regions of Michigan, Colorado, and West Virginia, the manufacturing centers of Little Falls, N. Y., Paterson, N. J., and Lawrence, Mass. If Sept. 6 should prove to be impracticable as a date for observing the day the request is that as early a Sunday thereafter as is possible be observed.

The Anti-Saloon League of America, through its Lincoln-Lee legion, with headquarters at Westerville, O., plans to make World's Temperance Sunday, Nov. 8, 1914, a big factor in the campaign for national prohibition. To this end it is offering free to all Sunday schools in the United States supplies for an appropriate temperance service on that day. The supplies offered are as follows: The Lincoln-Lee legion program book, a thirty-two page pamphlet containing choice recitations, prose and poetic, and class exercises, a sixteen page song supplement which contains thirty temperance and anti-saloon songs, also scripture and national prohibition responsive services; Lincoln-Lee legion duplicate pledge cards, one for each member of the school; a large national prohibition chart; a Lincoln-Lee legion wall roll; a large picture of Lincoln and Lee; scientific temperance leaflets for free distribution to all who are present.

The editor of the Northwestern Christian Advocate, the Methodist denominational paper published in Chicago, proposes a new organization within the Methodist church to be called "The Sons of the Manse," to be composed of sons of ministers in the denomination. It is asserted, contrary to the opinion sometimes given out with reference to the character of ministers' sons, that in the "Who's Who" the list of ministers' sons is far larger than the sons of any other class. The proposal is not a mere sentimental suggestion but a serious proposal.

The date for the dedication of St. Luke's Protestant Episcopal church, Evanston, has been fixed for St. Luke's day, Oct. 18. The church when completed will be one of the finest churches in the Chicago diocese. The Rev. George Craig Stewart is rector. The auditorium now being completed cost $85,000, but this is only a part of the entire church plant.

The executive committee representing the international Lord's day congress is busy issuing bulletins and seeking the coöperation of ecclesiastical bodies, although the congress will not be held until a year hence. It will meet in San Francisco in July, 1915.

The Rev. Henry C. Minton, president of the national reform association, is now in Europe, where he went to secure coöperation of the various Sabbath organizations on the continent. Thirty-one different organizations in America and in Europe have taken action pledging themselves to the promotion of the congress.

The platform of the congress, which is published in its general outlines, but is not yet quite ready for publication in full, holds "that the weekly rest day has become a civil institution, embodied in law and custom, thus safeguarding the physical, social, economic, and spiritual privileges of all citizens."

The program is being arranged around four aspects of the Sabbath observance question—the religious and moral, the industrial and economic, the hygienic and social, and the legal and governmental.

The headquarters of the executive committee of the congress are in New York. The Rev. William P. Schwartz is chairman, and the Rev. Harry L. Bowlby is secretary. The president of the United States has accepted the position of honorary chairman.

To Mecca by Private Car.

In far off Palestine the officials of the Hadjes railroad have proffered a private car to E. M. Newman, the traveler and lecturer, in order to enable him to make the pilgrimage to Maan in comfort. From Maan Mr. Newman will go by caravan and camp to Petra and Mt. Sinai, to secure material and take the pictures for his coming two lectures on the Holy Land. The Hadjes is the Mohammedan railroad built for pilgrims to Medina and Mecca.

You've convinced yourself that you can't surmount opportunity—hesitation has been your adviser so long that it has magnified ordinary hurdles into seeming barriers.

You've become a "tomorrow man." All your Optimism is for the future—you nestly believe that you will do it the "next time."

So, day by day, you fritter out the rich years—laying schemes and as regularly laying them aside—temporizing—postponing, filled with a sneaking faith in yourself but owed from effort by fear of failure—a man of genuine ability flanked by a funk.

It's your misfortune that you never had a real case of bad ck. It takes a shake-up to make some folks wake up.

You're browbeaten by doubt—like a timid boy in the hands of school bully you won't learn how hard you can hit till genuine rouble pushes you into a tight corner from which there is no scape except by scrapping your way out.

There are no supermen. The margin of difference between umans is really very slight. Most of us belong to one big class, re pretty evenly endowed, and for most intents and purposes qually competent.

But here and there in the broad mass one finds an individual ho has caught the trick of assuring himself that "next week" ill be too late—that it's "now or never"—that a chance, if assed, may prove his last.

"You can go farther---- there's nothing in the road"

They realize that Providence has so many demands on her offices that she may rget to return—so they hasten to help themselves to the best within reach—and while you're picking and choosing and vacillating, one of them is likely to overreach you.

At present you possess so little that you can afford to risk much.

Dwarfs don't fall far.

Up to now you've done nothing to attract attention, and if you do bungle there is no one to see it.

"Most of us are pretty evenly endowed"—

Nonentities are frequently afflicted with an exaggerated ego:—lacking important problems to occupy your mind, you live too much within yourself and over-emphasize the significance of your trivial affairs.

The solemnity and caution with which you weigh every move is ludicrous.

You're an actor who plays in an empty theater, and then searches the news for adverse criticisms of the performance.

Do something. The misplays won't count while you don't. Experiment with experience. You're sadly in need of the practice.

Will feeds on disappointment.

The process of defeat is never so terrifying as the contemplation.

Ambition must anticipate an initial knock-down or two.

The first will prove the worst. After you've recovered your wind and rubbed your sprained pride with common sense, the succeeding ordeals won't bother.

Fighters aren't born—they keep bucking stronger men to acquire education.

Every aspiring pugilist is eager to join the training camp of a champion. It's worth while to get hammered black and blue by the master of an art.

By remembering how it was done, one can with practice become a master, too.

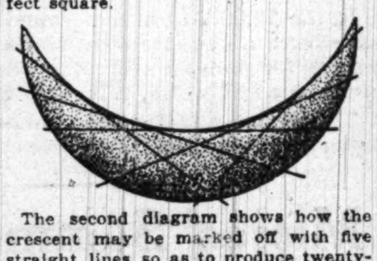
The diagram shows how an equilateral triangle may be cut into four pieces which when rearranged will form a perfect square.



The second diagram shows how the crescent may be marked off with five straight lines so as to produce twenty-one sections.

WASHINGTON SOCIETY.

By Mme. Z.

© HARRIS & EWING. MRS. GEORGE T. MARYE

© HARRIS & EWING. MRS. WILLIAM G. SHARP

Mrs. William G. Sharp is the wife of the congressman from Elyria, O., who has been selected as ambassador to France. Mrs. Sharp will succeed as hostess of the American embassy there Mrs. Myron T. Herrick, also an Ohio woman.

Mrs. George T. Marye will be hostess at the American embassy at St. Petersburg when her husband arrives there and takes up his duties as ambassador. Mrs. Marye, before her marriage, was a Miss Doyle of Ohio, and is a charming and talented woman. This picture of her is a reproduction of a recent oil portrait.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—[Special Correspondence.]—Summer in Washington is usually more or less enlivened by the entertaining of returning diplomats. Our ambassadors and ministers, home on leave, naturally come here to report to the department of state, and while they are here they are naturally much fêted. This year few have come home.

There were the O'Shaughnessys, of course, who were made much of when they came home from Mexico, but they ahve been in New York recently, and visiting in Newport, though they are likely to be summoned to Washington at almost any minute, and there are the Maurice Francis Egans—but they had scarcely reached here from Copenhagen when Dr. Egan was taken sick and hurried to a local hospital for an operation, which rather put a damper on entertaining for them.

So the entertaining has been rather in the line of speeding the parting than of welcoming the coming guest, particularly the Sharps, who are to go to Paris, and the Maryes, who go to Russia; and in a lesser degree, because they are less well known here (and perhaps a little because there is less likelihood of any possible entertainers getting as far as Persia, and wishing they had had the foresight to cultivate the American minister and his wife while they had the chance), the Caldwells, who go to Teheran. The Caldwells are Kansas folk. and though Senator and Mrs. Thompson did their duty by them nobly and Washington was mildly pleased to meet them, still they did not have a madly hilarious time during their brief stay here.

On the other hand, the Maryes and Sharps were knee deep in invitations all the time. Both families have now gone home, the one to California, the other to Ohio, to pack up and prepare for departure to their new posts.

Both were well known in Washington, for the Maryes, though they register from California, have maintained a winter home in Washington for the past nine years, and the Sharps, while they are completely identified with Elyria, O., have also become pretty thoroughly identified with the congressional set here during the years of Mr. Sharp's service as representative.

As it happens, both Mrs. Marye and Mrs. Sharp are pleased with their particular assignments. Mrs. Marye has traveled pretty nearly all over the world, but Russia is one of the few places she has missed, and she is properly grateful to Uncle Sam for filling in that gap in her education. Indeed, she is looking forward with the eagerness of a child to her sojourn in the land of the czar.

She ought to be much in her element as chatelaine of one of Uncle Sam's embassies. She and Mr. Marye were married in Berlin and shortly after their return to America decided to have a home in Washington.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Marye are of good southern stock, she the daughter of a Kentucky father and a Virginia mother, he descendant of an old Huguenot family which settled in Virginia. The fact that he registers from California is due to the fact that his father went out there with the '49ers and made money as the founder of a chain of banks. The Maryes have only one child, little Miss Helen aged 8.

The Sharps, on the other hand, have two daughters and three sons. The elder daughter, Margaret, would probably have made her debut in Washington next season had not this change in her fortune transferred that event to Paris. She is "tickled to tears" at the prospect of a debut at the French capital as the daughter of the American ambassador there. It will be lots more fun than debuting in Washington merely as the daughter of a wealthy congressman, for there are too many of that sort for one more to attract any particular attention. The younger daughter, Miss Effie, is only 11, and it is scarcely likely that she will have the joy of a season as a diplomatic debutante in Paris. The eldest of the boys will go with his father to Paris at the end of the month.

Meanwhile Mrs. Sharp is going to stay in Elyria and get thoroughly rested. She is not likely to join her husband before fall. She is full of plans for entertaining her compatriots as chatelaine of the embassy, but she is not strong. In fact, she is completely done up by the entertaining that has been done for her here in Washington since her husband's appointment was confirmed.

Fortunately both the Sharps and Maryes have ample means to maintain the prestige of their respective embassies. It will be remembered that several to whom the president is said to have offered diplomatic posts refused on the ground that they could not afford them. This was notably true of the McCombs, whom the president was particularly anxious to send to the Paris post.

Mrs. McCombs, by the way, who has recently been visiting her parents, Col. and Mrs. Williams, here in Washington, has gone now; and the Williamses, who have been threatening all spring to open up the Leiter place on the Potomac, but have put it off from week to week as the weather remained cool and the R street home entirely comfortable, have about given up the idea. The colonel expects to leave for Panama about the first of August, where he will join Mr. and Mrs. Leiter and make the trip through the canal with them. The Leiters will touch at San Diego on their homeward way to coal, and there is some talk of sending the children home from there to stay with Mrs. Williams while their parents make the last lap of their journey through the canal and up the Atlantic coast home.

Word from the White House is to the packed and preparations for the departure to Cornish are under way, with no definite date set. Mrs. Wilson has enjoyed the south portico and the flower garden back of the White House during the days of her convalescence. Her progress seems to be slow, but her friends are congratulating the family on the fact that she was able last week to get out for a short drive in one of the White House automobiles.

CHAS. A. STEVENS & BROS.

Goods Purchased at This Sale Cannot Be Returned

IT SEEMS INCREDIBLE, BUT IT IS A FACT, that we have been and are selling more goods in our cramped space on dead old Wabash Avenue han we did this season a year ago in our more spacious quarters with State Street show windows and entrance. This has been brought about by unusual stunts in merchandising, in which this coming week will be even more sensational.

That Final Remnant and Odd Lot Week Opens Tomorrow

Although the merchandise is beautiful and the total quantities large, the assortment of sizes in any particular line is badly broken. You will, however, find an enormous variety in each size at each of the sensational prices. These remnant lots of garments are so choice, fresh and beautiful that when displayed on figures in the department, as they will be this week, it will have the appearance of an attractive summer opening—you will actually see at $15 stunning new garments worth $65, and at $25 garments worth $100. You owe it to yourself to see this display tomorrow.

MANY HIGH GRADE MEN DO NOT THINK

We can secure a position for them in their particular line because they have been unable to find a position for themselves or perhaps have tried other means outside of ourselves, which were naturally therefore fruitless.

The fact that we have placed more than 100,000 High Grade Men satisfactorily during our 11 years "at it," dealing with nearly 15,000 of America's highest grade firms, should be enough evidence for you. West Ravenswood

SELLS ITSELF.

No "boom talk" predictions of future value or of what WILL happen is needed to sell our homesites.

IT IS ONLY NECESSARY TO COME OUT AND SEE THE PROPERTY.

ITS DESIRABILITY AND WORTH IS SELF-APPARENT. THIS "HEALTH SUBURB" IS AS NEAR TO THE IDEAL AS YOU HAVE EVER HOPED TO FIND.

If you have seen other subdivisions and have been disappointed; if you have listened until your head ached to the "future prospects talk," come out today and allow us to drive you through our properties. Let us show you a district with a "present," instead of one with but the POSSIBILITY of a "future."

LOTS 30X125, WITH ALL IMPROVEMENTS IN AND PAID FOR, ARE SELLING AS LOW AS $650. The Ravenswood branch of the N. W. L [Western-av. station] is right at the entrance of the subdivision. You have 5 different means of transportation at your service; you can get to the Loop in 26 minutes. All the comforts of the home lover are yours at West Ravenswood.

If you are tired of city life, if you need a change for your health's sake; if you want to make more money working for yourself than you make slaving for some one else; if you want your own home and an ideal place to raise your children—then investigate the possibilities of immediate cash profit to you in the operation of an egg farm by the St. Helen system—the newest and a most efficient method of making money in the chicken business.

Here is one of the many instances of profits in an egg farm: About ninety miles from Buffalo lives John S. Martin. Two or three years ago Mr. Martin gave up his position as a successful piano salesman so that he could devote his undivided time and attention to the poultry business, but he did not do this until his annual sales of stock and hatching eggs had approached $10,000, and last season his sales for the fiscal year passed the $20,000 mark. Mr. Martin is conducting his operations on five acres of ground.

5 ACRES AND 300 CHICKENS FOR ONLY 33C A DAY.

The small sum of 33c a day is all you need pay on your five acre tract at St. Helen, Mich.—a district now being made famous as a center for poultry culture, located on the Michigan Central R. R.

Every man or woman who purchases a five acre poultry farm at St. Helen will be given free 300 White Leghorn Chickens [250 hens and 50 cockerels].

From the laying hens you begin to take in money the first day you start from the eggs laid that day. Every settler will also be given

A FREE MEMBERSHIP IN ST. HELEN CO-OPERATIVE POULTRY ASSOCIATION.

An organization of poultrymen located at St. Helen. This organization relieves the members of the trouble of marketing and shipping their produce, insuring a ready sale at top prices for the eggs and dressed poultry. The Association has trained poultrymen who will give expert advice to all members and will regularly inspect each member's farm to see that proper care is given to the chickens so as to produce a high average of eggs from the laying hens. This is a big idea and puts an inexperienced man on the same basis as the experienced poultryman.

On a five acre tract you can raise 3,000 chickens, besides vegetables, berries, and fruits enough for your table and to sell. You can keep a few pigs and cows and a horse if you like, and these will all add to your income.

St. Helen is an ideal place to make your home—no hay fever, no asthma there. It's an invigorating climate, summer and winter; a summer resort on beautiful Lake St. Helen—a lake five miles long—full of fish and fine for bathing and boating.

Write for our book or come and let us prove that you are wasting time working for others when you can make more working for yourself.

Farming.

[Private car excursion Tuesday, August 4.]

THINK how much is being printed about farming. The press reflects the thought and opinion of the public. Every well informed person is keen to this topic in its relation to high cost of living.

IT MAKES MILLIONS think to learn from the News that in the last ten years the number of tenant farmers increased twice as fast as the number who farm their own land; to learn from The Tribune that the movement "Forward to the Land" is becoming more difficult on account of rising land values, which doubled in the past ten years; to learn from the Examiner that the higher food prices are partly due to the passing of farm lands into the hands of fewer owners; to learn from the Herald that in the past few years, while population grew one-fifth, beef cattle decreased one-third, so that we now import beef for steaks and roasts from Argentina and Australia.

FARM TENANCY is becoming fastened upon our country. The rapid increase in land values is hastening it. The future of the well to do class lies in the ownership of land. Take this lesson home. What are you building on for your future, for your children's future, for a sure income, for a home of independence for your family?

WITH ALL THE PRESS OF this country, the government itself, and every state appealing for more farmers can't you see that farming is a good business to go into? Fewer fail in it than in any other line. Co-operative stores owned by farmers for selling their produce direct to consumers is a growing movement, full of promise for the elimination of middle men and for securing to the farmer a larger percentage of profit than ever before. The subject of farming has become so important with the government that it is furnishing expert instructors to many districts and expects to eventually cover the entire United States. But first of all you face the problem of securing your land. You want a working plan to do it. I bring the best and surest plan, even to the man of limited means.

TO YOU mechanics, men of all trades, city toilers, you who were brought up on farms, you farm renters, overburdened with excessive rents, I bring a message. There are still some fifty thousand acres ready for your ownership and occupancy in the Swigart Tract in Mason, Manistee, Lake, and Wexford counties, Michigan.

WHEN YOU LEARN that you can buy land in this tract for $10 to $25 per acre on terms of $10 to $50 down and $5 or $10 per month, or about seven years' time, and a large selection at $18 per acre, and a trip of inspection is short [gone only two days] and inexpensive, you ought to join an excursion and investigate.

THE EXTENT OF THE movement to this tract everybody knows who reads my advertisements. I take a private car filled with land and homeseekers to the tract every two weeks, and frequently two cars. You would not wonder at the many that go with me if you knew what I have to offer. There are 251,000 farm renters in Illinois, Indiana, and Iowa who want to secure land of their own.

SIZE UP THE SITUATION. Come and see the crops of rye, oats, vetch, corn, wheat, alfalfa, beans, and potatoes. Talk to the settlers. Judge for yourself the amount of improvement and development going on. Look at orchards being started. Forecast in your own mind what the future has in store for you in this tract, with new towns, good markets, several railroads, steamship lines, good schools, good roads, and electric power dams being built. There are opportunities in this district. Verify my claims as to the advantages of locating in the central part of Michigan's fruit belt, where the climate, moderated by nearness to Lake Michigan, is mild, balmy, and most healthful. Drink the delicious pure water. I will take you in one of my automobiles as many miles as you want to go over the well drained, excellent lay of lands of quickly producing, warm, sandy loam soils, the fertility of which you can judge from the crops now on them.

I WANT TO TELL YOU a great deal more about this district where I lived, and with the upbuilding of which I have been identified for many years. I have published a 72 page booklet, containing 115 views and a thorough description of all the conditions for farming. You ought to have it if you are going to buy land in Michigan or, in fact, anywhere. Send for it or call and also get a large map and see samples of crops on display in my offices. You will be interested in the co-operative side of my proposition—the insurance feature, the corps of farming instructors I maintain on the lands, the demonstration farm, my large orchard, seed supplying arrangement and other features that make for a united and well directed effort for progress in this district, with which I expect to be actively associated for many years to come.

MY NEXT PRIVATE CAR EXCURSION will be Tuesday, August 4, by the P. M. R. R., leaving my offices at 11:30 a. m. Fare $8.50, round trip, to Wellston, rebated on purchase. You get back to Chicago at 7:30 a. m. Thursday or Friday of the same week. Automobiles and guides furnished free. Offices remain open Saturday afternoons and Monday evenings.

REAL ESTATE AUCTION.

DO YOU KNOW THAT WE ARE SELLING houses, apartments, and vacant city property by auction? Do you realize that this is a quick and satisfactory way to dispose of your holdings? You may have a parcel that you have tried to move for a long time and failed. The auction sale draws the buyer to the property. You have the benefit of all competition and sometimes more is obtained than you have been looking for it. Owners used to object to the auction sale because they felt the public considered it a forced sale and were compelled to sell their property, but this prejudice has entirely disappeared and owners and Real Estate Brokers have learned that the modern auction sale is very popular both with buyer and seller, and is adapted for its quick results, legitimate form, and minimum expense. We are making such sales all the time. We sell improved and vacant properties in all parts of the United States and Canada. We have many high class references to refer you to and will be pleased to submit our plans to you without placing you under any obligation to us. CAREY M. JONES & CO., 14 N. Sacramento-blvd., Chicago. Phone Garfield 4918.

A REBUILT CADILLAC

It's a Safe Used Car to Buy.

SPECIAL VALUES NOW

A rebuilt Cadillac is superior to any new car at the same price. They are the truest values on the street. By rebuilt we mean that the cars have been entirely taken apart, each part examined, and if necessary replaced by a new part made at the Cadillac factory; the entire car repainted and refinished like new; all equipment put in first class condition—the whole car, in fact, carefully reconstructed until it is as good as new in every detail.

We offer Cadillacs exclusively, as we do not accept other makes in trade. Consequently we are as interested in the performances of these rebuilt cars as we are in new Cadillacs. In actual service values these cars are worth a great deal more than we ask for them, and we usually have a variety of body styles to select from. See them before you buy.
